Senate Has Jitters, Gets Order to Kill Pension Act

Barkley Demands That Civil Service Committee Take Step, Or He Will

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Majority Leader Barkley pronounced a sentence of sudden death for Congressional pensions yesterday.

He notified the Senate that unless its Civil Service Committee promptly acts on repeal legislation he will take matters into his own hands by attaching a repeal rider to the next suitable bill that comes before the chamber.

Coupled with a growing stampede in both House and Senate to scour the statute books of a provision that has brought the bitterest criticism of Congress in years, Barkley's declaration made virtually certain early removal of Congressional pensions from the newly enacted Civil Service Retirement law.

Senate Has Jitters

Its nerves rubbed raw by a deluge of caustic mail, the Senate reacted to the Kentuckian's pronouncement with a display of verbal wrangling similar to an outbreak of "pension jitters" in the House Wednesday.

"It looks like I opened the sawdust trail, and I never saw it so crowded," commented Barkley at the end of the performance.

In the heat of the combat, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, accused Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, of "endeavoring to smear members of Congress" in the attack Byrd made on the pension provision when the retirement bill passed the Senate several weeks ago.

Misrepresentation Charged

He held Byrd largely responsible for an "implication" he said has gone out to the country that members of Congress could qualify for $4000 yearly pensions after being retired in the 1942 elections.

O'Mahoney charged the Virginian with "mass misrepresentation of the Congress of the United States."

"I have never smeared members of Congress in my life, and I resent the imputation," Byrd shouted, his face scarlet with anger. "I have told the truth about the pension bill, and others have not done so; but I am going to continue to tell the truth."

O'Mahoney referred to a statement by Byrd that a member of Congress who took office in 1915 could receive a life pension of $3193 upon payment of $200. Only two Senators could qualify, he said.

O'Mahoney said he was against pensions for elective officials and would have opposed the provision when it passed the Senate had he not been preoccupied in the fate of his farm amendment to the price-control bill, then in conference.

"Falsifying," Says Byrd

"I do not charge the Senator from Virginia with misstatement," O'Mahoney said, "but I will say that I feel that the Senator could have been more careful in the language he used."

Byrd broke in to say that O'Mahoney was falsifying the Congres-

Million Bibles To Be Distributed Among Soldiers

The Army is preparing to start the distribution among troops of more than a million pocket size Testaments containing a foreword in which President Roosevelt commends reading of the Bible to all who serve in the armed forces.

"Throughout the centuries men of many faiths and of diverse origins have found in the sacred book words of wisdom, counsel and inspiration," the President said.

"It is a fountain of strength and now, as always, an aid in attaining the highest aspirations of the human soul."

Three types of Testaments, one for each of the major religious groups, have been prepared. They are uniformly bound and have the words "Army of the United States" inscribed in gold letters on the front cover.

The Army's chief of chaplains, Brig. Gen. W. R. Arnold, who had charge of preparing and distributing the Testaments, urged in an afterword that the soldiers make acquaintance of their chaplain at their first opportunity, advising "his counsel and advice will guide you in avoiding or o...coming many difficulties."

Surveys Ordered and Approved

President, Senate Act To Put Government On Real War Footing

Tydings Hits Bureaus

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt and the Senate Appropriations Committee moved independently yesterday for surveys of Government personnel that can promptly be channeled into war work.

The Senate Appropriations Committee approved the Tydings resolution for a special Senate inquiry. The President ordered heads of Federal departments and agencies to study personnel requirements with a view to such a shift.

Both moves were in line with The Post editorial recommendations on February 12 that Washington's Government organization be converted to a wartime basis to remove bottlenecks and save men and money.

The Senate Appropriations Committee acted for an independent investigation a few hours after the President announced his order to department chiefs to survey every operational activity to determine what employes may be speedily released for employment in other agencies.

'Overgrown Monstrosity,' Tydings Says

The Tydings resolution, reported to the Senate by Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, was referred to the Audit and Control Committee for approval of a $10,000 appropriation to finance the Senate inquiry.

Tydings said it will be pressed despite the Presidential action, that data gathered for the President will be asked for the committee, and that nonessential activities will necessarily be studied in connection with the personnel shift.

Earlier, in a Senate speech, the Marylander told colleagues:

"This Government is an overgrown monstrosity from top to bottom, an extravagant, wasteful bureaucracy in the midst of this whole war prosecution, and every Senator knows it . . .

"Even now domestic bureaus are multiplying and agencies are being expanded which are remote from conduct of the war effort . . .

"I am talking for the men in the front-line trenches on the Bataan Peninsula today. Thank God they do not know as much about what is going on as I do, or their discouragement would be great, indeed."

Provides Two-Way Senate Approach

His resolution, with the Byrd Joint Committee investigation of nonessential spending, will provide a two-way Senate approach to the problem. The resolution authorizes the Senate Appropriations Committee:

"To make a full and complete investigation of the number of employes in the various executive departments and governmental agencies that can be released from their normal activities and transferred to, or used by, defense agencies, either for temporary periods or for the duration of the war, with a view to expediting and intensifying the war effort, reducing Governmental expenses, and improving the serious situation with respect to housing facilities and office accommodations."

Washington is about to witness a large-scale transfer of Government employes from nondefense agencies to agencies handling war work, the President revealed at his press conference.

It will be a case of moving Federal workers from relatively quiet sectors in governmental Washington to the bustling front line of this world capital's war effort.

There must be speed, he said, to meet the shortage of personnel here, to meet the housing and office space problem, and to avoid as far as possible bringing new employes into the overcrowded National Capital.

The Chief Executive issued an order to the heads of all departments, establishments and agencies of the Federal Government. He reminded them of the extension of the Government work week from 39 to 44 hours, and said that this had greatly augmented the manhours of Federal employment.

As a result of the lengthening of the work week, Mr. Roosevelt said in the order, those agencies which had too few employes to meet the increased work load caused by the defense program have found material relief.

Some Agencies Are Overstaffed

Obviously, he added, those agencies which already were adequately staffed on the basis of the 39-hour week, and which are not now confronted with an increase in work are "overstaffed."

He therefore directed department heads to make a resurvey of their personnel requirements for this year and the next fiscal year.

"It is imperative," the President said, "that this manpower be immediately capitalized and effectively channeled into defense work.

"This means that agency heads must survey every operational activity and determine those employes who may be promptly released for employment in other agencies.

"Particularly in Washington this action must be expedited in order to help meet the shortage in personnel and housing and to avoid as far as possible bringing new employes into the city.

"To the extent that experienced personnel can thus be obtained the housing situation in Washington will be helped and the demand for office

Hollywood Decides It Can't Spare Douglas for OCD Job

Melvyn Douglas and his glamour are essential to the welfare of Hollywood for a while, anyway.

The movie magnates are holding Douglas to his contract despite Civilian Defense Director James M. Landis' request that he be released for full-time work as director of OCD's new arts council.

This was made known at OCD headquarters yesterday while it developed on another sector of the civilian defense front that OCD's division of physical fitness director, John B. Kelly, hopes to obtain Presidential intervention to prevent his agency from being transferred from the OCD to the Federal Security Agency.

Douglas will go to the West Coast some time next week to work on a picture, despite criticism of part-time OCD jobs and Landis' plea to contract-holding film executives.

How long he will be away OCD spokesmen did not know, but it was said he would do organizational work for the council in California, as originally planned before criticism of his appointment to the OCD post gained momentum.

In an effort to rescue his Division of Physical Fitness from what he describes as the "clutches" of Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt, Director Kelly will talk directly with President Roosevelt next week—if a place can be found for him on the crowded White House calendar.

"A brand new department should be set up by the President to take care of this patriotic work without interference," Kelly proclaimed in a statement from Philadelphia, his headquarters. He said he was

Laura Ingalls Nazi Agent, Jury Decides

Flier Held Guilty Of Not Registering; Faces a Top Penalty Of 2 Years in Jail

Laura Ingalls, stunt flier and isolationist, yesterday was found guilty of acting as an unregistered agent of the German Reich by a District Court jury of ten men and two women.

Tight-lipped and unflinching, the doll-faced little aviatrix listened as each juror answered "guilty" when the court asked a poll of their verdict. The jurors had deliberated 80 minutes during which they asked Justice James W. Morris for further legal guidance.

For her failure to register with the State Department as a paid agent of the Germans, Miss Ingalls now faces a possible jail sentence of eight months to two years or a $1000 fine, or both.

Unlucky Day

She was accused of disseminating Nazi propaganda in speeches and in literature, and of seeking to influence acquaintances in conversation—all at the direction of German authorities.

After the verdict she waived the privilege of going to her hotel in custody of a deputy United States marshal to pick up her belongings, and was taken directly to the District Jail to await sentence. Her statement to reporters was brief:

"Well—it's Friday the thirteenth."

Once a favorite daughter of fortune, the aviatrix and erstwhile America First lecturer listened with smoldering eyes to the prosecution's closing arguments. She glared with open anger when Special Assistant to the Attorney General Neil Andrews referred to her as "this charming German agent who thought she was not accountable to any man."

Not much happier, but with bowed head, she heard her defense counsel, James F. Reilly, term her a "fanatic" and "egotist" and "a bit of a crackpot."

Reilly asked her acquittal on the basis of her testimony that she had entered the pay of the Germans in order to conduct a lone counter-espionage campaign as an "international Mata Hari." Describing her as a woman who had long been accustomed to doing things alone, he contended that she was being made the victim of a "witch-hunt"—"a modern Joan of Arc."

Andrews and Assistant Prosecutor Dewey Balch, however, accused her

Hill Says Lawyers Kept Facts From Him

George Hill, secretary of Representative Hamilton Fish and Capitol Hill purchasing agent for a Nazi propaganda machine, complained to the Court of Appeals yesterday that his former lawyers concealed important matters from him in connection with his conviction for perjury.

Meanwhile, Prescott Dennett, who mailed propaganda under Congressional frank, escaped going to jail by posting $1500 bond for his appearance as a witness in the trial of George Sylvester Viereck, German agent.

Singapore's Water Supply Believed Cut; London Fears Nazis May Try to Rule Atlantic

Forcing of Channel Stirs Storm in Britain; Challenge to Her Fleet Is Predicted

By Drew Middleton.
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 13.—The Allies faced a bitter fight for control of the North Atlantic tonight after two German battleships and a heavy cruiser, battered but menacingly afloat, gained the safety of Helgoland after a dash through the English Channel and the North Sea that flouted more than a century of British naval history.

Fears were expressed openly in London that the 26,000-ton Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and the 10,000-ton cruiser Prinz Eugen, now at safe anchor for repair and supply at the end of a 700-mile fighting race from their bomb trap at Brest, would rendezvous with a Nazi Atlantic fleet strong enough "to go wherever it likes—from the Orkneys to Long Island."

Coming on top of the battle of Singapore and the British reverse in Africa, the humbling of British navy and air force in their own waters measurably swelled the roar of criticism of the present cabinet.

Press Rails at Churchill

The full fury of a bitter editorial barrage against the government fell for the first time upon Prime Minister Churchill himself, and some persons thought that Churchill might have heavy going to stay in office.

The News Chronicle said:

"His methods of government must be recast quickly and with a single aim in view—to retrieve as dangerous and humiliating a situation as any that yet confronted us . . .

"Have we not been hypnotized by Mr. Churchill's personality, by the force of his rhetoric, by his hold in the House of Commons. Have we not been drugged by phrases, by reiterated assurances into a frame of mind in which we've lost our grip on realities?"

The Herald remarked "we look pretty foolish" and added the British public "now feels apprehension about the whole strategic direction of the war which no mere formal inquest on past events will remove, however thoroughly conducted."

The Mirror asked: "Is it any longer true to say we trust the prime minister though we do not trust his government?"

"He cannot keep it much longer," it continued, "if he and his loyal friends continue to rely on past services. This war can not be won on gratitude . . ."

Beaverbrook's Paper Dissents

The Daily Sketch said that "Mr. Churchill must be brought by one means or another to a clearer recognition of some essential truths. Does he take too much upon himself? . . . Should he not limit the numbers of his war cabinet and improve its quality?"

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express came to Churchill's defense, declaring that "the horse Churchill is pulling a heavy load up hill. What

Calls for an Offensive

Tydings Demands 'Military, Not Political' Direction of War

Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, urged yesterday that the United States take the offensive and send swift and strong assistance to Gen. Douglas MacArthur "under military and not political" direction.

"This war cannot be won on the defense," he told the Senate. "Japan is inferior in manpower, in productivity, in planes, in weapons and in her navy but she is on the offensive and she is winning."

Tydings, an A. E. F. officer with distinguished service citations in the last war, told the Senate that he was not a military expert but "I know that unless some one begins to speak and to speak courageously this war might be lost."

He said it was pure speculation but he feared "that the admirals and the generals are told what to do rather than themselves telling those under them what should be done.

"I should like to know that the fighting part of the war is being run in accordance with the plans of the Army and the Navy and troops are not being sent somewhere else except by the Army and Navy," he said.

Pressed by Senators Lucas, of Illinois, and Lee, of Oklahoma (Democrats), to be more specific, Tydings said he had confidence in Gen. Marshall, Army chief of staff, and Admiral Stark, chief of naval operations, but would like to know war decisions are "exclusively in the hands of the Army and Navy."

"I do not believe that Gen. Lee, of Oklahoma, or Gen. Roosevelt, of New York, or Gen. Tydings, of Maryland, or Gen. Wallace, of Iowa, are as competent to conduct the military and naval operations of this war as are our military and naval people," he said.

He said he favored "some one who would stand up to the Commander in Chief if he thought a great military or naval error was committed."

The President, he said, ought to

Foe Bombs Own Men

Harassed without rest by Japanese dive bombers, American forces in the Philippines await the full fury of attack the enemy is expected to launch soon down Bataan Peninsula.

Ground action has been limited to the savage infighting of patrol against patrol in the heavy bamboo jungles, a War Department communique said yesterday. It was felt the relative calm on Bataan presages the full and final Japanese effort to end American resistance in the islands.

Two Jap dive bombers, surveying the underbrush for American-Filipino positions, were shot down yesterday by antiaircraft guns. Others, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported, attacked by mistake the 122d Regiment of Gen. Akira Nara's Sixty-fifth Japanese division, creating havoc with bombs and machine-gun fire.

Enemy Reinforced

The probability that present comparative inactivity on Bataan is a lull before an attack in great force was stressed by Gen. MacArthur himself two days ago. Then he reported to the War Department that "movements of hostile reinforcements indicate early resumption of an attack in force against our positions."

There was no mention in yesterday's communique of the duels between Japanese batteries on the southern rim of Manila Bay and the guns of the forts across the bay mouth. At least one attempt to

Blast Kills 3 At D. C. Navy Magazine

Eight Are Injured; Fuse-Loading House Leveled by Explosion

Two men and a woman were killed and eight other persons, including four women, were injured in a rending explosion in a 10-foot-square fuse loading house at the United States Naval Research Laboratory and Magazine at Bellevue, D. C., yesterday.

Five other similar buildings were wrecked by the detonation and their windows and doors blown to bits. It was in these buildings that the eight injured persons were working.

Won't Delay Production

The Navy Department immediately set an investigation in motion. Officials said, however, there was no evidence of sabotage. Rear Admiral George Pettengill of the Potomac River naval command, who headed the investigation, said that production schedules would not be upset.

The dead, who were all in the frame structure when it was blown to bits, are:

James H. Garst, 2125 Annapolis Avenue, Baltimore, Md.

Helen O. Thomas, 3348 Blaine Street Northeast, D. C.

Two of the injured were identified as Charles Krecek, 10 Ocean Green Southwest, and Ewin Blevins, 230 Eleventh Street Southeast. They were taken to Providence Hospital for treatment of lacerations.

Six others, said to have been employed near the fuse house, were injured by flying glass. The house, itself, had been set apart from the other buildings, the Navy Department said.

The six were treated on the premises. They were:

A 'Daily Dozen' for Mileage

12 Simple Rules Which Save Tires and Increase Your Safety

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

The "daily dozen" prescribed for autoists who would get more mileage from their tires along with increased personal safety is given herewith:

1. Maintain recommended or rated air pressure at all times.

2. Whenever you change a tire, check the air pressure after a few miles service.

3. Do not run a tire constantly on the same wheel. Shift your tires from wheel to wheel every 5000 miles at least, to insure even wear.

4. Keep safe tires on all wheels; a blowout destroys a complete tire.

5. Don't take corners at high speed. This practice wears tires faster than anything else.

6. Never slam on your brakes, except to prevent an accident.

7. Have your wheel alignment, front and rear, checked regularly.

8. Give your tires your personal inspection from time to time.

9. Don't drive too fast. High speed heats up tires and hastens deterioration and wear.

10. Start up gently. Do not spin your wheels and grind off rubber.

11. Do not bump into curbs; no tire will withstand such abuse.

12. If your car begins to steer queerly, slow down, pull off the road and inspect your tires carefully and a failure may be prevented.

Apropos Rules 5 and 9, on fast driving—

Last year the Metropolitan Police Department made 11,391 arrests for speeding, a 50 per cent increase over 1940. If this rate of increase is maintained in 1942, one may expect more accidents and more traffic deaths in almost the same proportion.

That the various States recognize the close relationship between speeding and tire waste, not to mention highway crashes, is demonstrated by the fact that most of the 48 have launched or are planning abatement campaigns.

Calling for voluntary or mandatory reductions in rate of speed, the crusades are being accompanied by ample publicity programs empha-

Eagle Pilot From D. C. Takes Tea With Queen at Windsor

A former Washington auto mechanic, C. V. (Pat) Padgett, 25, had tea in London yesterday with Queen Elizabeth and Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose.

Padgett was one of 16 American Eagle Squadron pilots, recently arrived in London, who toured Windsor Castle and then were taken to the Royal Apartments for tea with the Queen.

They told the Associated Press that they spent an hour in conversation with the Queen.

Padgett, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Stewart Padgett, 6602 Clarden Road, Bethesda, Md., was a mechanic for the McKee Auto Sales Co. here when he signed up for the R. A. F. last September. Educational requirements of the United States Air Forces were too stiff for him so he turned to the R. A. F. "to get into action," according to his family.

Already a licensed pilot and part owner of a plane, Padgett was sent to Tulsa, Okla., for further training before leaving for England last December 29. He is a graduate of Hyattsville High School.

Others in the group that visited the Queen identified themselves as R. E. Smith, of Washington; O. A. Noah, of Attica, Iowa; L. Duesing, Normal, Ill.; O. Tronowsky, Glendale, Calif.; B. P. Foe Pays Dearly

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 13.—Under massive air and artillery bombardment, Singapore still held out tonight and a surprisingly optimistic Reuters dispatch filed from the island metropolis in midmorning said positions of the British defenders had been stabilized and that counter-attacks about 7 miles north of the city "have met with some success."

Although later official advices indicated the city's known major water reservoirs were gone or imminently menaced and that the British line still was being slowly beaten back by the overwhelming Japanese force, the Reuters correspondent presented an amazing picture of a population confident that the invaders would be stopped short of their goal.

His dispatch said British counter-attacks were carried out in the Jurong area, about 7 miles to the northwest, and that they were believed to have stabilized the defense positions.

Then, in contrast to the pessimism in London, the Reuters correspondent presented a picture of buoyant residents of the city going about their business as usual, full of hope that the worst was passing and that the hard-pressed defenders would stem the Japanese tide.

Coffee shops and food stalls, he said, opened early and did a brisk business; many large commercial houses opened their doors as usual.

Great demonstrations of enthusiasm were declared touched off by reports of heavy punishment dealt the invader by the British.

The Singapore Free Press, the city's only newspaper still publishing, carried a banner headline on its single sheet with this message from Gov. Sir Shenton Thomas:

"Singapore must stand. It shall stand!"

Foe's Casualties "Terrible"

The invader was suffering terrible casualties from massed British batteries which were throwing shells into the Japanese concentrations at a rate as high as 400 an hour.

Regular communications with the outside remained in British hands, and the British command sent out this calmly-phrased communique telling of a position that seemed ultimately hopeless for the defenders, despite their brilliant delaying action:

"Shelling today has been frequent

Sinking of Two Prized Ships Hits Jap Naval Pride

By the Associated Press

The Navy's announcement that a 17,000-ton ship of the Yawata class was sunk during the raid on Kwajalien Island in the Marshall group apparently means that Japan has only one of these prize ships left, a severe blow to Japanese naval power and national pride.

The Japanese were known to have had three of these ships at the start of the war.

The first—unidentified by name—was sunk by an American submarine, according to a Navy announcement of January 15. No details were ever made public.

Although their published speed was 22½ knots, shipping men knew that they were faster. It also was known that they were designed for rapid conversion into aircraft carriers.

Assault on Jap Islands Described

It Was Just a Preview of What Nipponese May Expect, U. S. Navy Officers Indicate

By the Associated Press

Pearl Harbor, Feb. 13.—A crippling blow at Japanese power in the mid-Pacific—possibly a preview of what Japan itself may expect—was graphically pictured today by naval officers in revealing results of the attack by the Pacific Fleet February 1 of the Gilbert and Marshall Islands.

Striking in a surprise raid at dawn, the naval units and fleet air arm executed their first major offensive to clear the Japanese island bases flanking the United States supply route to Australia and New Zealand.

The attack was conducted over an area of 350 to 400 miles located some 2000 miles from Pearl Harbor. The ships participating had been at sea for at least three weeks and covered 10,000 miles.

Further Forays Promised

Tokyo is but 4000 miles from this base. Already Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, fleet commander, has promised further forays, saying every naval facility would be used to the fullest extent "to safeguard America and to bring the war to the enemy's door."

The operation was commanded by a flying admiral, Vice Admiral William F. Halsey, jr. Admiral Halsey was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for the "brilliant and audacious attacks," the Navy announced, and appropriate awards would be made to other officers and men of the task force.

Capt. Miles B. Browning, Admiral Halsey's chief of staff, was promoted from commander to captain. He took part in the raids and described some of the action in a radio talk today to the United States.

Eleven planes and "a few officers and men" were lost in the operation, Capt. Browning said. The blows dealt the enemy were a satisfactory answer to the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor that started the war, said Browning.

Photographer Tells the Story

The story of the attack was unfolded by Jack Rice, Associated Press photographer who was aboard a participating cruiser.

Here's his story:

The scene—A United States cruiser at sea; the time—just before noon, February 1.

I saw great guns from our ship rake the strongly held Japanese Island of Taroa from one end to the other today. They fought off repeated attacks from the air, hammered belching shore batteries into silence—and right now we are steaming away with not much more damage than could be fixed by a village blacksmith.

And as we stand around now, wolfing ham sandwiches and coffee in the officers' mess, I have a brand new respect for this bunch of veterans and for the determined youngsters who took the hail of steel and shells as if they were in a snowball fight back at school.

One Of Several Operations

Our operation was but one of several in this general area today and, from fragmentary reports now available to us, we are certain the Japanese must have taken a terrific beating.

(It developed later that the island base this force attacked was destroyed.)

It seems that our particular force plowed into the enemy's major hotbed of strength in these atolls and that our baptism of fire was probably the heaviest of the day.

In many instances our other forces apparently met little opposition. But our ships, too, gave far more than they took. Even two score enemy bombers and fighter planes could not keep this force from carrying out its mission of destructive assault.

Through field glasses, Keith Wheeler of the Chicago Times and I saw coast defense guns tossed high into the air by direct hits from our batteries, a tall radio tower crashed to the ground, and palm trees with their roots and dirt flew up like weeds. We could see at least five separate fires.

Men died in this hell of noise today and other men were wounded. But proportionately the loss was unbelievably low.

A Freak of War

By one of those freaks of war, the only pilot lost from this cruiser was the only one who remained on the ship. A bomb fragment got him—just a few hours before, he had beaten me at cribbage.

It was one of those muggy tropical mornings when we were called before daylight to prepare for action. All night long we had known about what the force planned to do and, while we had not lost sleep, it was a welcome if apprehensive moment when we knew the time was at hand.

Advancing steadily toward the previously assigned objective, this cruiser launched observation planes just before dawn—which in the Tropics comes up almost as quickly as turning up a lamp's wick.

They flew toward Taroa Island and, within a few minutes we could see the palm-fringed atoll ourselves. It was 10 miles away. Our presence in these waters apparently was unknown even then, and we drew closer.

Just before 7 o'clock we saw two enemy planes take off from the island. Our antiaircraft suddenly blasted the weird silences with a din which from that moment on seemed almost continuous.

Shore batteries sprang into sharp action and we could see what seemed like dots and dashes of white and orange gunbursts all along the shore. Their aim was bad.

Almost at that minute a squadron of American fighter planes from a carrier far over the horizon swept over the island, bombing and strafing with everything they had. They must have caused plenty of damage, and several fires started even then.

As the fighters shot away from the scene of destruction, our cruiser's huge guns went into predetermined action exactly as scheduled. Their full salvos from time to time lifted me almost clear off the signal bridge deck.

The shore batteries were missing us by thousands of yards and there wasn't much time to worry about things like gunfire anyway.

The enemy was striking back by that time as best they could, after getting caught with their guard down, and here were our first dive-bomb attacks. My ears couldn't even believe themselves in all that hell, with all the guns going.

The navigator remarked dryly, as he plotted the court; "It looks like we stirred up a hornet's nest here."

There was that chilling "whoosh" of huge explosives, ending in a dull ominous "whoomp." Planes were diving in high from several directions.

But for the time being neither bombs nor shore batteries were effective against us. Our cruiser and destroyers were dropping shells onto the island base in a never ending stream.

It was just about this time that one of our destroyers reported submarine contact on the port quarter. I didn't find whether a sub actually was there, but I know the depth charges added to the noise as the ship shuddered from the effects of its own gunfire and the concussion of bombs exploding in the sea not too far away.

The enemy bombers still were not coming closer than 2000 feet because of our antiaircraft.

The bombers were not having a steady target to aim at, either. Our ship was going through astounding maneuvers, changing course constantly, and was shaking like a wet dog under the showers of white hot bomb fragments spraying in from near-hits in the sea.

Dive Bomber Scores

It was more than an hour after the attack had started—and after it had altered direction in the knowledge that the mission was accomplished—that the first and only dive bomber came which really got through to us.

He came in fairly high and released a bomb which shook us up from 50 yards off the starboard side. Then he climbed steeply, turned and roared straight down with the second half of his two-bomb load. Its shattering explosion killed several men and wounded others, but did not hit a vital spot and did no appreciable damage below deck.

Meantime, our antiaircraft blasted at least one attacking plane from the skies. Some others had left and the air was getting clearer. But the rudely awakened enemy sought one last chance.

We saw eight twin-engined bombers take off from the island. They hummed along in a wide "V" formation and probably were 12,000 feet high when they were nearly overhead.

They shot their whole works almost simultaneously—16 of their bigger bombs, probably 500-pounders.

Then Deafening Silence

All 16 crashed just astern and set up such a wall of water that one of our pilots said that from the air it looked like the whole stern of the ship was enveloped in the ocean. But it wasn't. It didn't even get hit. It was one of those split-second maneuvers executed by our skipper that let us live.

There were only a couple of other futile dive bombing tries after that and the engagement was over.

The sudden silence was defeaning. We glanced toward the island but it was out of sight.

We are plowing along steadily now. Men are going about their routine duties, the guns are in order and the decks are cleared of the shell cases.

We don't know where we're going now, but the boys have had a great big bite of the enemy, and they don't care.

Evacuees Hit British Action In Malaya

By the Associated Press

Jersey City, N. J., Feb. 13.—Twenty-eight Americans, the first to arrive from Singapore since the siege, today voiced critical remarks about what they termed the "unbelievable carelessness" in the British defense of Malaya.

Mrs. Harry Benson, a Seventh-Day Adventist missionary, said every American ship reaching Singapore carried planes "but they stayed in their crates at the air field because nobody could put them together. Over Penang the Japs had the skies to themselves." She came home with her husband, another missionary, after 36 years in Japan.

Elliott H. Simpson, secretary of an American rubber importing firm, who was trapped when the British withdrew from Penang, said he would go to Washington to report to the State Department concerning British "negligence."

Didn't Notify Americans

Simpson said "the British ordered the evacuation of British women and children from Penang, but never notified the Americans to leave." United States Consul Robert Streeper was among those not advised, he said.

He and other Americans heard about the withdrawal by accident and managed to flee the city of 42,000 four days after British nationals left, he asserted.

Simpson said Penang, a vital tin and rubber port, was defended by only 500 soldiers—most of them natives. The city had no antiaircraft guns, he said.

Fifth Columnists, he asserted, decorated the streets at night with signs reading "This country belongs to us natives—keep the white men out."

Fears Fall of Empire

Simpson said the British left 7000 tons of rubber and 5000 tons of tin on the docks without an attempt at destruction.

"I saw it all," he declared. "I was the witness of the start of what may be the fall of the British Empire."

Mrs. J. G. Hanna, wife of a former Seattle dentist, who settled in Singapore and remained there for part of the battle, said she saw British troops fleeing from Malaya.

"I don't blame them from fleeing," she asserted. "They had no planes to protect them."

Mrs. Hanna brought her daughter, Carol Ann, 6.

on our forward areas and on Singapore town.

"He (the enemy) has also carried out low-level and dive-bomb attacks on our forward areas and there have been many high-level bombing attacks in the town area by large formations of aircraft.

"Fighting now is taking place about Ang Mo Kio village, MacRitchie reservoir and Pasir Panjang."

The Singapore radio at 10 p. m. (11 a. m. E. W. T.) broadcast its usual news bulletin and added: "There has been no great change in the general line."

Two Miles From City

That line, so far as could be determined upon the available information, was in the form of a rough arc some 5 miles from the center of the city at its most distant point and only about 2 miles from the middle of town at suburban Tanglin, where Japanese troops apparently had flanked and got beyond the main British position as Pasir Panjang to the west.

From Pasir Panjang the line ran slightly northeastward to MacRitchie Reservoir, then to Ang Mo Kio village.

Since fighting was raging at Ang Mo Kio it strongly appeared that Pierce Reservoir, one of the two largest, had fallen to the enemy, as it lies west of the village.

Whether MacRitchie Reservoir was actually in Japanese hands remained unclear; its usefulness to the British was in any case in much doubt.

Tokyo Reports Fighting In Singapore's Suburbs

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcast) Feb. 13 (AP).—Severe hand-to-hand fighting has been raging in northern suburbs of Singapore City since early this morning and Japanese tanks have penetrated British positions at a point slightly more than 2 miles northwest of the city, Domei (Japanese news agency) reported tonight.

The news agency said British artillery was pounding the Japanese from the southern part of the city in a desperate attempt to halt the onrushing Nipponese forces. It said earlier that the Japanese were 2 miles from the heart of the metropolis.

The fighting in hte northern suburbs was described as both "offensive and defensive," indicating that the defenders still were counterattacking.

Filipinos Ride Into Battle Atop Tanks

By Clark Lee
Associated Press Staff Writer

With Gen. MacArthur on Bataan Peninsula, Feb. 12 (Delayed).—Tough, wiry Igorots, their keen-edged bolos slung over their backs, rode the tops of American tanks today helping Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Filipino troops launch a successful counterattack in the hilly terrain on the western flank of the Bataan front.

Despite the heroic resistance of the Igorots, a Japanese push in overwhelming numbers had driven a short wedge into the MacArthur lines. The Igorots, natives of the mountain provinces of Luzon, refused to give an inch. They fought until they were overwhelmed in their foxholes and trenches.

Pushing on over the bodies of the Igorots, the Japanese drove a short distance farther before they were halted by reinforced Filipino units.

Then counterattacks were ordered to straighten the line and, despite the roughness of the country, tanks were sent to lead the infantry.

Igorot volunteers, most of them recruits who had never worn a pair of pants, seen a rifle or even dreamed of such a thing as a tank until called into service, clambered aboard the machines and guided the drivers by signaling against the vehicles' steel sides with their rifle butts.

Where trees grew too close together for the tanks to penetrate, the Igorots jumped down and cleared a path with their bolos.

The tanks overran the Japanese positions, blasting openings for the infantry, which mopped up the Japanese and finished the attack with its lines restraightened.

The more experienced Moros from the southern Philippine Islands also have distinguished themselves in recent fighting, especially in hand-to-hand encounters with bayonet and bolo. They welcome this type of combat.

Many cases have been reported of Moros thrusting one shoulder into an enemy bayonet, holding the bayonet in the wound with the left hand and then dispatching the enemy with bolo or bayonet.

Because of the difficulty of distinguishing Japanese military insignia, Filipino troops claim they already have killed several hundred enemy generals.

Japanese privates first class wear two stars and corporals three, but to the Filipinos two stars mean a major general and three stars a lieutenant general. Hence Filipino detachments frequently report in all seriousness the annihilation of large enemy units consisting solely of generals.

The first English-speaking Japanese soldier captured by MacArthur's forces is 23, a former employe of a Kobe exporting firm which traded with the United States. Like other prisoners, he insists he won't be able to return to Japan after the war because he has "lost face" through capture.

"If you send us back, we will have to commit suicide—that's the Japanese way of thinking, and a foreigner simply can't understand it," he said.

However, all the prisoners eat heartily and show every sign of happiness to be alive. They are pleasant enough—when they don't have their guns.

The English-speaking prisoner said he did not know where he was being sent when he left Japan.

"But I had been reading the papers in the past few months and knew that war between Japan and the United States must come, so I guessed we were on our way to the Philippines," he added.

storm the forts by water was broken up two weeks ago when the assaulting force was shelled at its assembly point.

Attacks on MacArthur's line across Bataan have been light and sporadic since February 2, when an assault along the whole front failed dismally. Piecemeal attacks on both defending flanks have since been thrown back and the American center, apparently well and strongly placed, has been left strictly alone.

Japanese attempts to drive MacArthur's little army of Americans and Filipinos into the sea have been immensely costly to the attackers. However, reinforcements for Gen. Homma's great sprawling force have arrived with regularity from Japan.

In that fact lies the reason military men here foresee that MacArthur eventually will be driven from Bataan unless he can be relieved by a powerful expedition to Luzon or by an important diversion elsewhere, neither of which appears immediately feasible. When the Japanese lose a man or an airplane, another comes in along Japan's strongly protected sea lanes to fill the gap. When MacArthur loses a man, he is lost for good; when two American airplanes shoot down six Japanese and lose one of their own, the six Jap planes are replaced at once, the American plane cannot be replaced.

Thus by what Gen. U. S. Grant termed "mere attrition," the fate of MacArthur's men appears to be sealed whenever the Japanese are willing to pay the tremendous cost of such a victory.

Army Communique No. 105

Text of the War Department's communique issued yesterday as of 9:30 a. m. follows:

"Philippine theater—Aggressive enemy patrol action characterized sporadic fighting in Bataan during the past 24 hours.

"Enemy dive-bombers were active. Two were shot down by our antiaircraft guns. Japanese dive-bombers mistakenly bombed and machine-gunned their own infantry, with heavy casualties. The victims of the erroneous attack were elements of the 112d Japanese regiment of Gen. Akira Nara's Sixty-fifth Division.

"There is nothing to report from other areas."

Mrs. Thomas, 19, was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. James Oliver, 3348 Blaine Street Northeast. Oliver is an employe of Naylor's Seafood Restaurant, Tenth Street and Maine Avenue Southwest. Mrs. Thomas had been employed at the Research Laboratory for about a month, according to her father.

Her mother tearfully told a reporter last night that the only reason her daughter had taken the job was to divert her mind from the constant thoughts of the baby she had lost in birth a short time ago.

The research station is along the river and near the Army's Bolling Field. Immediately all entrances to the already wired-off vicinity of the explosion were closed. Naval officers hurried back and forth through the gate, which was guarded by Marines with bayoneted rifles, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald was passed through along with investigating Metropolitan Police and some ten pieces of fire fighting apparatus. The Marine guards siezed the cameras of newspaper photographers, returning the equipment almost at once after making examinations.

First official intimation of the tragedy came with the pulling of a fire box at the magazine. But no smoke arose over the bottom land and persons who crowded to the closed gate could not, by looking across the field to where the frame fuse house had stood, have known that anything amiss had occurred.

Airport Windows Jarred

The explosion, however, had jarred the windows in the office of the manager of the National Airport, across the river. Planes there were not damaged. Alexandria police said the jarring sound came clearly but no one that distant noticed any flame or smoke.

Records showed that the last serious explosion at the plant occurred on December 31, 1931. One man was killed and another injured then.

A naval worker coming from the enclosure said the blast was so strong it shattered window panes in nearby buildings and in the magazine itself threw workers to the floor.

"I was holding a pump in my hand and it blew the pump across the room and knocked me down," he related.

Mrs. Alice Pates, an employe at the Home for the Aged, about two miles from the explosion, said the institution was jarred.

It sounded, she said, "as though it was just out in the yard. But I made no immediate investigation," she said, "having been told not to go to windows when bombings occurred."

China Pours Fresh Troops Into Burma

Veterans of Long Experience Fighting Japs Join Defenders

On the China-Burma Border, Feb. 13 (AP).—Fresh Chinese troops poured into Burma today to join others already aiding the British defenders against the Japanese. Thousands more are on the way.

Well-equipped veterans of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's original army, they are some of the best China can put into the field. All have had long fighting experience against the Japanese.

The soldiers marched several hundred miles to the border, then were rushed by truck into Burma.

They have been greeted by enthusiastic crowds cheering for "Chiang, King George and Roosevelt."

The troops pouring into Burma today gave added point to the current trip of Chiang Kai-shek to India, where he is conferring with government and military leaders on throwing the vast man power of the two countries against Japan.

More Planes Arrive For Burma Defenders

Chungking, Feb. 13 (U.P.).—Heavy bombers, including flying fortresses, and more fighter planes, have reached the American volunteer fliers in Burma, it was revealed today.

The R. A. F. in Burma, with which the Americans lent by China have been cooperating, also has been reinforced by transfers from the Middle East, it was understood, assuring the area of much stronger aerial defense than in Malaya or the Philippines.

Japs Renew Attack On Salween Line

Rangoon, Feb. 13 (AP).—A second strong Japanese attempt to smash through the British-held Salween River line at Paan was under way tonight, with fierce fighting reported in a communique which said results of the battle still were obscure.

The Japanese, fighting to widen a footing on the west bank of the broad stream, massed their forces and struck out in their second push barely 24 hours after their first attempt collapsed before a British and Indian bayonet counterattack.

"Further south," the British war report said, "the situation is quiet at the moment."

That is the sector where the Japanese were stopped, at least temporarily, after crossing the estuary of the Salween from Moulmein to Martaban, 30 miles south of Paan.

Heavy Fighting Breaks Out in Shantung

Chungking, China, Feb. 13 (AP).—Heavy fighting has broken out between Chinese and Japanese forces in the south of Shantung province in North China, the Chinese announced in a war communique tonight.

The fighting is taking place chiefly along the main highway which runs southwest from the important port of Tsingtao after circling north of the Bay of Kiao-chau.

The communique stated that Japanese forces stationed at Ishui, Fehsien and Ankui are launching attacks against Chinese positions in the vicinity of this main highway. These three cities lie in a line along the highway running through the heart of the province.

From Ishui the Japanese were said to be striking northwestward in several columns. From Ankui, which lies 65 miles northeast of Ishui, they were advancing southwestward, and from Fehsien, 45 miles southeast of Ishui, the Japanese were moving still further southeastward.

Palembang Next?

Japanese Eye Oil Center On Sumatra

By the United Press

Batavia (Saturday), Feb. 14.—Large formations of Japanese bombing and reconnaissance planes have flown over the Palembang area in the last several days, apparently singling out that important oil center in southern Sumatra as the next objective of the Japanese sweep into the heart of the Indies, it was announced today.

The Japanese flights seemed to be carrying out the now familiar strategy of reconnaissance for the next task before cleaning up current operations, since Singapore, the logical jumping-off place for an invasion of Sumatra, was still resisting.

A Japanese drive on Palembang, just inland from the southeastern Sumatra coast and only 300 miles from Batavia, would parallel the offensive in southern Celebes which has carried almost to Macassar, 500 miles from the eastern end of Java.

Meanwhile Dutch troops have burned the harbor area of Macassar, capital of Celebes and "Rotterdam of the Indies," to prevent its facilities from being used by Japanese invaders bearing down on the city from three directions.

The docks, over which 500 million dollars worth of tropical island exports moved in a year's time, were reported still in flames as late as last night.

(The Tokyo radio broadcast a communique claiming that Macassar was occupied by Japanese marines Monday.)

"The enemy will not find anything of use to him," a communique said, conceding Macassar's loss.

Official reports from Macassar to the Aneta News Agency contradicted earlier announcements of a Japanese landing at Balangnipa, on the Gulf of Boni east of Macassar, but other landing parties were reported driving on the capital city from the north, south and east.

Macassar has been the chief distribution center for the Netherlands Indies' imports from the rest of the world, and a concentration point for exports of coffee, kapok, copra, maize, spices, oil and numerous other products that make up the islands' riches. It had direct steamer communications with most leading ports of the world and with all ports of the Indies archipelago. Its loss was a blow directly at the heart of the islands.

Authorities said there was no indication that the defenders of Bandjermasin, Dutch Borneo capital, only 500 miles from the naval base of Soerabaya, had given up the fight, although the Tokyo radio claimed that city had fallen. At last reports, the Dutch were still fighting on Amboina Island, on which the Indies' second most important naval base lies, but the invaders were ashore there in force.

The President's Day

By International News Service

BRACED: A good night's sleep, and three cups of coffee found the President well braced for a long day's grind. A call to Uncle Fred Delano gave him last-minute instructions and wished him well on his trouble-shooting mission in Michigan, where he must untangle the incredible snarl over housing shortage at the Willow Creek bomber plant in Ypsilanti, where 75,000 to 100,000 men will soon be employed.

DEFENSE: At his conference with the press, Mr. Roosevelt was voluble, turkey-talking and frequently tempted to drop a dash of acid on his smiling comments and answers. Critics received a sharp crack on the knuckles as the President said to the "cut-everything" boys that the Nation and its people must still be served, war or no.

BURMA LIFELINE: Owen Lattimore, American political adviser to Chiang Kai-shek came in briskly, got down to facts and cases—chief among which was that the Burma Road must be kept open.

BELLICOSE ALASKA: Gov. Ernest Gruening of Alaska followed, to tell the President that up where he comes from they are thinking in terms of offensive warfare, need more of everything.

COUNCIL OF WAR: The indomitable Dutch, whose appointments at the White House are becoming more and more frequent, held down the midmorning spot on the schedule.

REVENGE: George H. Earle, of the diplomatic top fighters, blew in, and to a somewhat startled Mr. Roosevelt the former Minister to Bulgaria and one-time Governor of Pennsylvania broke the news that he was joining the Navy immediately "to get a crack at those fellows (the Nazis, who made life miserable in Sofia."

POLITICS: The rare pinch of politics was added to the day's pot-pourri at noon by Senator William H. Smathers, New Jersey Democrat, to talk over New Jersey politics and assure the boss he will win the impending elections in a walk—Attorney General Biddle sat in on part of the powwow for reasons "more social than political."

COUNTERATTACK: After the Cabinet meeting, the President went back to his map-filled office for some heavy concentration on war strategy and a big try at getting some small, nagging detail out of the way. Last night Mr. Roosevelt, among other things, started drafting the fireside talk he will deliver to the Nation on the 23d to allay some "scurrilous rumors" on the state of the war and the country.

Reds Make Changes in U. S. Planes

By Walter Kerr

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Moscow, Feb. 13.—Senior Lieut. Stepan Grigorivich Ridny, a 23-year-old pilot who has flown an American-built pursuit plane since September, told me today that Soviet mechanics had made a number of changes in the plane in order to adapt it to flying conditions in this country.

Ridny's squadron, all equipped with Curtiss P-40's, downed 19 German planes and lost only three or four. Of these, Ridny shot down three alone and four others with help. The plane, though built in 1940, is of 1938 design.

One of the early changes made was the installation of a radio set to replace the set in the plane when it was delivered. The Soviet type radio, according to Ridny, occupied a smaller space. The Russians also removed the antenna which came with the plane and which ran from the tail to the wing tips, for in combat it was revealed that the antenna wire endangered the pilot's life when he bailed out. The Soviet antenna wire runs from the stabilizers to the fuselage behind the pilot's back.

Changed Oxygen Equipment

Another change was the removal of existing oxygen equipment and the installation of the Russian type, which Ridny said operates automatically, feeding oxygen whenever required. Experiments were made in an effort to install skis, but failed because of the existing type of folding under-carriage. The American under-carriage folds up in a circular motion, while the Russian-type wheels fold inward in a straight motion.

Ridny now is one of the best-known pilots in this country. He received the decoration of the Order of Lenin and also the title of hero of the Soviet Union.

Ridny told me that two American lieutenants who came to Russia demonstrated the American planes to the Russian pilots, who delivered them to Ridny's field. On the first day of their arrival they showed him and the other of his squadron some of the details, and on the second day he was flying a P-40.

Red, Nazi Planes Faster

The Russians also found that the machine-gun belts in the American machines did not include tracer bullets, so in the early weeks they had to fit Russian tracers into the belts, which was possible with a minor adjustment, for the American and Soviet cartridges are of the same caliber. Later shipments included tracers.

On the whole, Ridny said, the P-40 is not as fast as the Russian Mig 3, and not as fast as the German Messerschmitt. However, the P-40 is highly maneuverable. He was speaking, however, only of the type plane he flies, which is of 1938 design. Later models have since arrived for other squadrons.

Province First Nazis Overran; 7 Enemy Ships Sunk in Arctic

By Eddy Gilmore

Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Feb. 13.—Knifing through German lines for the deepest and most significant advance yet of the Red army's winter offensive, Russian ski troops have entered White Russia, on the old frontier with Poland, and Soviet submarines have destroyed seven more German warships in Arctic waters, war front dispatches reported tonight.

News of these successes in the north and west were accompanied by accounts of an uninterrupted Soviet drive in the south, where numerous more villages were liberated and in the Crimea, where Russian marines routed the Germans from a height dominating the Crimean naval base of Sevastopol.

The regular midnight communique said merely of the day's operations that "our troops continued to advance, overcoming German resistance," and said 16 Nazi planes were shot down to seven Soviet losses.

On the southwestern front one Red unit was reported to have beaten off two German counterattacks, capturing 15 blockhouses and killing 150 Nazis.

The point of entry into White Russia was not disclosed, but it could have been achieved by advance units thrusting ahead of strong Soviet forces operating both above and below Smolensk, threatened key German base on the Dnieper 230 miles west of Moscow.

Indications were that it was patrol action on a large scale, aimed at destroying the network of communications being used by the Germans in White Russia. This is a republic of the U. S. S. R. and, with the Ukraine, was the scene of Adolf Hitler's first big gains in his invasion of the Soviet Union.

Soviet spearheads were operating from toropets, about 65 miles above the northern tip of White Russia, and other Red Army forces were operating in the Kirov area, 80 miles from its eastern border, according to official accounts before the Russians ceased announcement of specific gains in their daily communiques.

In far northern waters, the Russians said submarines of the Red northern fleet pounced on a German convoy, sinking five transports, a tanker and a trawler bearing reinforcements to Nazi forces holed up on the Murmansk front and the Rybachi Peninsula.

On the nothern land front the Russians acknowledged that snowstorms were hindering mass operations but said raiding was continuing by night against German-occupied villages.

From Leningrad came word that Soviet troops and supplies were pouring into the second Soviet city and the army newspaper Red Star commented tersely: "The front is becoming more and more distant from the city."

One Leningrad dispatch said roads leading into the city "are the most animated in the country."

Volunteers Called For Red Cross

An appeal for volunteers with qualifications making them eligible to serve on subcommittees of the disaster preparedness and relief committee of the Bethesda, Md., branch, Montgomery County Chapter, American Red Cross, was made yesterday by Dr. G. B. Clendenin, chairman of the project.

All persons living in the Bethesda area who consider themselves qualified are requested to telephone headquarters, Wisconsin 2528, stating their present profession or business and any special qualifications. Dr. Clendenin will then communicate with the applicants.

Flashy License Plates Banned

State officials, who find annual release from drabness by excursions into flamboyancy on license plates, were dealt a cruel blow by the War Production Board yesterday. In a fashion forecast for next year's tags, the WPB called for a down to earth policy on pigments.

Next year's auto plates, it was announced, will probably be limited to black and white, and "domestic earth colors," such as red oxides, ocher, umber, sienna and a small amount of iron blue.

Chrome yellow is out, which means that yellow traffic markings on streets and highways will be replaced with white paints of a high reflective value.

Ocean Dotted With Nazis After Air-Sea Battle

SUBMARINE CREW AWAITS RESCUE—Officers and crew members of a German U-boat bob about the waves somewhere in the Atlantic after abandoning their submarine, destroyed in five-day battle between U-boats and British bombers, cruisers and destroyers. BATTLE, from Page 1.

do we do to that horse? Beat him with sticks? Or get behind the wagon and give him a hand?"

Almost Suicidal Attack

The battle, involving hundreds of planes and warships of varied sizes, was broken off after an almost suicidal attack by British destroyers off the mouth of the Netherlands' Scheldt. These destroyers pierced the strong screen of the big Nazi warships and launched their torpedoes at less than 5000 yards; then escaped without the loss of a ship.

The details of this assault provided almost the sole comfort tonight for the man on the street who realizes that a second-rate German navy has turned the English Channel into a highway for Nazi ships. He knows also that Britain must now summon battleships, cruisers and destroyers to match the battle fleet which will be flying the Nazi design in the north and he wants to know why it could happen.

He was told today that the German squadron and its destroyers and mine-sweepers steamed for three hours in misty daylight yesterday before it was sighted and was almost under the noses of Dover's cross-Channel guns when it finally was discovered.

Weather Aided Germans

Tonight the official answer to this from the air ministry news service was that the Germans would not have got through the Channel at all had it not have been for thick weather which was "like a vast and persistent smokescreen." Sometimes the statement said, there were three distinct layers of cloud screening the flotilla.

At the same time the air ministry added the information that a "very powerful force of bombers of all types," including four-motored Halifaxes and Manchesters, participated in the attack on the German warships.

When last seen in the North Sea the German heavy ships were making for base at 20 knots.

Their actual speed through the Strait of Dover yesterday, beneath a vast canopy of at least 200 Nazi fighter planes, was 28 to 30 knots, for they made no attempt to match the slower rate of their escort of smaller warships.

Grand Inquest Demanded

Shocked apprehension lest Allied control of the North Atlantic would be ended for a dangerous period by union of these three ships with other powerful German units was general in London. These fears were matched by indignant demands in the press for a grand inquest into why British air power, despite the loss of 42 planes, could not with naval support, kill the Nazi squadron in the narrow waters beneath the white cliffs of Dover.

Certain informed civilian air sources ascribed the failure of the R. A. F. and fleet air arm to duplicate the Japanese Malayan success against the Prince of Wales and Repulse to the fact that the R. A. F. has a long-standing prejudice against use of dive bombers. Others said the effective German fighter support over the squadron was the real reason the Nazi men of war eluded destruction by the British bomber and torpedo planes.

Big Nazi Fleet Feared

It was believed here that the Germans now could throw a battle fleet of six heavy ships and a strong protective screen into the Battle of the Atlantic at a moment when the British and United States fleets are heavily involved in Mediterranean and Pacific, and that this would be a superior force for a matter of weeks.

Such a battle force, which might include the battleship Tirpitz and the pocket battleships Scheer and Luetzow, together with a number of cruisers and destroyers and even one or two aircraft carriers, conceivably could end all Allied convoy work in the Atlantic until it was found and destroyed.

Loose in the Atlantic, it would gravely menace American-guarded Iceland. A successful attack on that Allied base would render it useless for antisubmarine work by air and surface units. The whole strategy of the Atlantic would be changed if German U-boats could operate from Iceland and command the North Atlantic, forcing the convoy route south.

Torpedo Hits Claimed

Scharnhorst, Gneisenau and the Prinz Eugen are not believed quite ready for action at present, however. Although the 100 and more bombings to which they were subjected at Brest for 11 months apparently made little impression on them structurally, their fire-control systems were reported out of action and their wiring damaged.

Authorities were unable to say what additional damage was done to the big German ships during yesterday's battle and subsequent destroyer attack.

U-BOAT CAPTAIN CAPTURED—German commander (left) of Nazi U-boat sunk in air-sea battle with British in the Atlantic is taken aboard British destroyer

At the height of the action a squadron of British Beaufort torpedo bombers flew to the attack with an escort of 50 fighters, and the pilots later claimed three torpedo hits on the speeding warships.

The German ships left Brest in the dusk of Wednesday evening, but it was not until 11 a. m. the next day that they were sighted by two scouting Spitfires off Boulogne.

Twelve Messerschmitts pounced on the Spitfires, but they got home to give the alarm, and for nearly five hours British fighters, bombers and torpedo planes were in action over the squadron.

The German radio, acknowledging 7 of the 18 fighter planes which the British say they destroyed, reported that more than 600 planes were fighting at one time over the Channel.

Then, after all available aircraft had been thrown into the assault, the destroyer force went into attack in what was described as a "very gallant action."

At that time the German squadron was steaming at almost top speed opposite the mouth of the Netherlands river Scheldt. The destroyers pierced the German screen and fired their torpedoes while the German ships were engaging them with all their secondary armament and some of their heaviest guns.

Henderson Able To Ration Gas if Needed, He Says

Price Administrator Leon Henderson declared yesterday that, although no plan had been drawn up for rationing gasoline, "we will know how to do the job" if a gasoline shortage develops that would make rationing necessary.

Henderson's office will not act, it is understood, unless Secretary of Interior Ickes, in his capacity as petroleum coordinator recommends rationing of gasoline.

Ickes revealed that principal oil companies operating on the Atlantic Coast had made a special study of the petroleum situation along the Eastern Seaboard and had submitted it to him with recommendations for action.

The committee was said to have recommended a 15 per cent cut in consumption before April 1, by rationing motorists and by closing filling stations at nights and on Sundays. Seventeen Eastern States and the District of Columbia would be affected by the suggested restrictions, as well as an undetermined area in the Northwest.

Use of Alaska Bases Studied By Roosevelt

By Thomas F. Reynolds

Copyright, 1942, by the Chicago Sun

President Roosevelt, readjusting United Nations strategy in light of the Singapore disaster, yesterday began planning for an offensive action against the Axis, in which Alaska will play an important part.

In a "very important" conference with Ernest Gruening, Governor of Alaska, the President reviewed war resources in that area with emphasis on the "offensive" rather than defensive possibilities.

Significantly, his talk with Gruening followed two protracted conferences with top Russian officials Thursday. America's Alaskan bases extend to almost within eyesight of Siberia, and provide convenient stepping stones for movement of bombers toward Siberian bases which are within easy bombing distance of the great Japanese industrial centers.

After Mr. Roosevelt conferred yesterday with Russian Ambassador Maxim Litvinoff and Gen. A. K. Repin, chief of the Russian military mission to the United States, there was no indication whether he had brought up the issue of American use of Siberian bases.

The President already has characterized Kamchatka, the Siberian peninsula, as an available and practicable scene of operations.

After his talk with Mr. Roosevelt, Gruening said "we are thinking in terms of offensive warfare rather than defensive warfare."

Alaska, Gruening said, already has 155 airplane landing fields, some of them major bases, others minor aviation stations. But he indicated that he had told Mr. Roosevelt that he feels that the over-all strength of the military and naval forces based in the territory should be increased.

The Alaskan Governor was asked whether his conference with Mr. Roosevelt means that additional bases will be established in Alaska, and that additional planes will be dispatched there.

"It means more of everything," he replied.

Rommel Gets War Supplies Through Tunisia, Report Says

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Feb. 13.—New evidence that German Marshal Erwin Rommel's troops in Libya have been receiving supplies steadily through Tunisia was claimed today by Cairo quarters in contact with Vichy.

The Steamships General Metzinger and Sphinx leave Marseille weekly for either Bizerta or Sfax, laden with cargo, these quarters said. The supplies ostensibly are for consumption in Tunisia, it was said.

The French commander for Tunisia is believed to be receiving orders from Admiral Darlan without the knowledge of Marshal Petain, it was said.

The Vichy government consented to the use of Tunisian ports to supply the Axis North African armies, these quarters said, in return for an Axis promise that France might retain her protectorate over Tunisia in this way.

Since supplies started flowing from Tunisia, Fascist elements there have stopped pressing Italy's claim on the country on Mussolini's orders, it was said.

Berlin (From German Broadcasts) Feb. 13 (AP).—D. N. B. broadcast a report today from Spain that "strong units of the British fleet arrived in Gibraltar and left in the direction of the Mediterranean after taking fuel and provisions on board."

An aircraft carrier and two cruisers were among the warships, the broadcast said.

Brazilian Ship Fired

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 13 (AP).—Fire broke out at 1 a. m. today aboard the 5335-ton former Italian freighter Aequitas, one of the Axis vessels purchased recently by Brazilian lines, and eight hours later harbor firemen and the crew still were battling the flames.

The ship was tied up at a dock where she had been loaded with coal when the unexplained fire started.

To Die for Hoarding Food

Bern, Switzerland, Feb. 13 (AP).—A 44-year-old German business man, Paul Vollmer, from Hamm, has been condemned to death for food hoarding, the Swiss telegraphic agency reported today from Mortmund, Germany.

Dennett Avoids Jail By Posting Bond

Dennett Held In $1500 Bond

Court Demands $1500 To Assure He'll Be At Viereck Trial

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Prescott Dennett—who mailed tons of Nazi propaganda under Congressional frank—escaped going to jail late yesterday by posting $1500 to secure his presence here when the alleged boss propagandist, George S. Viereck, goes on trial next week.

Meanwhile, the Capitol Hill purchasing agent of the Nazi propaganda machine, Representative Hamilton Fish's secretary, George Hill, accused his former lawyers of concealing important matters from him in the proceedings which ended with his being sent to prison for two to six years for perjury.

Hill asked the United States Court of Appeals here to let him file his appeal as a pauper, without paying costs, saying former Representative John O'Connor and William F. Cusick took all the money he had for appearing in his perjury trial. Their fee was $1800 and a $700 note.

Attacked Government Case

Hill was convicted of falsely denying that he knew Viereck and that he hid evidence spirited out of Dennett's headquarters. O'Connor and Cusick attacked the Government case but offered no defense evidence, not calling Hill or Fish to the stand. They quit the case this week, saying neither their client nor the Congressman has arranged for them to handle an appeal.

Hill then retained Attorney Richard A. Harman, who asked for an appeal and gave as one of the reasons, "incompetent and inefficient" defense by O'Connor and Cusick.

After referring to this in the affidavit in the Court of Appeals yesterday, Hill's statement charged "deception by counsel representing him during trial in the District Court by concealing from petitioner certain material matters which petitioner is informed were submitted to said counsel to be submitted to petitioner."

Cusick told The Post last night that he did not wish to comment, and that he had no idea what Hill was talking about.

Denounced by Prosecutors

It was recalled, however, that when Hill was sentenced, Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., condemned him for never offering to tell the truth. O'Connor and Cusick did not answer Hill a few minutes later when he asked them, in open court, about a "proposition" they were supposed to have discussed with Government counsel.

The prosecutors said an impossible proposal was made to them by the defense lawyers but refused to divulge anything else that was said.

Since the withdrawal of O'Connor and Cusick, their former client has appeared twice before the special grand jury on Axis agents, which indicted Viereck.

O'Connor tried vigorously to save Representative Fish from appearing before the grand jury last fall. Although they are out of the Hill case, he and Cusick said they were still lawyers for Fish.

Two Plead Sickness

Prosecutors Maloney and Hickey had Dennett placed under bond yesterday after a stormy week in which two witnesses pleaded sickness to keep off the grand jury witness stand.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts, who will preside over the Viereck trial, heard the story of Dennett's evasions Tuesday and pronounced him wilfully recalcitrant. The justice warned Dennett that unless he "talked" Thursday he would be in contempt of court

Thursday came, and Dennett claimed he was too sick to testify, but the deputy coroner, Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, could find nothing wrong with him.

Yesterday Dennett again disobeyed order that he come to court, and Dr. Murphy again could find nothing wrong. So a new subpena was served, commanding Dennett to be at Judiciary Square at 1 p. m., with a warning that a warrant would follow if he did not come.

Like a Man Asleep

About 2 o'clock he arrived, escorted by Dr. Murphy, Capt. Norman L. Botsword, deputy United States marshal, and his lawyer, O. H. Osterman. Dennett walked like a man asleep, with his graying hair towseled.

Ten minutes after he went in the grand jury room, the prosecutor took Dennett back before the court, charging that he again refused to talk.

During almost two hours of waiting for the hearing to begin, Dennett sat at the bar as though he were asleep. Not until Justice Letts ordered him jailed unless he posted $1500 bond for his appearance next week did Dennett straighten up and begin to reveal an interest in the proceedings.

Osterman said he thought his client's mind was disordered. However, the attorney quickly arranged with a bonding company to post the $1500 surety.

FBI Requested To Seize Aide Of Gov. Heil

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, Feb. 13.—United States B. J. Husting said today that he had asked the Federal Bureau of Investigation to arrest Johannes Bernhart Nauman, 47, gardener and chauffeur for Gov. Julius P. Heil, on a charge of being an enemy alien deemed dangerous to the internal security of the Nation.

Nauman, a German, has been the Governor's chauffeur and gardener at his Milwaukee home for 11 years.

The district attorney said he acted on authority sent to him from Washington.

Good Worker, Says Heil

Madison, Wis., Feb. 13 (AP).—Commenting on reports that the arrest of his gardener, Johannes Bernhart Nauman, was being sought by Federal authorities on a charge of being a dangerous enemy alien, Gov. Julius Heil today said Nauman was "a good and faithful worker who always tended to his business."

Got U. S. Protection

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—A special FBI agent testified today that Kurt Frederick Ludwig, charged with being a German espionage leader, told him that he had appealed for protection to the American consul in 1934 when Gestapo headquarters in Munich ordered him to appear there for questioning.

Ludwig escaped being sent to a concentration camp because he was accompanied by a representative of the American consul, the agent said Ludwig declared.

Joseph Sizoo, the special agent, quoted Ludwig as saying that "Germany is fighting a war to the death and I will never do anything to harm Germany." The witness also said that Ludwig informed him the Nazis had kept Mrs. Ludwig and their children as hostages in Germany to make certain Ludwig would carry out his espionage assignment faithfully.

Ludwig and five other persons, one of them a woman, are on trial under charges of conspiracy to violate the United States Espionage Act. Hans Helmut Pagel, 20, one of the original seven defendants, changed his plea today from innocent to guilty.

Meetings in various Manhattan restaurants with individuals wearing red or white roses or reading certain newspapers or periodicals were described by Ludwig to Agent Sizoo, the latter testified.

Sizoo said Ludwig told him that on these occasions money would be handed to Ludwig, but that he never met the same payer more than once.

New Auto License Tags Must Serve Through 1944

District motorists, when they purchase 1942-1943 auto license plates by April 1, will use them through 1944, the Commissioners announced last night.

Special metal strips, bearing a serial number and date of expiration, will be attached to the 1942-1943 tags. The plan was evolved by the commissioners and Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer as a measure for conserving metal.

Car owners also were asked to turn in their present tags after April 1 to gasoline stations throughout the city. Plates now in use will be permitted to raise the stamps.

of working under the direct supervision of the German Embassy to create internal dissension in this country by means of propaganda. They quoted her as asserting to friends that "this country needs somebody like Hitler" and that "democracy is the bunk."

In answer to her contentions that she was merely trying to gain the Nazi's confidence, they pointed out that she had never offered to turn over to G-men any results of her "counterespionage" efforts. Andrews also read portions of her diary, including one entry that read:

"The H. M. S. Hood sunk today. Sieg Heil!"

After emphasizing that Miss Ingalls was being tried for her failure to confess herself a Nazi employe, not for the opinions that she had expressed, Andrews waved five $20 bills that were said to be part of her pay, in front of the jury box and declared solemnly:

"Judas sold his Christ for less than that—and then hanged himself."

The defense had admitted that the graying air lady received $400 from Baron Ulrich von Gienanth, second secretary of the German Embassy, but had claimed that she was prompted only by patriotic motives and a "fanatic" thirst for adventure.

The jury's verdict added another chapter to Miss Ingalls' checkered career which has seen her a vaudeville dancer and professional stunt flier, the only woman to fly solo over the Andes, and the holder of a woman's transcontinental speed record.

A native of New York City, her age was still in doubt after her five day trial. She stated that she was 38 at the time of her arrest in December, but it was learned that according to an age she gave several years ago in application for a passport she should be 45 now.

On the witness stand, she smilingly said only that she was "over 35."

"tired having a necessary program kicked around, within and outside the Office of Civilian Defense."

May Win Respite

Plans for shifting the section to McNutt's office of defense health and welfare services may be held up until Kelly has talked with the Chief Executive, indications were last night, although transfer procedure has been worked out by the Budget Bureau and copies have reached the desks of both Administrator McNutt and James M. Landis, OCD director.

"I think the time to fight for the very life of America—and for a program of which I am proud—has arrived," Kelly said. The program has been criticized by people who "didn't know what they were talking about," he asserted, "and were too lazy to get out of their rocking chairs to find out."

Kelly said he was appointed by President Roosevelt last August to "toughen up America" and declared that if his division had to be shifted he wanted it to go to a sympathetic agency which "already has proved it knows how to operate in an official business-like manner."

Mayris Chaney, dancer friend of Mrs. Roosevelt, is an assistant director in this division, in charge of folk and children's activities.

In defending Miss Chaney's work, Mrs. Roosevelt said in her column yesterday she considered a dance program within the physical fitness program a good thing and expressed belief that if dancing is included in the division's future activities Miss Chaney is a good person to be in charge of it.

The dancer's plan for children's activities will be reviewed by a board of experts within the next two or three weeks, it was announced from Director Kelly's office last night. Dr. Thomas S. Gates, president of the University of Pennsylvania and sponsor of "cultural olympics," will be on the board, it was said.

Funeral Services Conducted for Harry Pasternak

Funeral services for Harry Pasternak, 62, of 5108 Forty-first Street Northwest, who died Thursday, were held at 3 p. m. yesterday at Bernard Danzansky's funeral home, 3501 Fourteenth Street Northwest, with burial in Adas Israel Cemetery.

Mr. Pasternak was a tailor at 1219 Connecticut Avenue in business with his brother, Max Pasternak, for more than 30 years. Born in Austria, he came to the United States 50 years ago. He moved to Washington 36 years ago after living in New York City.

He was a member of Adas Israel Congregation, Chevy Chase Citizens Association, and the Osiris Masonic Lodge. He leaves two sons, Samuel R. Pasternak, an accountant at the same address; Dr. Jerome Pasternak, a dentist, at 7928 Sixteenth Street; two brothers and a sister.

W. F. Stevenson Dies; Former Congressman

Funeral services for William F. Stevenson, for 16 years a Representative from South Carolina before retiring in 1939, will be held today at the Presbyterian Church in Cheraw, S. C.

Mr. Stevenson, who died Thursday at his home at 1629 Columbia Road Northwest, at the age of 80 years, served on the board of the Home Owners Loan Corporation and for a time was chairman.

His public career included seven years in the South Carolina State House of Representatives, including two as speaker. Born in Iredell County, N. C., Mr. Stevenson was graduated from Davidson (N. C.) College and immediately entered the practice of law.

He is survived by his wife.

Text of Order On Transfers By President

The text of President Roosevelt's directive, dated February 10, and released yesterday to heads of Federal agencies concerning effective use of Government personnel in defense work follows:

To the heads of all departments, establishments and agencies of the Federal Government:

Subject: Utilization of additional personnel facilities made available by adoption of the 44-hour work week.

The voluntary extension of the work week to 44 hours by practically all agencies throughout the departmental and field services of the Government has greatly augmented the man-hours of Federal employment.

This substantial increase in the work week has provided material relief for those agencies which were understaffed to meet their increased work load under the defense program and calls for a resurvey of personnel requirements during the remainder of this fiscal year and for the fiscal year 1943. Obviously those agencies which were adequately staffed on the basis of the 39-hour week, and are not confronted with an increase in work programs, are now overstaffed.

It is imperative that this man power be immediately capitalized and effectively channeled into defense work. This means that agency heads must survey every operational activity and determine those employes who may be promptly released for employment in other agencies. Particularly in Washington this action must be expedited in order to help meet the shortage in personnel and housing and to avoid as far as possible bringing new employes into the city. To the extent that experienced personnel can thus be obtained the housing situation in Washington will be helped and the demand for office space decreased.

I have instructed the director of the Bureau of the Budget, in cooperation with the executive departments, independent establishments and agencies, immediately to review appropriations for personal services, departmental and field, and to establish administrative reserves for the remainder of the fiscal year 1942 in proportion to the approximate increase in man-hours which are accruing to the respective agencies.

Let Military Run War, Tydings Says

take the best military or naval advice on disposal of American forces "rather than use his own judgment."

"I would think that the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy would exclude himself, because I do not think the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy knows how to sink the Japanese fleet," he said.

Lee asked what made Tydings think the President "is not taking the advice."

"I did not say the President did not take it," Tydings replied. "I simply said I should like the assurance that whatever we are doing is in line with whatever the Army and Navy 100 per cent want done to win the war."

The Marylander said wars cannot be won "without taking chances."

"Where the American flag flies and where our troops fight would be the first place I would send our men so that they might have a chance beneath the flag," he said. "I would be that selfish before I would pour our forces into other places. . . .

"What I say may contravene all the best in military tactics yet I should like to see a convoy with sufficient ships and sufficient airplanes carrying sufficient bombers overhead make a fighting effort to get to the Philippines if we intend to hold them or to Singapore."

He said he would like to have seen "the Philippine forces put over with the English forces on the Malayan peninsula, and at least hold the most important thing we have got in the Far East, rather than lose them both."

Tydings lauded MacArthur, who, he said, was prepared "to make Custer's stand, if necessary," but he said he doubted MacArthur would agree to Wendell L. Willkie's suggestion that he be called back from the Philippines to direct all United States military forces.

Doubts He'd Desert Men

"If I know MacArthur, it will take the strongest kind of orders to bring him away unless his men come with him," he said, "because generals of that kind do not leave their men under fire."

Tydings opened his speech with an attack on Government spending for nonessentials and on Administration labor policies—"things going on in this Government which are enough to make a soldier on Bataan Peninsula throw down his gun in disgust.

"I think strikes ought to end and stay ended until the men in the front lines get guns which they ought to have to defend their lives and save this country," he said at one point.

"And I am discouraged that there is not enough courage in the high leadership of this Administration to bring that kind of a law into being."

Launching into his discussion of military strategy, he said that "when we are fighting on two fronts it is foolish for me to keep quiet when people in high places serve notice of where our troops are to go, so the other fellow may know what he is to do, in the face of those statements."

Ex-President Of Brazil Dies

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 13 (AP).—Epitacio Pessoa, president of Brazil from 1919 to 1922, died tonight after an illness of several months.

He was the Brazilian representative at the Versailles peace conference and the year he retired as president he was elected a member of the Court of International Justice at The Hague. He resigned from the court in 1930. The former president was 76 years old.

space decreased . . ."

A reporter told President Roosevelt at yesterday's press conference that he had heard many Government workers in Washington complain that, since the work week was lengthened, they had little to do. The President said that his order was designed to take care of just such a situation.

Another reporter asked the President if he could estimate how many Federal workers in Washington might be affected by the transfer to war work. The President replied that this would be difficult, and he said he did not care to generalize.

"Bright Boys" Get Hit

Mr. Roosevelt spoke in derisive tones about the bright boys and the glib guys who, he said, demanded a cut in Federal appropriations for nondefense activities. He made it clear that responsibility for such cuts was squarely up to Congress.

When asked where the cuts should be made, Mr. Roosevelt said the bright boys and the glib guys sidestepped by saying this was none of their business; that it was enough for them to lead in the movement.

The President remarked that one of the bright boys was in to see him recently, and he recalled how, for the visitor's benefit, he brought up the subject of Federal meat inspection.

This could be curtailed easily, the President suggested sarcastically, adding: Who cares in wartime whether we eat diseased meat?

If people do not want meat inspection, he said, they can stop it through their elected representatives. He could not do it, he said, because Congress has given him a directive to see that the meat is inspected.

NYA Is Aiding Defense

The glib boys say to cut out all the bureaus in Washington, Mr. Roosevelt continued, but Congress created these bureaus and Congress can cut them out any time it wants to.

"I'm not a glib boy," a reporter chimed in, "but what about the Youth Administration and the CCC?"

The President said that the NYA was turning out 80,000 and 90,000 trained defense workers every three months, and he reminded the reporters that many of the CCC boys are not of draft age and some are not physically fit for the Army and Navy. The CCC is doing a good job of rehabilitating on these latter, he said.

The President agreed with one questioner that a sharp reduction in the CCC force would increase the fire hazard in the Nation's forests.

Editorial in Record

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, introduced The Post editorial, "Conversion of Government," into the Congressional Record.

Later Byrd commented to reporters on the President's suggestion that arbitrary curtailment in the functions of any department must be at the specific direction of Congress.

He said many of the agencies, curtailment of which was recommended by the Byrd Joint Committee, were set up by executive order. Byrd said he was sure the President could eliminate these by executive order. Specific recommendations for cuts in others have already been made in the committee's report, he said, and were before the President when he framed his budget message. He indorsed the Tydings investigation and said his committee will cooperate in every way.

Tydings, in a speech that capped a pitched Senate row over Congressional pensions, charged that "no real approach or effort is being made to keep this country in such shape that there will be a vestige of the thing our men are fighting for today to save."

Paints Gloomy Picture

He said the time had come to "streamline the administration for the conduct of the war, or else we are not going to have any Government for these men to come home to."

"This is our picture," he said. "Debt piled upon debt, peacetime bureau upon peacetime bureau. Why not do away with the CCC? Why not do away with the National Youth Administration and with all the old WPA except where some extreme case created by war makes it wise and expedient, fair and just to maintain it?

"Why not eliminate and strip down all these peace efforts so that the men who come back will have a country left here when they get back?"

Discussing the Congressional crack-down on OCD frills, he said James H. Landis, OCD director, was able and learned "but as unfit for that office—and I say it without the slightest intent of being sacrilegeous—as I am to be the Primate of the Church of England in this country."

"We cannot control these appointments; and even if a man fails in one place, they put him in another place, in a higher position, and at a better salary."

Lee J. Lan, 33, Attorney, Bank Examiner, Dies

Lee J. Lan, 33, of 1202 Decatur Street Northwest, died early yesterday morning at the Garfield Hospital. A graduate of National University, Mr. Lan was a member of the District Bar Association, and a bank examiner with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

He is survived by his wife, Sylvia Lan, of this city, and by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Lan, of New York City. Mr. Lan leaves three brothers, Jack Lan, of Washington, and Benjamin and Mack Lan, of New York.

Services will be held this evening at 8 p. m. at the Danzansky funeral home, 3501 Fourteenth Street Northwest. Burial will be in New York on Sunday.

Army to Activate Three New 'Model' Divisions March 25

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Three reserve divisions to be activated March 25 will be pilot models for an American Army designed from the ground up to profit by the lessons and the mistakes of the past year, under plans of general headquarters.

If these plans are followed there should be no more cases of officers instructing men from books instead of from their own knowledge. There should be no more juggling of commanders until morale collapses pure frustration. There should be none of the indecision, the uncertainty, the misdirected effort which attended activation of the 18 National Guard divisions during 1940 and 1941.

Commanders of the three divisions, which will be the first of 32 activated this year, already have been picked and have been in special schools more than two months. Their staffs have been chosen and have been in schools the same length of time.

Commanders, executive officers, plans and training officers and battalion commanders of the three infantry regiments, four field artillery battalions, medical, quartermaster, engineer battalions and signal and reconnaissance element have been named and are undergoing special training. All these officers were designated by the War Department itself. Infantry battalion staffs and the balance of the regimental staffs are in school now, having been selected by commanders of the field armies of which the new division will be part.

For the 14,615 enlisted men who will make up the divisions' fighting power, something new has been instituted. The enlisted cadre, experienced men who will be the nucleus of noncommissioned officers and specialists, already has been chosen for each division and already is in training for the work its members will do. The cadre of 1190 men for each division was chosen from a regular Army division now in service, which will be regarded more or less as the "parent" of the new division.

What is newest of all is that the 13,425 men who will make up the bulk of each division will not come through the replacement centers set up to give selectees basic training. They will move directly from the reception centers to the divisions; from the moment their military careers begin they will be members of the division, the battalion and the squad with which they will go into battle.

Officers, in addition to the commanders and staffs chosen by the War Department and Army chiefs, will go to the divisions from officer candidate schools through an officer replacement pool operated by the War Department. These will be reserve, regular and National Guard officers and fresh young second lieutenants who went into the Army as selectees or enlisted Guardsmen.

Sufficient equipment will be available for training, based on the need for equipment in training as worked out during the 18-month experience with the National Guard. Equipment will be brought up to standards required for operations in the field as it is made available.

These three divisions, like all infantry divisions to be organized from now on, will be triangular; that is, they will be built around three infantry regiments. But these regiments will be nearer the size of the big regiments of the first World War than the size contemplated when the triangular division was first conceived. Each of these regiments will be more than 3000 strong, and powerful in automatic weapons.

Officers will total 796, of whom 172 will be excess junior officers to provide for the inevitable losses because of illness and ineptitude which did not appear in training school.

These three divisions 15,411 officers and men, will be the models for the new citizen army America is building to win her toughest war.

Prince Georges Prisoner Indicted In Attack on Girl

Frank Haywood, 32, Negro of Lakeland, Md., yesterday was indicted by a Prince Georges County grand jury for the rape of an 18-year-old Washington girl near College Park Christmas Eve.

The jury was called into special session to hear the evidence because one of the witnesses in the case, the girl's companion at the time of the attack, is a soldier at a nearby camp and is likely to be transferred from the State at any time. The indictments yesterday will make possible Haywood's trial before the end of the month.

Haywood was not represented by counsel and the court appointed John S. White to serve as his attorney at the trial.

Sugar Hoarders Urged to Share

Housewives who have hoarded sugar should "divvy up" with the neighbors, Dan A. West, consumer chief of the Office of Price Administration, commented. "If we're really of this war fairly, here's a good chance for us to begin doing it in our communities."

By sharing the stock on hand in kitchen cupboards, he declared, friends and neighbors can be helped, the strain on retail stores eased, and the "embarrassment" of having sugar ration stamps torn out of ration books avoided.

Victory Hinges On '42 Output, Nelson Warns

American victory in the war depends upon an immense expansion in the production of military requirements during the remainder of this year, War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson warned yesterday.

Addressing a conference of business paper editors and publishers, Nelson declared that every weapon that is made today is worth ten that might be produced next year.

"This year—1942—is the critical year in the existence of the United States," Nelson asserted. "I am not painting the picture darkly but I do believe that we who know what American industry can do must look at the situation squarely and see what we can do to make up for lost time."

Nelson outlined a three-point program upon which the problem of getting maximum production depends.

First, he said, this country must get greater production out of plants and machines now producing war goods. Even though the country today is producing a much greater volume of armament than in 1918, the present volume is not nearly so great as it must become, he declared.

Second, he continued, military production must be obtained out of factories and machines which are now producing civilian goods—in other words, by conversion of industry to full war production.

Third he said services of small producers must be enlisted through subcontracting and through the letting of prime contracts to groups of small manufacturers who have pooled their facilities.

"We've lost a lot of time because industry was fearful of what might happen after the war if all our productive facilities were overexpanded," he declared. "Let's stop thinking about what we'll do when it is all over and start thinking about what we're going to do now to prevent it from being all over for us."

Services Today For J. L. Ryan, D. C. Salesman

Mass for John L. Ryan, Dublin-born Washington salesman who died Thursday at his residence at 4115 Thirty-eighth Street Northwest, will be said at 11 a. m. today at St. Ann's Catholic Church.

Mr. Ryan, born of an English mother and Irish father, was brought to this country by his parents when he was 11 years old. The family settled in Richmond, Va., and the boy became an interior decorator when he grew up.

He practiced this profession in Richmond and the Middle West and in time moved to Washington, where he has lived for the past quarter century. He became a salesman in 1929.

Mr. Ryan was a member of the Paint Salesmen's Association of Washington.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Maude Mallory Ryan, and a brother, Fred F. Ryan, Davenport, Iowa. Burial will be in Abbey Mausoleum, Arlington, Va.

De Gaulle Corvette Sunk in Atlantic

St. Pierre, St. Pierre-et-Miquelon, Feb. 13 (AP).—One of the Free French corvettes which participated in the occupation of these islands Christmas Eve has been torpedoed and sunk while on convoy duties in the Atlantic, the Free French news agency announced tonight.

Thirty-six crewmen were missing, including five native islanders.

Thus this little territory wrested from Vichy rule has made its first sacrifice fighting beside the United Nations, the agency said.

The Canadian navy assisted in rescue operations.

Strike Violence

25 Welders Beaten in Picket Fuss

By the Associated Press

Tacoma, Feb. 13.—Violence broke out today at the big Seattle-Tacoma Shipbuilding Corporation plant where welders, seeking a union independent of the A. F. L., sought to form a picket line.

An estimated 25 to 40 welders, including their leader, Charles L. Brinkerhoff, were beaten, knocked to the ground, kicked in the heads and had their picketing signs torn from them. Brinkerhoff said there were 20 pickets at the yards.

The pickets, carrying signs reading "Don't pay tribute to the A. F. L.," and "We want to work for our country but not for the A. F. L." were attacked by several hundred workers at the early morning change of shifts.

Some Chased Two Miles

Police were unable to stop the fighting, which occurred in semi-darkness.

The picketing welders were driven off, some chased as far as two miles. No further picket lines were established.

About 1180 welders walked out three weeks ago because of the inter-union dispute. A. F. L. unions, which have a closed shop contract with the shipyards, refused demands of the welders for a separate union. The welders contended they were forced to hold cards and pay dues in various A. F. L. unions.

Baltimore Stoppage Ends

Baltimore, Feb. 13 (AP).—A four-hour work stoppage at the plant of the Bethlehem Fairfield Shipyard, Inc., ended late today when the night shift began work as usual at 5 p. m.

Lucien F. Rye, Federal conciliator, said 95 per cent of the approximately 7500 men on the day shift refused to resume work after lunch. Union officials told him, he said, that company refusal to meet their negotiating committee led to the stoppage.

The conciliator announced he had arranged a conference tomorrow between company officials and the union, C. I. O. Local No. 43, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America.

Operations are back to normal, and the day shift will report tomorrow, he added.

Real Wages Will Drop for U. S. Workers, He Says

By Ben Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Warning American wage earners to prepare for a decrease in real income "from here out" rather than for salary boosts, Leon Henderson, price administrator, told a press conference yesterday that the country faced a 30 to 33 billion dollar surplus purchasing power "problem" which must be absorbed or controlled to prevent inflation.

Blocking out the picture in "rough billions," Henderson pointed out that seven to eight billions of surplus might be skimmed off in normal savings or defense bond sales, another seven to nine billions in taxes, with 11 to 15 billions with nothing to buy—a potent inflation producer.

"The price system could not absorb that total amount," he said.

Even One Billion a Peril

Wage increases at this time would only add to the danger of inflation and permit groups with larger purchasing power to secure a disproportionate share of available consumer goods, he said. Increases in wages of only one billion dollars would result in an inflation threat of four or five billion dollars and compel the institution of stricter and more extensive rationing to make sure that available goods are properly distributed.

Henderson thus took issue on purely economic grounds with representatives of organized labor who have been calling for wage increases to meet the rising cost of living. He stated that he presented his views to the War Labor Board at a "valuable" two-hour conference and was ready to present his case to other agencies which have a say on wage questions.

Simply, Henderson pointed out that during 1942 American income will total 95 billion dollars, yet only 60 to 65 billion dollars worth of consumer goods and services will be available for purchasing.

Doesn't Like Sales Taxes

Use of the tax program as an inflation preventive and to absorb excess purchasing power along lines generally proposed by the Treasury Department was indorsed by Henderson who said he was emphatically opposed to the sales tax in any form.

Henderson said he favored most an increase in personal and corporate income taxes, particularly in the middle brackets. Other methods which he discussed in a favorable vein were increased social security levies and similar types of "compulsory savings," payroll withholding taxes collected at the source, and efforts to increase the sales of defense bonds.

Labor union officials who have promoted sales of defense bonds were praised by the OPA chief as "doing a real savings job." Best way of buying defense bonds as far as inflation is concerned, he said, is to have it "clicked off the pay" every week for the "duration."

Wants to Hold Down Costs

Much of the other sales of defense bonds have not made a difference, he said, because they were merely "diverted" from savings accounts.

On the price control front itself, Henderson promised to concentrate on items which are considered major parts of the cost of living.

"If anything is done to prevent even a 2 per cent rise in the cost of living, it would be better than increased wages, as far as labor is concerned," he said. "Labor groups would do well to try to force us to hold down the cost of living and increase taxes."

He denied discussing any pending case with the War Labor Board but said board members questioned him with specific cases in mind.

Most important of the wage-increase cases now before the War Labor Board is the demand of C. I. O. Steel Workers unions for $1-a-day increases. This case has been set for hearing on February 24.

AP in Violation Of Antitrust Laws, Labor Press Says

By the Associated Press

The Federated Press said in a statement yesterday that it has filed a complaint with the Justice Department's antitrust division charging the Associated Press with violation of the antitrust laws.

The Federated Press, in the statement distributed to news offices in Washington, said it was a nonprofit cooperative news service for labor papers which furnishes news, feature material and pictures to more than 150 publications published by international unions, central labor bodies and local unions, affiliated with the A. F. of L. and C. I. O., and unaffiliated unions. It is owned by its member papers, the press said, and is not a part of the official family of any group in the labor movement.)

The complaint alleged that the Associated Press, by scrapping a picture mat service which it had acquired from the New York Times," the Federated Press said, "was restricting the supply of news pictures for more than 100 labor papers served by the Federated Press, as well as a large number of small newspapers and community weeklies."

Pershing Heads Another 'A. E. F.'

By the United Press

"Black Jack" Pershing strides today at the head of a second A. E. F. —a civilian force assigned to soften the sorrow and privation that trail war.

Formation of "the Army Emergency Fund," with Gen. John J. Pershing serving as honorary president, was announced last night by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson in a radio address.

The fund, he said, will not be an agency of the Federal, State or municipal governments. It will be directed by a civilian board of governors and administered by the commanding officers of corps areas and posts.

Patterson said the fund was not a substitute for pensions or permanent relief. Its sole purpose is to afford temporary relief and alleviate hardships among wives, widows and dependents of soldiers in the short period before permanent compensation can be paid.

All persons who contribute to the fund automatically become members of it.

Mall Parking

Parking on the Mall is a comparatively small concession to make to Washington's wartime emergency. It falls into the same category as the construction of temporary buildings on Constitution Avenue and in the parks. In each case the change is undesirable from the peacetime viewpoint, but at present the peacetime viewpoint is simply inapplicable. If parking on the Mall is necessary to facilitate the movement of Washington's greatly increased number of Government workers into the downtown area, no one is likely to stand in the way of the proposal.

Commissioner Young has added to this suggestion a strong incentive for the conservation of automobile tires. He would reserve this parking space for drivers who pledge themselves to transport at least two other persons downtown as a routine service. Some difficulty might be encountered in administering this feature of the plan, but it is certainly worth a trial.

The danger of authorizing an expedient such as parking on the Mall is that the public will become accustomed to it and abolition of the privilege after the war will create serious dislocations. To avoid those consequences use of the Mall should be accompanied by vigorous efforts to develop a permanent parking system. The bill authorizing so-called fringe parking lots is awaiting signature by the President. Another requiring a certain number of parking spaces to be provided along with all future buildings for multiple occupancy is awaiting action by the Senate District Committee. These measures will pave the way for a more comprehensive attack upon the parking problem, and their application will be urgent as a means of shortening the period of the Mall's desecration.

Man Power

Hope of eliminating non-essential activity until the war is over has been struck a resounding blow by President Roosevelt's latest appeal for enactment of a 965 million-dollar rivers and harbors bill. This omnibus measure stretches over numerous projects that would not only make no contribution to the war effort but would definitely slow it down by absorbing labor and strategic materials needed elsewhere. There is only one excuse for its enactment. It serves as coating for a pill—the St. Lawrence seaway project—which the President wants Congress to swallow.

The President points out that the bill is merely authorizing legislation. A committee amendment is designed to withhold appropriations until after the war, except in the case of projects essential to our national security. Enactment of such a bill would be equivalent to taking a secure cover off a pork barrel and then trying to protect it with a makeshift. The proper first step is, of course, to single out the genuine war necessities from this catch-all measure and let them stand on their own merits.

Certainly the relation of the proposed St. Lawrence seaway to the war should be examined before and not after enactment of the bill. The Administration has previously tried to justify this undertaking as a means of providing power for defense industries. To give it any significance in the present war, however, we would have to assume that the fighting will continue until 1946 or 1947. And even if that assumption is made, there still remains the question of whether the vast quantities of labor and materials which would go into that project cannot be used more profitably elsewhere.

The controlling factor in the outcome of this war may well be the supply of labor. Great Britain and Germany long ago experienced an acute shortage of man power. The United States is certain to be confronted by the same problem as our war production reaches its full stride. Labor is going to be so fully absorbed in the immediate task of turning out guns, tanks, airplanes and ammunition that there will be no energy left for vast undertakings which might or might not help to win the war. It is of the utmost importance for Congress to visualize this approaching labor shortage before voting to divert man power to the St. Lawrence River. Indeed, this is only one of many instances in which the forthcoming shortage of labor will be a critical factor.

Battle Of Washington

President Roosevelt has taken an important step toward streamlining the Government for war service. "It is imperative," he informed department heads yesterday, "that this man power [that released by the increase in the work week] be immediately capitalized and effectively channeled into defense work." In addition, the Budget Bureau will make a survey to determine where transfers of personnel can be made from regular war agencies. At least a first step has been taken toward more effective use of the Government's enormous man power in this emergency.

That response of the Chief Executive to the general clamor for conversion of the Government to a wartime basis is most encouraging. It should be obvious at the beginning, however, that not much help in this endeavor can be expected from department and bureau chiefs whose staffs are to be trimmed. The truism that a Government bureau is the nearest thing to immortality on earth is not changed automatically by war. In most instances cuts will have to be imposed upon Federal agencies. And, of course, the orders will have to come from the President or Congress. So much will depend upon the vigor and determination with which the Budget Bureau pursues its survey.

It should be clearly recognized, too, as Senator Byrd has pointed out, that the transfer of employes to war agencies is only one segment of a most vital problem. In some cases it is not merely pruning but abolition that is desirable. The President defends the NYA, for example, because it offers training to mechanical workers. It is not enough, however, to give a wartime slant to the program of every agency in which some official has a special interest. The question is whether the time, money and energy utilized by this agency are producing maximum returns from the standpoint of a nation engaged in total war.

There is a pronounced tendency on the part of the Administration to continue every activity in which it has been previously engaged with only enough change to give a surface appearance of conversion to war work. That is not the direct route to efficient war-making. Rather it is the road to confusion. As a result of this tendency, we have numerous organizations working in the same field. The wide diffusion of the responsibility for housing war workers is a classical example of this weakness. It is reported, also, that seven different agencies have a hand in determining what aid should go to Russia, with none of them exercising final authority.

Three different agencies are engaged in the investigation of governmental personnel. The records of prospective employes are scrutinized by the Civil Service Commission or the Treasury. In the case of employes within the service, investigations are made by the FBI or the Treasury. Duplication, waste, irresponsibility and overlapping of function thus run through many agencies that are of the greatest importance in mobilizing our strength for war. These weaknesses should have been eliminated long before Pearl Harbor. We are late in undertaking what Senator Byrd calls "the Battle of Washington," but that only makes it the more imperative to win this victory without further delay.

Labor Board

The War Labor Board has ruled that it would not tolerate any labor dispute which places the "selfish welfare" of a small group above the interests of national defense. It is a golden rule, though a nebulous one. The case which produced it was of relatively minor significance, and the real test of the War Labor Board's rule looms ahead on the disputes precipitated by the unions in General Motors and Bethlehem Steel. Jurisdiction has been assumed in both cases. Both involve demands for much higher wages, and one—the General Motors case—calls for recognition of the closed shop.

There is no yardstick of "selfishness" in respect of wage demands, not even a compass in any executive or legislative ruling. But the Labor Board has set a precedent on wages which is not very reassuring. The case involved the Aluminum Company. Substantial wage demands were granted, together with a narrowing of the wage differential between North and South. However, the board, as if unsure of its ground, added, "Labor must make financial sacrifices in the interests of checking the menace of inflation."

There can be no gainsaying that fact. It is perfectly obvious that any broad-scale wage increases at the present time—and the decisions in the two pending cases are expected to fix terms for both industries—would imperil the entire price structure. To be sure, food prices are going up. But wages, as we have repeatedly shown, got the head start, and the increase in the hourly rate is still in front of the increase in living costs. No doubt food prices have gone up because of the activities of the farm bloc in catering to the "selfish welfare" of the farmers. But our labor leaders would give the country an example of statesmanship if they sought to curb the farm bloc rather than join in the competition for special favors at the public expense. Otherwise this country is bound to get embarked upon a price inflation that will hit the workers worst of all. Wage stabilization should thus be a cardinal principle in the Labor Board's policy.

As to the closed shop, that issue, if allowed to be joined, is bound to run counter to the interests of national defense. It would open a Pandora box of problems between management and labor throughout the country. It would slow down production. To be sure, the executive order setting up the board said that the issue was arbitrable. But at that time the real measure of the war effort had not come to be realized as an effort which may yet mean the extension of the draft principle to industrial labor. Aside from this possibility, however, any demand for a change in the organizational set-up of labor is clearly "selfish." For it amounts to an effort to exploit the national peril by one group in the community—an effort which the community, according to the Gallup Poll, would not tolerate.

Another Disaster

As if Britain's cup of disaster were not sufficiently full already—what with her setback in Libya and the developing catastrophe at Singapore—she now has facing her the grim prospects arising out of the escape from their French dry-dock prison of the Scharnhorst, the Gneisenau and the Prinz Eugen.

The venture, from the German point of view, was as bold and risky as it proved brilliantly successful. It was an unmitigated loss so far as Great Britain and her Allies are concerned. Repeatedly over a period of a great many weeks the three vessels had been bombed by R. A. F. planes. Apparently these attacks had done little more than delay repairs, and certainly not prevented them. The final agony was the failure of the efforts made by the British fleet and air force to send the ships to the bottom before they could reach safe haven at Helgoland. In this unsuccessful effort no fewer than 42 British planes were lost.

It has long been rumored that Germany has been straining every nerve during recent months to create a new high seas fleet. That is possible, though large-scale tonnage in capital ships cannot be built overnight. The three vessels, plus smaller units that can rapidly be built may enable Germany before long to launch a naval assault on Allied shipping which, if it is to be overcome, would require the diversion of a considerable part of Allied sea power at a time when every Allied ship is needed for other purposes.

Thus the failure to intercept and destroy the Scharnhorst, Gneisenau and Prinz Eugen upsets the balance of naval power in the Atlantic at a moment when Allied naval power in the Pacific is still inadequate to the task in hand, despite the smashing attack made by the American fleet on Japan's mandated islands in the Marshall group and by Dutch and American forces in the Macassar Strait.

Grant Wood

Both the life and the art of Grant Wood were expressions of a traditional American genius. His life followed that pattern so familiar and once so dear to us—farm boyhood, early poverty, youthful struggles to help support a widowed mother and keep himself in school, journeyman years of working at any job that came to hand from teaching school to serving as night watchman in a morgue—and eventually great achievement. As to his art, no other painter, not even Thomas Benton, and certainly no novelist or poet, has ever translated the American ethos so successfully as did Grant Wood in his later canvases. It was as though he found in his native Iowa the spiritual center of the American tradition. Of course, it was an America which may by now have utterly vanished—an America still strongly influenced by both the strength and the limitations of its Puritan heritage. At any rate, in the painting called "Daughters of the Revolution," which, when first exhibited, aroused such storms of both admiration and indignation, Wood seemed to have represented the decadence and atrophy of Puritanic America. The interesting question for us now is whether the new American spirit—a spirit conditioned by generations of immigration, by material prosperity, by Broadway and Hollywood, by William James and John Dewey—has the strength of soul which saw the old Puritanic America through its three great crises.

BELOVED, YOU HAVE GIVEN ME YOUR NAME

Your name is proud as lilies white and still,
Your name is deep as water without sound,
As radiant as sunrise on a hill,
As secret as the first bud out of ground;
Your name is quietness when trumpets flare,
Your name is singing when the silence falls,
As cool as curtains blowing in the air,
As soft as elm trees when the first snow falls.

Beloved, you have given me this thing
That clothes my heart with wind and star and dew,
With swift exulting and shy wondering,
That makes me not myself but part of you—
A strange new creature born of song and flame:
Beloved, you have given me your name!

Checking The Enemy

Actual military operations are generally too technical to gain much from civilian discussion, but military operations rest on the support of civil government, in the United States, and citizens would seem to be justified in discussing the point of juncture of the two.

The Associated Press reports that the President announced at a press conference that our major war strategy is "an effort to keep the enemy in check and inflict the greatest possible destruction upon his men and resources while the allies are building a superior war machine."

The President's exceptional intelligence has, of course, made him aware during the many months through which he has advocated "measures short of war" that many of those measures were, in the opinion of able lawyers and well-informed people, unneutral and capable of being construed as actual participation in war. Why were we not prepared for something more than "keeping the enemy in check"?

Possibly nothing can be now done to remedy the mischief, but citizens may still appeal to their representatives in Congress to impose some restraint to prevent a collapse of the civil-Government foundation for our military support. The process of exchanging compliments between the White House and the Capitol, measured in spectacular billions, does not conceal from the people national derelictions. The later effects of the billions appropriated will be distressingly obvious to our people, but the immediate effect of "checking" the enemy will be disappointing. The billions will not save our soldiers in Europe, Asia and Africa. Reliance for their protection must be placed on a more realistic foundation.

The British prime minister proclaimed that we will "organize" for war next year, and the President says our plan is to "check" the enemy. The citizen is not elated by the present indication that when the "checking" and the "organizing" are completed, the enemy will be in secure possession of most of the military resources of Europe, Asia and Africa.

Will it then be easier to dislodge and overcome the enemy?

GEORGE MASON DILLARD.

Greece And The War

The President told us something about the first shot and the last shot, but there will be plenty of shooting before the last shot is fired. When a small but honorable nation in southern Europe was staging the most remarkable resistance, much to the amazement of the entire world, against an enemy overwhelmingly superior in arms and man power, this writer appealed through the press and urged immediate and adequate help for that country. With equipment, most of it left over from the last war, and with outside help, almost ridiculous to mention, these heroic people held the enemy for months at a standstill. I remarked then that prompt and sufficient assistance, of which they were desperately in need, to that country from all the defenders of democracy might not have been given in vain. When finally she was gasping her last breath, someone offered her 40 dilapidated planes and tons of promises.

If the Greeks had received adequate help at the right time the enemy would have been checked. Hitler would never have dared to invade the Balkans, cross Libya, attack Russia, and incite Japanese trouble in the Pacific.

Today that little country lies in ruins and its people die by the hundreds from starvation while suffering mounts daily with clouds around them growing darker and blacker every day. OBSERVER.

Mr. Henderson's Sugar

A well-known radio commentator, broadcasting from Washington this morning, tells of an interview with Mr. Leon Henderson in which this gentleman states that he has either very little or no sugar in his home. This is pitiful. Were the gentleman in Lynchburg, he could visit each of the several hundred groceries and, although limited to the purchase of only 5 pounds in each store, go home with half a ton of sugar in his car. And now that the Government has decided to make alcohol out of grain and corn, perhaps he would be allowed to retain these purchases. But if bad comes to worse, I shall sneak down to Washington and leave some on his doorstep at night. I formerly came to Washington several times a year but I am told it is dangerous to visit the city now. They say you may be walking calmly along the streets there when suddenly some one comes up behind you and clips you over the head and when you recover consciousness, you are holding down a well-paying Government job. And you can't resign this job once you are in. Mayor LaGuardia did escape but only because he had another occupation. Perhaps Mr. Henderson will have to go without his sugar. A. L. WILSON.

Lynchburg, Va., Feb. 12.

Volunteer Directors?

Air-raid wardens, auxiliary police and firemen, first-aid workers and many others are volunteering their services in the cause of civilian defense. There are many physical education teachers and recreational workers who have done special work with children who are fitted to take charge of groups of children during air raids, who would be only too glad to volunteer their services for such a cause.

Why should the public be burdened with heavy taxes to pay for the services of one Mayris Chaney who has never had such training? How many trained physical education directors get paid such a salary?

Until all of this unnecessary spending is cut to the bone, people are going to be disgruntled and this may cause the downfall of the greatest country in the world.

People like to volunteer their services. Why not start an organization of voluntary workers to do the type of work that Miss Chaney is being paid such a fabulous salary to perform?

After all, each one of us will benefit by defending our country, so why should any of us receive a salary for doing civilian defense work?

ELEANOR S. CROWFIELD.

Mrs. Roosevelt's Critics

I venture to suggest that Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt has rendered more real service to her country and to the American people than the sum total of service rendered by her nasty critics.

I do not say that all her critics are "nasty," but I do mean that most of them are either yelping, bellowing "hafers" or would-be humorists with an obvious vicious streak in them. Criticism which is honest and constructive is commendable, but Mrs. Roosevelt has received precious little of that brand.

The Dance

In the heat of resentment toward senseless waste and foolish allocation of hard-earned public monies in the face of so much grim war need, it is natural for the uncognizant to lash out stupidly and heap blanket opprobrium upon what they do not understand. I heartily agree, first things first.

But how atrociously laughable to label what has reached in our generation the proportions of a fine art as well as, more importantly perhaps, an almost universally recognized training of the utmost value toward physical fitness, as—of all things—fan dancing! Not that fan dancing and merely recreational dancing haven't their proper place. But I could wish in passing that such devotees will some day have the opportunity to see, let us say, a symphonic ballet and perhaps glimpse a different aspiration toward beauty. It is one of the things we are fighting for, to save to civilization the fine flower of our cultural development, to preserve to future generations the residue of our intellectual and esthetic progress. It is about all that does endure, and if art teaches us anything it should give us a lasting dedication to fight for the ideal.

I speak as a dancer, having had some years of intensive activity both in the department of art entertainment and the more educational application of dancing as physical training. Be this, do you know, Mr. and Mrs. Public, that most of the major schools and colleges throughout our enlightened land have a dance course given under their physical education department, which would, I am sure, tax the hardihood of the toughest old-style gymnast; and our academic leaders realized long ago the tremendous import psychologically as well as physically of the dance to human development not only for bodily coordination and health but toward quickened mind power, for mind and body are reflexive and react one upon the other. The race is to the swift and if we ever, as a people, have need to build, every man, woman and child of us, physical stamina, personal endurance, greater efficiency, poise and self-discipline, beyond our ordinary wont, certainly it is now in the succession of our cyclonic era. Basic scientific dance training is a practical, potent means thereto. I would see it taught in every school in the land and in wartime it can be one of the best behind-the-lines contributions for national and rational health of mind and body, as well as a moderator of emotional and nerve strain.

Yes—let us dance, those who can and will. But let us find the proper way and place for it. Let us do it as private individuals and in earnest, with a purpose other than just to amuse, dwelling not upon so much sweetness and light, nor putting a premium upon glamour, but taking hold soberly and with power of the rhythmic strength, health and beauty it can offer us. We will need it. MARY H. HOWRY.

Worth Salvaging

It is with a tightening of the heart that I looked at the photographs given in this morning's newspaper—for it is not a ship that I see there, but our beloved France in all her sad story.

She is slowly bending, forced to give way; she is lying there, exhausted, inert, "une epave," it seems. Nevertheless, we must not forget that there is still much beauty, usefulness and strength hidden in her hulk. Something well worth salvaging.

It will take many long hours of steady, patient effort to help her straighten herself out but I know that she will. And the day will come when we will see her in line, beautiful, proud, ready to perform any kind of duty.

The Post Impressionist

Citronella In a Minor

I treated myself to a symphony concert not long ago. I'll never know what made me do it. Nothing ever will again, amen.

The music was beautiful, but concert-going is not restful. Anyone with several years behind him of listening to radio concerts is completely untrained for the formality and discomfort of "live" concerts. What better way to enjoy the pleasure there is in rhythmic sound than at home, adorned in slacks, feet propped skyward, and munching, perhaps, a pear? (Apples are too noisy—anything less than fortissimo doesn't register above the apple.)

They don't let you eat pears at Constitution Hall (I haven't tried, but my intuition tells me), and I don't think the usher would like it if you propped your feet up on the back of the seat in front.

But radio listening is not alone responsible for this aversion to the concert hall. It goes back to Ravinia Park and grade school days. Any "graduate" of Ravinia Park is thoroughly unfit for the formality of the concert hall.

Ravinia Park was, until depression days, the summer opera place about an hour's ride from Chicago on the North Shore Electric. On Thursday afternoons members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, congregated in summer colony in Ravinia Park proper, gave children's concerts there.

And every summer Thursday, right after lunch, Verna and I got fare money from our mothers and hied off for Ravinia Park. Any spare nickels were invested in fresh peas, which we ate raw on the train. If the pods were crisp and green, we ate those, too.

Verna and I always sat in the same seats and by the end of our first season we had made friends with most of the regulars and had had three crushes apiece in rapid succession on (1) Mischa, whose father played in the orchestra; (2) Eric de la Marter, who conducted the orchestra; (3) an usher distinguished by a thick mop of dark hair.

Quite incidentally we learned to identify a large number of orchestral works of the less esoteric kind, and had had bushels of fun shouting answers to Eric de la Marter's questions during the session of program notes.

During intermission we would dash to the drinking fountain and back to our seats for a noisy interim of that flirtatious kind of rough house indulged in by the budding young.

After the concert Verna and I had a four-hour wait for the opera in the evening, but we were never at a loss for something to do. If we could find an unlocked door or window we explored the dusty recesses of the scenery warehouse; or we lay on the grass lazily comparing notes on the current crush; or played violent baseball in the far end of the park.

Toward evening, after settling ourselves on one of the benches just outside the confines of the concert hall, we began telling each other that next Thursday we would save out some of the peas against our growing hunger. Always just in time to save us from starvation, Verna's mother came laden with a basket full of picnic supper. We ate while the ushers were busy spraying citronella about the floor and seats to combat an expected horde of mosquitoes.

And that reminds me, the smell of citronella is another thing I miss at Constitution Hall. For me, music and the fumes of citronella are inseparable. At home, I imagine I smell one while listening to the other, but at Constitution Hall the ladies' perfume confuses me.

Toward opera time, we sat and watched our betters trail in to the paid seats, or we wandered off, leaving Verna's mother to hold our seats against all comers.

We heard Martinelli, Bourskaya, Volpi, Lucrezia Bori, Titi Schipa, and numerous others in a great variety of operas. We both liked "Martha" best, but everything was grist to our mill, and the sadder the better.

During intermission the kids used to foregather behind the concert hall to gawk at the stars and supers who came out for a breath of air in the small stockade adjoining the building. At close view they seemed grotesque in thick grease-paint and exaggerated features. There was much mi-mi-mi-ing and many ferocious arguments over whether it was b natural or b flat.

If, during the performance, we grew tired of sitting, we could wander about in the darkness and let the music float out to us. Music outdoors has a muted quality and even the more thunderous passages seem almost plaintive.

Toward the end of the season, when nights grew chilly, braziers of glowing charcoal were placed on the grounds around the hall, and at intermission people flocked to warm themselves.

After the performance there was a scramble for the waiting trains. At first people were gay and full of talk, but we all quieted down by the time we reached Winnetka, and some of us slept.

I will simply not mention such trivia as the fact that unless you were very tall or very short, your view of the stage from the benches was obstructed by a railing inclosing the hall. Nor will I mention the fact that some of the best arias were regularly drowned out by the hooting and rumbling of passing trains. The whole thing was all right with me, just as it stood.

But I couldn't let well enough alone, for some years after I stopped going, seized with a fit of nostalgia, even as this one, I asked my fiance to take me to Ravinia one summer night. We sat in boughten seats, hemmed in by grim music-lovers on every side. And we didn't like it. So after intermission we gave our stubs to two urchins and wandered off to the car, the dulcet strains of "La Boheme" trailing behind us.

This Question Of Morale

Portland, Oreg.

EVERYWHERE the same question is asked: How good is the morale of the people somewhere else? Having been to many places and seen many people I think the answer to the question is clear enough. The morale of the people is good when they are busy, excellent when they are very busy and poor to middling when they have nothing to do but think about the morale of someone else. There is no doubt left in my mind that since December 7 the people's support of the war has been the direct reflection of their feelings as individuals and as communities that they are being called upon to play an important part in the war.

LIPPMANN

Before December 7, when people were still confused by the false issue as to whether they would "intervene" in the war, when they had not yet fully realized that they had enemies who were planning and preparing to attack them, the problem of morale was very different than it is today. It was the problem of whether in the face of a danger that was not yet actual, and that many hoped and believed would never come, men and women would prepare for war by abandoning business-as-usual. Since December 7 the problem of morale has been how fast they would change over to the war work.

When morale is low today it is due to the delays and frustrations in mobilizing men and resources: The people who feel they are not used, who are sitting on the sidelines watching rather than working, are the ones who, naturally enough, are the victims of their moods. They are able to contribute to the war only their own feelings about it, and being audience rather than participants their feelings range from overconfidence to defeatism, from complacency and indifference to hysteria and anxiety.

THUS I have now seen a fair number of our great arsenals, airplane plants, navy yards, shipyards, and all I can say is that if anyone has doubts about what happens in this country when Americans have a definite job to do which they believe in, he can cure his doubts by visiting these arsenals, watching and talking to the men and the managers. The over-all planning and direction of our industrial economy is still far from adequate. But in the great plants themselves there is to be seen a genius for planning and organization and a talent for invention and adaptation which is beyond praise. I was in a shipyard the other day which 12 months ago was a mud flat, and in that one yard alone ships are now being produced at the rate which is a respectable proportion of the whole shipbuilding capacity of Japan. The men who are running this plant had formerly produced many great engineering works, but never ships, and the workers are in the great majority men who never before in their lives had worked with metal.

There is no question about the morale of the people engaged in such work. They have that sense of having mastered an urgent business which is the substance of morale, and they have plenty of the bravado that they are showing the world, which is the salt of American morale.

WHERE MORALE is far from being what it should be, it is almost invariably the fact that men are not being used on war work, or are being frustrated by the indecision or the incompetence of their superiors. The people are not withholding their support; where they are in a poor mood they are being denied the opportunity to contribute their support.

Thus one of the great sources of discontent is the slowness with which contracts have been placed to mobilize industrial resources that are relatively small, taken separately, but large when combined. Perhaps it was not possible to utilize them all immediately in the first stages of the war effort. But the quicker they are used now, the more we shall get not only materials of war but the full aroused moral energy of the people.

ANOTHER great source of discontent is frustration from on high. In some cases this is due to military commanders and civil officials who occupy places which every one around them knows ought to be filled by abler men. There is needed a much more rapid and ruthless retirement or demotion of men who got where they are by the rule of seniority or through politics. For these men throttle the energy and enthusiasm of better men below them and of better men who are kept on the sidelines.

Still another great source of discontent is the frustration of the really able men who are, so to speak, at the front by remote and often uncomprehending control from Washington. The rule, for example, that alien Japanese are to be treated as enemies but their children as patriots is the kind of ruling which just makes no sense at all in practice and on the spot. The effect of such rules is to create the impression that Washington does not know what it is doing but that it has an endless capacity to frustrate and inhibit men who are face to face with the realities.

Trouble In Egypt

By Theodore Levine

Farouk's Feud

BRITAIN FACES serious trouble once again in Egypt. This time it is diplomatic as well as military. While British imperial forces continue to fall back before the Axis counter-offensive in the Western Desert, a possible breach between Sir Miles Lampson, British Ambassador to Egypt, and 22-year-old King Farouk renders the situation in the Middle East increasingly ominous.

The resignation of the Egyptian cabinet may be seen as the culmination of a long-standing feud between the headstrong youthful King and the adamant British envoy.

Such diplomatic squabbles between Britain and her nonbelligerent ally Egypt furnish Dr. Goebbels' propaganda machine with the best ammunition possible in its tireless attempt to sever the unstable Arab world from their nominal support of the Allied cause. That the Nazis are taking full advantage of this opportunity to fish in troubled waters is obvious, judging by the intensification within the past few days of their propaganda broadcasts in Arabic. Naive, illiterate Egyptian peasants are again hearing via the German-controlled Athens radio station that Britain is trying to force them into a war in which they have no interest and that it may be necessary for the Wehrmacht to restore peace in the Middle East.

LAST WEEK, Egyptian schoolboys and university students took time out from their studies to commandeer all available trolley cars in Cairo, riding through the streets of the capital vociferously demanding the resignation of Prime Minister Hussein Sirry Pasha and his moderately pro-British government. Just what the students sought to gain by their demands is not clear, nor is it probable that they knew themselves. Nevertheless, student demonstrations in Egypt have always been the most reliable indication of general political unrest in that country.

The roots of the cabinet crisis extend as far back as 1937, when Farouk, then 17 years old, ascended the Egyptian throne and indicated clearly that he intended to run his country without any "friendly suggestions" from the British Embassy. Ambassador Sir Miles Lampson, who until that same year had the title of British high commissioner in Egypt, was not wholly receptive to this policy of the boy King, and a bitter personal enmity ensued.

Egypt's failure to declare war on the Axis even after its own territory was invaded in 1940 by Italian troops, represented a diplomatic defeat for Lampson, and served only to increase his apathy toward Farouk. Lampson led the London foreign office to believe that Farouk was the major force preventing Egypt's entry into the war, causing the King's loyalty to the Anglo-Egyptian alliance to be "not above suspicion" in Britain. London censorship authorities have allowed reports to be circulated in the press there that Farouk is strongly pro-Italian, the insinuation being that he is Egypt's potential Quisling.

THE BASIS for these reports, however, is very flimsy. It is true that Italian influence has always been very strong in the Egyptian palace, but this dates back to long before the days of fascism. The late King Fuad, Farouk's father, had been educated in Italy, spoke Italian more fluently than his native Arabic, and consequently surrounded himself with many Italian friends. After Fuad's death in 1936, it was only natural that the Italianized atmosphere should continue to a certain extent in the palace. Since then, however, Italian functionaries have gradually been replaced by Egyptians, until today they are nonexistent.

While it is not true that Farouk is pro-Fascist, the fact remains that he has no particular fondness for the British, whom he sees represented in the person of Sir Miles Lampson. Like most fellow-Egyptians, Farouk, rightly or wrongly, saw no reason for an actual declaration of war on the Axis. He felt that Egypt would gain nothing from such an act. Without having become a belligerent, however, Egypt today serves as the main base for the British imperial forces in the Middle East. In addition, Egypt has severed diplomatic relations with Germany, Italy, Japan, and very recently, Vichy.

It is the latter point which reportedly was the immediate cause of the latest cabinet crisis. Last month, the Egyptian government recalled its minister in Vichy, undoubtedly at Britain's suggestion. Since the days of Napoleon, French influence has played a considerable role in the cultural and economic life of the Nile Valley, and many Egyptians were reluctant to sever relations with an old friend.

THE GOVERNMENT of Prime Minister Hussein Sirry Pasha—one which for over a year has been acceptable to both the King and the British Ambassador—consequently lost much popularity. This week, Sirry Pasha's "health" suddenly gave out in face of a hostile Egyptian press and student demonstrations, and he submitted his resignation, which Farouk promptly accepted.

This development is interpreted in London as a sign of Egyptian hostility toward Britain and her allies. However, this is somewhat of an exaggeration. Among the Arab countries of the Middle East, Egypt is the one place where Britain can be reasonably sure of local support providing she plays her cards properly. She cannot afford to antagonize a popular King through an ambassador who still thinks of himself as a colonial administrator. But on the other hand, Farouk has not yet fully realized that Britain is fighting Egypt's war and he should not allow personal apathy toward one man to hinder the welfare of his people. By so doing, he is giving the Axis fertile ground in which to plant the seeds of more genuine Anglo-Egyptian dissension.

Australia In Crisis

By Bryton Taves
United Press Staff Writer

Parliament Called to Secret Session

Canberra, Feb. 13.—Prime Minister John Curtin today summoned Parliament into a secret session on February 20 at which he is expected to reveal new drastic war moves necessitated by the "tragic failure" at Singapore.

The decision to summon the legislators partly was in response to opposition demands for "the whole facts of what is being done," but it also resulted from the grave situation at Singapore, which the Sydney Morning Herald today said was "to Australia what the Maginot Line was to France and in the hour of crisis no less tragically has failed us."

There was tension in government offices as ministers anxiously awaited bulletins on the grim battle for control of the island stronghold.

Army Minister Francis M. Forde's demeanor was grave when he met newspapermen tonight. He declined to disclose details of the latest message from Lieut. Gen. Arthur E. Percival, commander at Singapore, or to comment on the situation beyond saying the British forces were fighting strongly against great odds.

AUSTRALIAN territory was free of war developments, but an R. A. A. F. communique said a single Japanese flying boat dropped bombs this morning on Tulagi, administrative center of Britain's part of the Solomon Islands, east of New Guinea, which fall within the Australian defense sphere. No damage was reported.

The lone raider apparently met with no resistance, for the communique said it reconnoitered over the small island more than an hour.

Whether the flying boat came from a Japanese base on New Britain Island, to the northwest, or from a warship was not known. The nearest enemy base, at Gasmata, on the south coast of New Britain, is about 760 miles from Tulagi.

All observers agreed that because of the Singapore situation Australia was on the eve of momentous decisions, more drastic even than the freezing of the economic structure announced Tuesday, to clear the decks for total war.

THE WAR cabinet and the war council are meeting in Sydney next week. Out of them, observers expected to come far-reaching developments to prepare Australia fully for her role as war base and supply center for the United Nations in the South Pacific.

Hinting at what these developments might be, authoritative quarters today underlined the significance of Curtin's statement last Tuesday that the new economic policy was only a "contribution" to the government's aim of a complete charter for total war effort.

Today's decision to summon Parliament into emergency session next Friday was taken as the first concrete evidence of the pending moves. A. W. Fadden, opposition leader, requested such a session yesterday after a meeting of opposition executives, but it was recalled that Curtin recently set his face against a similar request.

A further step to guard against sabotage was taken today in Queensland, the state occupying northeast Australia, nearest to the Japanese bases on the Australian island outposts in the northeast. Forde announced immediate imposition of a curfew for all enemy aliens from 8 p. m. to 5 a. m., daily.

Aussies Count on U. S., Cecil Brown Reports

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Cecil Brown, C. B. S. reporter, speaking from Sydney, Australia, declared today that because of the imminent fall of Singapore and the Japanese threat to the Dutch East Indies, Australians now feel there is only one method to ward off an attack on Australia herself—"they are counting on the United States to keep the Japanese out."

"The argument voiced most often," Brown added, "is that America should fight from Australia, not so much for this country as for America herself.

"If the Allies are driven out of Java and even northern Australia, then all of the vital bases for air attacks on the Japanese positions will be gone. The Japanese then must be attacked by sea from New Zealand, Hawaii and the West Coast of the United States, thousands of miles away."

BROWN SAID the impending loss of Singapore had brought from many Australian newspapers "the sharpest criticism against Great Britain's conduct of the war. . . . The kind of criticisms of the mother country which never have appeared here before.

"In the past few days scores of people have told me that the chaos, defeats and constant retreats must end and end at once. . . . Much of the people's bitterness comes from the fact that their men were forced to fight in Malaya and Singapore with very meager air protection. That hasn't gone down very well with a country which sent its men to Crete."

Brown said the Australian government "has just ordered complete organization of men and money for defense. They say that within six weeks the men and women workers of this country will be either in the army, engaged in war work or in essential industries."

But, he added, "the people here know that the salvation of this country depends on overseas troops and ships and airplanes from other countries."

More Grief For Poland

Nazis Screw Tightens

By Wide World

Bern, Switzerland, Feb. 3.—The Germans are reported reliably to have intensified efforts to crush the spirit of resistance in Poland, whose people already were under a more severe regime than any other conquered European nation.

New measures reported included:

1. Abolishing of Polish citizenship, making all Poles stateless in their own country.

2. Requiring all Poles over 15 years of age to register and carry identification cards similar to passports.

3. Closing of a greater part of Polish business firms, requiring former employes to do agricultural work.

4. Placing Poles who are working in Germany under a special penal law similar to that which applies to Jews.

GERMAN NEWS dispatches have confirmed that thousands of Polish businesses have been closed on the contention that more were operating than required to meet the needs of the people.

As an example, one newspaper cited the City of Lwow, formerly an important textile center. The city had 8950 business firms on September 1, 1939. Now it has 1910.

The Germans are reported to have taken most of the equipment from factories for use in Germany.

The situation is said to be especially difficult for Poles living in the Danzig-West Prussia area which is being incorporated into the Reich.

Gauleiter Forster, of this area, in a speech February 7, disclosed some of the measures being taken to "Germanize" this area whose population the Koelnische Zeitung concedes is "unfortunately" mostly Polish.

FORSTER SAID that "intellectual Polish leaders" all had been removed, and the masses left without spiritual leadership. The Catholic clergy is being watched closely, he declared, to see that no underground propaganda is possible.

He disclosed also that all gatherings of Poles had been forbidden—even of small groups.

Forster said that henceforth nobody in that area would be permitted to speak Polish, and that if farm laborers didn't understand German after 2½ years, it was time they did.

"The Polish language in these regions must be wiped out," he declared.

"As long as the last man, woman or child in these regions is not German, then we cannot talk of having made them an internal part of the German Reich."

Boettiger's Opinions, Then And Now

LAST SEPTEMBER, when the A. F. of L. was holding its annual hoodlums' old home week or national convention in Seattle,

PEGLER

John Boettiger, President Roosevelt's son-in-law, who is editor of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, ran an editorial note apologizing to the gorillas for printing these dispatches. But he said he believed in a free press even to the extent of running opinions with which he wholly disagreed and made himself out quite a fine, ethical fellow while, incidentally, assuaging the hurts of the union brown shirts who run Seattle as a Fascist-Bolshevist city.

Well, I am fond of repartee, myself, so I will go back to the time when Mr. B. was covering the White House in the first Roosevelt term. He was not yet the President's son-in-law but he was parking his dogs under the White House table every night and everyone understood that there would be chimes when the respective divorces of the parties concerned came through. So it was very amusing at the President's press conferences to see John standing there, strictly dead-pan, and hear him needling the President with heckle-stuff and read his pieces warning his countrymen of a conspiracy, led by the man who was about to become his father-in-law, to collectivize the whole Nation under his own name which meant that he either subscribed to these sentiments himself or was the sort of man who would sing any old song for a moderate salary, as Virginio Gayda chirps for Mussolini.

I AM a trifle tardy on the uptake only because this has been my first opportunity to check John's writings, done in the role of an informed and honest man, in the Tribune files but I can tell you now that you can finally mark off that old one about the leopard's spots. That one ain't so. The spots can change and change into a stripe, too.

It was in 1934 that John was almost alarmed about a dark conspiracy to make this country over by stealth into an imitation of the Soviet. Moley and Tugwell were the devils in his book but he was very suspicious of the whole professariat, as he called the brain trust, and, on his own hook, pointed out that the emblem of the TVA was a clenched fist grasping some lightning, which he likened to a Communist sign. He detected an underhanded attempt to circumvent the Constitution in the rewriting of the AAA, dug up and exploited a deleted passage from a book by Henry Wallace in which Wallace had an oblique good word to say for Lenin, Hitler and Mussolini, and threw into prominence an idea then being toyed with by the brain trust, that after taxation had reached parity with the profits of a private business, the business would surrender and the Government would take it over.

THE OBVIOUS suggestion was that the brain trust would raise taxes to parity and that all business gradually would be gathered into the hands of the state. And he was always in a high dither about the plot to gag the press by controls and pressure. He didn't trust that sinister New Deal any whatever, during his sparking days in Washington when he was working for R. R. McCormick, of the Chicago Tribune, but we can't very well suspect that he was in receipt of any brass checks from his boss along with his pay because that would call for a conclusion, as the shysters say. When a journalist puts his name over his stuff it means in our business and to the public that he pledges his honor and professional integrity that such are his own, independent opinions, not his boss's.

Mr. Boettiger and the President's daughter were wed and, after a brief layover at Will Hays' emergency landing field where the movie industry, so beholden to official power, provides food and shelter for some politicians and writers who get off course or unavoidably run out of gas, he was made editor of the Seattle P.-I., a Hearst paper, with a nice job for a wife, a newspaper novice, at a salary such as few newspaper girls of long experience and outstanding ability ever achieve.

BUT IT could not have been his political opinions, so oft and forcefully expressed in the Chicago Tribune, although it might have been his versatility, which appealed to Mr. Hearst, himself a versatile man, for Mr. Boettiger, meanwhile, had become a loyal and aggressive New Dealer. Today he could tear his own hide off in reply to the opinions uttered under his own good name and on his honor in 1934.

So I guess we know what his ethics and principles are. He told the wide world and it is all there for any man to see unless, some day, in fulfillment of the dark prophecy which he gave us then, the new order should purge the files here as in Italy and Germany.

Roosevelt to Speak At 10 P. M., Feb. 23

President Roosevelt will make a radio address to the Nation at 10 p. m. (E.W.T.), on February 23.

His press secretary, Stephen Early, said yesterday the speech would last about half an hour. He announced two weeks ago that the President would make an address late in February and would have something "important" to say.

Mr. Roosevelt is expected to report on the progress of the war effort.

The Gallup Poll

Majority Believe Liquor Regulations Are Too Lax in Their Communities

Are liquor regulations too lax? Is drunkenness increasing? The views of the American people on those questions are reported in the following article, the first of a series of two on the subject of liquor and prohibition.

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 13.—A slight majority of American citizens living in communities where liquor is sold believe that liquor regulations in their areas are not strict enough. More voters likewise think that drunkenness in their communities is increasing than think it is decreasing.

Those facts are revealed in a Nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion as dry forces prepare their campaign for a prohibition law in the new session of Congress. Because the public's attitude toward a new dry law would depend greatly on its views concerning present liquor regulations and drinking habits, the Institute has conducted a series of surveys on various aspects of the liquor issue.

Taking the problem directly to the public, the Institute asked a cross-section of voters this question:

"Do you think liquor regulations in your community are too strict or not strict enough?

This same question has been put to voters in previous surveys by the Institute dating back to 1936. A study of the trend shows a substantial increase since 1938 in the number dissatisfied with their local liquor regulations. Results follow:

	Too Strict	Not Strict Enough	About Right
1936	11%	39%	50%
1938	4	53	43
1940	7	51	42
TODAY .	6	55	39

Note that the number saying "not strict enough" has increased from 39 per cent six years ago to 55 per cent today.

A second question in the survey sought to determine the public's impression on the amount of drunkenness today than there was during the last years of prohibition.

The question was put to voters as follows:

"Do you think there is more drunkenness or less drunkenness in your community than there was ten years ago?"

Results were:

More	43%
Less	31
About the Same	26

These results will naturally raise the question whether the voters of the country want prohibition back again. On Sunday the Institute will report the results of its latest survey on the trend of dry sentiment in the country.

Indomitable Dutchman Escapes Nazi Prison on Fourth Try

By Wide World

London, Feb. 13.—They call him the "Dutch Houdini"—naval Lieut. Etienne Henri Larive, who escaped from German prison camps four times in 28 months before he managed to reach England to rejoin the Netherlands navy.

The story of how the 26-year-old officer evaded the vast Gestapo network and even helped two other Dutch officers escape, as told to Aneta—Netherlands Indies news agency—was released today by Netherlands censorship authorities.

But the methods he used to slip out of his last confinement—a heavily guarded camp reserved for prisoners recaptured after escape—were kept secret.

Fought at Rotterdam

Lieut. Larive was serving on the Dutch destroyer Van Galen at Rotterdam when that city was attacked on May 13, 1940. After the vessel had been set afire by German dive-bombers, he and a group of sailors managed to get ashore and fought for four days fought in Rotterdam's streets until the Dutch forces were ordered by their command to cease firing.

He was sent to the prison camp near Hamm, Germany, when he refused to sign a pledge not to take up arms against the Germans.

"From the moment the Nazi police picked me up I was determined to escape," he related. "When I got to Hamm I studied the prison set-up and worked out a plan.

"Regularly each day I noticed prisoners lined up in front of a shed outside the camp's barbed-wire enclosements to get packages which had arrived for them by mail. One day I joined this queue and while everybody was busy looking at some parcels I managed to change my officer's coat for a nondescript blue sweater and oilskin.

Hid Behind Straw

"I also obtained a basket full of straw, and this I put on my shoulder to hide my face. The ruse worked, and I walked unnoticed through a group of officials at the edge of the camp and made my way to town.

"At Hamm I changed some of my Dutch money for German marks and boarded a Munich-bound train. I was unable to buy a ticket at the station because I lacked the necessary identification papers.

"Somehow, I managed to dodge the conductor until we got to Ulm, where he caught me as I was leaving the train. He took me to the station master. After I explained most apologetically that I had left my ticket on the train, the official ordered me to leave the station and warned me to be more careful in the future.

"I continued on foot. Just outside Ulm I was challenged by a forest warden. To get rid of him I boarded a moving train, but was seen by a guard, who caught me."

Eight Months More

Larive said he then was taken to a concentration camp near Breslau, Germany, where he said 400 Hollanders and Belgians were confined. He was there eight months plotting an escape with another Hollander.

"I got out with a company of Belgians going for their exercise by wearing a Belgian uniform, but my companion lost his nerve, and I had to return to the camp.

"For my next escape I donned civvies and put on a pair of spectacles belonging to one of the prisoners. Thus disguised, I walked out of the camp. Later a German stopped me, however, and I was taken back."

He made another attempt, he said but was discovered burrowing through to a nunnery adjoining the barracks.

After this sortie Lieut. Larive said he was sent to the Colditz Camp, an old castle between Leipzig and Dresden where 450 Dutch, British, Polish, French and Belgian prisoners who had previously escaped from other prisons were guarded by almost 400 soldiers.

"The Nazis sought to incite quarrels among the various prisoners in order to break up any escape plots, but when this failed they made use of the severest punishments. They didn't even trust their own guards and supervisors and appointed a 'mystery' commissar to govern the prison."

Larive, however, made good his escape from this camp by undisclosed means and worked his way to England.

Free Polish Army Seeks Uniform Worn by Deserter

New York, Feb. 14 (INS).—New York police tonight were hunting for a brand new Free Polish army uniform with a deserter in it—and make no mistake, they wanted the uniform, not the man.

The strange assignment was revealed by Bronx detectives after they had received a request from Maj. Lozinski, of the Free Polish army in Canada, to locate one Murray Kadish, a Bronx boy who allegedly deserted the Polish force on October 1.

Chief worry of the Polish commander was that Kadish disappeared in a spanking new uniform, complete with cartridge belt and insignia.

"We're only interested in the uniform and belt, which cost $31," wrote the major. "We are not interested in Kadish."

Boyer Becomes Citizen

Los Angeles, Feb. 13 (AP).—Movie Actor Charles Boyer, native of Figeac, France, became a United States citizen today. Boyer joined the French forces at the outbreak of the war and was demobilized when France collapsed before the German thrust.

Spokesman for Regiment Rebukes Man for Saying, 'Midshipmen Are Notoriously Stuffy and Prudish;' Wonders if He Lost His Girl to Academy Student

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We at the Naval Academy feel that your correspondent of February 10, who signs himself "Man Reader," does the regiment an injustice in saying, "Midshipmen are notoriously stuffy and even prudish in passing judgment upon 'pure, sweet American womanhood.' Ask any girl who has 'dragged' at Annapolis, or who has read the fatuous 'Handbook for Drags,' distributed by these adolescent tin gods in brass buttons."

Here at the academy there are 3000 young men wearing brass buttons. Yet these "adolescents," so called, are preparing to give their lives to their country, should that sacrifice be necessary to preserve the American way of life. They are studying 12 hours a day to become naval officers in order to defend "the four fredeoms" (including freedom of speech) for persons like "Man Reader." The average age of the midshipmen is 21, and many of them have given up chances at more lucrative professions to serve their country. Can they fairly be called "adolescents?" Doesn't it strike you that this self-styled "man" is merely a jealous boy who has lost his girl to a "tin god in brass buttons?"

His unconvincing scorn is loosed at "Midshipman's" statement, published February 7, that "nearly any man, if he is honest, will admit that he prefers the woman of his choice to be a nonsmoker." This midshipman truthfully voiced the sentiment of the regiment regarding a provocative topic. We think, on the average, that a woman is lovelier who does not smoke. But we like women too well—perhaps because we see them so seldom—to let our preference in this matter spoil our friendships with girls who happen to be smokers. Let's put it this way: A man may not consciously like a girl less because she smokes, but he will unconsciously like a girl a great deal more for not smoking.

Midshipmen are far from being prudes. Just the reverse, I would say. But even if one midshipman's views on the subject of smoking,—or anything else,—had labeled him a prude, is that any reason for insulting with ridicule 3000 men in the same branch of service? Don't get us wrong. We are not "crushed" at being called "adolescents." But we are righteously indignant at this slap at the regiment. Our advice to so-called "Man Reader" is to cheek again with the girls who "drag at Annapolis," and see whether they find the midshipmen a bunch of stuffed shirts who choke on tobacco smoke. Yours truly,

IRATE MIDSHIPMAN.

Impact of Our View Stymies Crank Reformer

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You have been of considerable help to me and I cannot let the occasion pass without thanking you. "Baffled Husband's" complaint about his wife's smoking might have been written by my husband. After 15 years of marriage, our one and only standing quarrel turns on the fact that I insist on smoking against his wishes.

I refuse to be bullied out of the habit; and have become extremely nervous and irritable as a result of his harrassment. It is trying indeed to have a cigarette snatched out of your hands by your "conscience keeper," under the gaze of others. Nowadays, I get away from my husband as much as possible, in order to enjoy a relaxed evening during which I can light an occasional cigarette without creating a "scene."

I read your first article on the subject of smoking aloud to my husband, in tones so emphatic that they probably could be heard for blocks around. The impact of your views softened him considerably. Now, I am planning to read aloud to him the "thank-you" reply from "Baffled Husband," (which you published February 11.) I am hoping that this man's sensible acceptance of your reasonable counsel will cause my husband to follow suit, —thus putting an end to a family quarrel that is fast becoming unbearable.

I wish to convey my hearty congratulations to "Baffled Husband," for having the wit to see that the whole structure of his otherwise perfect marriage could have been ruined by his "reformer's complex;" and for being big enough to act on the advice you gave him. May you flourish forever, Mary Haworth. Sincerely,

GRATEFUL WIFE.

Central Mission Auxiliary Has Birthday Party

Uncle Sam and Miss Columbia were dominant figures at the twentieth birthday celebration held last night at the Calvary Baptist Church by the Evening Auxiliary of the Women's Guild of the Central Union Mission.

In keeping with the general patriotic theme, the seating was arranged at 13 tables to represent the original colonies. General chairman for the event was Mrs. Mervyn H. Lanham, immediate past president, and Miss Marjorie Webster, president of the auxiliary, master of ceremonies.

Mrs. Jessie H. Hunter, chairman of the hospitality committee, had the following to preside at these respective State tables: Pennsylvania, Mrs. Katherine Fettus; Connecticut, Miss Cassie Cook; Maryland, Miss Eva McQuinn; New York, Mrs. Alice Ricks; South Carolina, Miss Mary Chisolm; New Hampshire, Miss Bernedene Hull; Virginia, Miss Eleanor Watson; Rhode Island, Miss Lora Young; Delaware, Miss Ruth Failer; North Carolina, Miss Mabel Hutchins; Massachusetts, Miss Willie Gallagher; New Jersey, Miss Helen Boss, and Georgia, Miss Effie Brodnax.

'Phantom Dinner' Will Aid These Tots

These bright-eyed nameless youngsters are one of the big reasons for the Phantom Dinner held throughout the month of February by members of the Board of Lady Managers of House of Mercy. Proceeds from the dinner go to provide care for unmarried mothers and their babies. Mrs. I. W. Hill (left), one of the members of the board, assisted by Mrs. John W. Club Roundup

By Genevieve Reynolds

YOU'D THINK that any group of young club members' chief interest would be social—beaus and dances. Not so, with the Venture Club here, composed of business girls from 19 to 29. Its members' vital interest is civic and defense problems.

Although the members are doing their bit for national defense—donating blood and perfecting first aid—emphasis this year will be placed on civic projects, according to Miss Isabel MacDonald, youthful president of the club.

MISS ISABEL MACDONALD

"We feel," she stated, "since most clubs in Washington are concentrating on the war effort, we can accomplish more by continuing our civic projects."

Outstanding project that the club plans for the immediate future is the furnishing of a girls' study and playroom at the Children's Emergency Home of of Central Union Missions. Also, it expects to lay a new floor in the combination study and playroom. In addition to this work, Venture members replenish the library of Camp Bennett, which they established previously, with current books. Last year, the club redecorated the clinic, gave books, a victrola, orthopedic bed and playground equipment to the Children's Emergency Hospital as part of its civic work.

The Venture Club is the child of the Soroptimist—or rather the juniors in grooming for future membership. It follows the same civic pattern.

Mme. Chautemps to Be Guest Pianist On Alliance Francaise Program Monday

GIFTED Mme. Chautemps, wife of M. Camille Chautemps, former Premier of France, will be the guest artist on the all-musical program of the Alliance Francaise de Washington, Monday afternoon at 4:30, at the Sulgrave Club.

MME. CAMILLE CHAUTEMPS

Assisting Mme. Chautemps is a trio composed of Milton Schwartz, first violinist; Paul Brightenburg, second violinist, and Howard Mitchell, cellist, members of the National Symphony Orchestra. The trio will play a group of eighteenth century numbers, while Mme. Chautemps will offen two groups of French piano selections.

First prize winner of the Paris Conservatory of Music, Mme. Chautemps has appeared many times as soloist with the Paris Symphony Orchestra. She will interpret the works of Saint-Saens, Chabrier, Faure, Ravel and Debussey and the string trio will give the "Suite praise de la Deuxieme Recreation de Musique," by Jean Marie Leclair (1697-1764).

Mme. Chautemps and her husband are now making their home in Washington.

Ohio Girls Club to Fete Mrs. Burton

MRS. HAROLD H. BURTON, wife of the Ohio Senator, will be among the new members honored at the Ohio Girls Club tea, Sunday afternoon, 3 to 5 o'clock, Women's City Club. Honor guests include the new members and brides of the past year.

MRS. HAROLD H. BURTON

Mrs. Robert A. Taft and the wives of the Ohio Congressional delegates also will be among the honored guests, as will be Mrs. Heber Votow, sister of President Harding; Miss Mary Haworth, Post columnist; Miss Harriet Root, information service of the White House, and Miss Mary Carter Roberts, of the Star.

During the afternoon a musical program will be given. Miss Martha Montgomery is chairman of arrangements for the tea. Assisting her are Miss Mary Fausnaugh, Mrs. Grace Young and Mrs. Florence Shockey. Miss Avista Huber is chairman of the reception committee.

Many to Attend Lithuanian Ceremonies

TOMORROW will be a busy day for many "club-goers." Members of the American Lithuanian Society and their friends will attend mass at 10 a. m. at the Immaculate Conception Church, Eighth and N Streets Northwest. Following mass, there will be the annual breakfast at the Willard Coffee Shop. The Minister of Lithuania, Povilas Zadeikis, and Mme. Zadeikis, will be honor guests of the society. After the breakfast the program will be continued at the home of one of the members of the club. This meeting observes the short-lived independence of Lithuania . . . . Mrs. Jack Stearns is hostess at first of a series of teas, 5 to 7 o'clock, at her home, 5 West Leland Sireet, Chevy Chase, for the D. C. Branch, National League of American Pen Women.

Miss Lindsay Speaks

IT'S MUCH easier for a woman to roll a bandage or drive a motor car in behalf of democracy than to practice its principles in her personal, social and club life, Miss Malvina Lindsay told members of the Congressional Club at a tea yesterday afternoon at their clubhouse. Miss Lindsay, editor of the Woman's Page of The Post, and author of "The Gentler Sex" column, emphasized the intangible contribution that women could make toward winning the war. She pointed out that women, by their "high school" social snobbery and race, class and religious prejudice, injured the cause they were fighting for. She declared woman's supreme contribution to victory would be a mental attitude of strength, cheer, hope and faith in tomorrow. Mrs. John Taber, president of the club, presided and Mrs. W. M. Whittington introduced the speaker.

Alumnae Plan Dinner Party

First large social affair in a long time for alumnae of George Washington University is the colonial dinner party scheduled for 6:30 Wednesday evening, February 25, at the Y. W. C. A.

Hostesses in colonial frocks will greet the guests. Mrs. Jessie Fant Evans will review the colonial setting of the university. Mrs. Betty Burnett Wiens, class of '39, will play a group of Southern songs on her accordion.

Although not a benefit, the party will feature the campaign for a Women's Activities Building at G. W. A skit, prepared by Mrs. Louise Espey, '25, will present the need for such a building. The skit will be given by students at the university under the direction of Anne Blackistone, president of the Student Council.

Mrs. Ermyntrude Vaiden Stearns, vice president of the George Washington Alumni Association, is chairman of arrangements. Dr. Grace B. Holmes is chairman of invitations and Mrs. Bertha Lockhart Clark heads the hostess committee.

Make Rag Rug Colonial Style

AN OLD-FASHIONED rolled rag rug—to lend a cozy New England charm to your room. Crocheting the rolls together is easy spare-time work—and you'll feel so economical, using up old scraps and worn-out clothing!

For fabric use wool, silk or rayon—or a combination of them all will be fine. The rug in our picture mixes brown and white with multi-colored strips of green, beige, blue and brown.

Cut woolen fabric into strips two inches wide, the thinner fabrics wider to keep the roll uniform. Fasten the end of a strip to a firm object, pull taut and roll, basting firmly with needle and thread. To add extra strips, place an end about one inch inside the strip you're working with and roll the two together.

To start the rug itself, twist end of roll into a loop as in Diagram 1 and tack with brown crochet cotton.

Then, with your crochet hook, single crochet about 16 stitches over loop, leaving end of roll on wrong side. For the second row, continue looping roll around center, chain stitching 1 and single crocheting 1 in each stitch of last row. For the third and all succeeding rows, chain 2, single crochet 1 in chain of last row.

Finish rug by turning under end of roll and whipping to under side. If you add a lining of sturdy cloth such as denim, you'll enjoy your rug—and your friends will admire it—for a long, long time!

Send 15c (plus 1 cent to cover cost of mailing) for our booklet, "New Ideas for Hand-made Rugs," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post Home Institute 100 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Democratic Women To Honor New Members

THE WOMAN'S NATIONAL Democratic Club will give a tea in honor of the 42 new members this afternoon from 4 to 6.

Mrs. Curtis Shears, president, will receive with the membership committee, including: Mrs. Harlee Branch, Mrs. Frank Buck, Mrs. A. S. Monroney, Mrs. Charles Fahy, Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, Mrs. Thomas Sebrell, Mrs. Wesley Zane, Mrs. John Toland, Mrs. St. George L. Sioussat, Mrs. C. H. Scott, Mrs. James Craig Peacock, Mrs. Richard Stokes.

The guests will be introduced by Mrs. Stanley O'Conner, chairman of membership. Presiding at the tea tables will be:

Further Hints On Making Home Livable

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THERE is something almost unbelievable about the way life continues in its familiar routine even through the most devastating events. Though most people in the world will be affected by the outcome of the present war, a comparatively few numerically take part in its action. That, of course, is why civilization persists, even through tremendous crises in the world's history.

So women in their homes who feel "out of it" may take courage in the share they have in making tomorrow's world—partly by the kind of children they bring through these grim days, partly by the enduring pattern of life they hold together. To readers' problems, therefore, we still lend a sympathetic ear, for they too have their place in today's events.

"Defense Job" Apartment

Mrs. I. O. writes about a two-room "defense job" apartment she's recently taken. "The kitchenette must be hidden behind a screen. This screen is very plain looking—will you suggest ways to make it more interesting? If it should be covered with wall paper, what kind of paste?"

Why not collect menus, maps, match covers, music of favorite songs, flower prints, college stickers—or something of personal interest to cover your screen with? Or a pretty wall paper would be fine—use wall paper paste and lots of clean rags and old newspapers to insure a neat job.

To Clean Chintz

Mrs. K. S. writes: "I want to clean glazed chintz so as to preserve the glaze—it does not have a permanent finish. Can you tell me how to do this?"

The only thing to do is to dry-clean your chintz carefully—this may take off some of the glaze but it won't affect the finish nearly as much as washing. Then you can have it reglazed by a professional—there is no way to do a reglazing job satisfactorily at home.

Some Wartime Valentines

For the woman who's not a hoarder
Of sugar or stockings or wool,
Who faces fate side by side with her fellows,
Seeking no special bounty or pull.

For the woman who serves with her rivals
Without feuding over which will be boss,
Seeing only the goal looming brightly,
The details as so much dross.

For the woman who buys bonds and not bangles,
To keep up the fighters' morale,
Who proffers prayers rather than parties,
To prove that she's Uncle Sam's pal.

For the woman who performs the small duty
Without uniform, title or rank,
Who in kitchen and office and factory,
Day by day upholds the home flank.

Today's Social Notes
(From The Truthtowns Torch.)

Mrs. Pennyroyal Rockwood Whiffle has just come out from her long social retirement to proffer her services to the Nation as an organizer. During the last war, Mrs. Whiffle, who was then the Countess de Menthe, was honorary chairman of a fashionable canteen in Paris. In her youth, as Angelica Spondulix, she was a famous beauty and was once courted by the Maharajah of Fez.

"While Mrs. Whiffle, of course, dislikes publicity," said a spokesman for the family yesterday, "she feels that her great organizing talents should not be idle at a time when her country needs them." The spokesman added that Mrs. Whiffle would be willing to "organize anything, or anybody provided, of course, she had an abundance of clerical and secretarial help."

Because of a deficiency of vitamin D, Mrs. Sinbad Smith-Smythe has temporarily abandoned her work as chairman of the Emergency Committee to Aid Torpedo Boat Victims and will go South to sun for several months.

Famous figures of the periods just before the French Revolution, the Fall of the Roman Empire, the Russian Revolution and other lavish eras of the past, came to life at the Ball of Waterloo (formerly the Emerald and Champagne Ball) last night at the Hotel Swank.

'Sound of Revelry'

There were at least half a dozen Marie Antoinettes present (Mrs. Thornberry Flitt flew home from Palm Beach to be one) and Louis XVI was represented by both Philander Plunkette and Montgomery Aspic. Appearing as Charlotte Corday, dagger in hand, was Mrs. Alexander Rhumba.

In the role of Emperor Nero, carrying a fiddle, was playboy Buzzie Bellwether. Tiffany Treacle came as Charles II of England and Mrs. Slinker Hopping (recently named by Mrs. Treacle in her divorce proceedings) as Nell Gwyn.

DeWitt Leer, recently married to deb Daphne Dizzard, was one of the scores of Napoleons present. He was confronted repeatedly during the evening with at least two of his former wives, Mrs. Percheron Leer and Mrs. Uppercut Leer, in the roles of the Empress Josephine.

There were dozens of Casanovas present. Henry the VIII and his wives appeared at every turn. Ethelbert Vanderpuffer, convalescing from his last stroke over the tax situation, appeared as Atlas in a tiger skin. The great majority of the feminine guests went as Mme. DuBarrys and Southern belles.

Parasite Patrol

Truthtown notables are organizing a Parasites' Patrol to resist with force any movement to oust them from the town to make room for defense workers. Due to the comparatively small number of able-bodied men in the patrol, dowagers and debs are to be accepted for active service. Mrs. Badminton Bellwether, commander of the Ladies Parachute Patrol, now drilling at Palm Beach, has telegraphed she will bring her division back to assist in a defense blitzkrieg if the situation becomes urgent.

Dr. Orlando Birdsong, society ornithologist, Col. Carter Lee Randolph Standish, noted genealogist, Col. Artemus Slepp, octogenarian dancer, and Huntington Rhinestone, gourmet and man-about-town, are leaders in the movement. Mrs. Buffington Birdhaven is in charge of recruiting. "We are not ready to announce any definite plans until we decide on our uniforms," said Mrs. Birdhaven yesterday.

Art of Relaxation Is Best Aid In Keeping Young, Says Actress

CAN you imagine an actress who does not yearn to be a star? Well, neither could I before I met Una Merkel, screen and radio actress. But the way she sees stardom—"it's like being President, an obligation as well as a privilege."

She is satisfied that she has had just enough recognition to enjoy it without any of the worry that goes with being a star. So the next time you are inclined to feel down because you are not at the very top in your career, you might think over that angle.

Contrary to the popular notion that all Southerners take life easy, Una enjoys hard work and claims that she is the world's prize worrier. And yet she is one of the youngest looking women for her age group I have seen. She appears to be about 24, or under, and that just couldn't be.

Relaxes in Bath

How to account for that? Her ability to see the bright side, coupled with a naturally sunny disposition, probably has a lot to do with it. Also, for a tense person, Una manages to get in a good deal of relaxing. When she is very keyed up, she takes a bath. "A bath is relaxing, one of my favorite luxuries," she says. Several nights a week she goes to bed at 9 o'clock. "If I can't sleep, I read. I figure I'm getting the rest and that is almost as good as sleep." And in the course of her acting career she has picked up the knack of dropping off to sleep for a few minutes at odd intervals during the day.

Una is no argument for exercise. "I guess I'm just a spectator at heart—not even that because I don't care a thing about watching other people! I do like to walk, when there is something to see." But in her own way she gets plenty of exercise. While I was talking with her, the phone rang about 20 times and she ran—she apparently prefers to go at a trot—to answer it, then ran back.

She doesn't have any trouble keeping her weight down because she says she has a small appetite. She also has some good food habits. "I like plain foods. I eat very few sweets. I love bread and butter and potatoes, and soups of all kinds. You can have the fancy foods. Just give me a bowl of good soup!" She has a slight frame and although she weighs only 106 pounds for her height of 5 feet 6, it does not seem too little.

Record Marriage

You will be interested to know that Una and Ronnie Buria have been married for 10 years—which is something of a Hollywood record. She says, "I'm fortunate in having a husband who is not in my business, and who gets a kick out of what I am doing." Mr. Buria is assistant to the vice president of an aviation concern and Una says that "I see him less often these days than if he were in the Army!" She believes the reason there is so much talk about Hollywood divorces is not because there are more of them, but that they are more spotlighted.

You can't beat this girl for personality. She is not the exotic, mysterious type. She is something more rare—a home girl who has made good. And by the way, she is very much prettier, with her red hair, blue eyes and flawless skin, than the screen pictures her. In case you are not posted, she is playing the leading role in a current radio show.

Manufacturer Makes Gloves of Reclaimed Rubber

PERHAPS the recent ban on using rubber for women's household gloves seemed like a minor thing. But to the women who buy 12 to 15 million pairs of rubber gloves every year to protect their hands while washing dishes and doing other tasks which roughen, chap, crack or discolor the fingers and hands, the OPM order of no more rubber for household gloves was definitely bad news.

Now comes good news. One of the makers of rubber gloves has found a way to make good household gloves wholly of rubber reclaimed from, of all things, old tire inner tubes. These new gloves are indistinguishable in feel and appearance from the familiar household rubber gloves.

It's a good idea to take special care of household gloves to make them last. After using, always clean them to remove all traces of grease and be sure that gloves are clean and dry before putting them away. Dusting them with talcum powder or cornstarch aids in putting on or taking off gloves. Avoid pulling or stretching against sharp fingernails. Gloves last longer when stored away from daylight, preferably in a drawer or carton.

Slit Skirt Trend

QUESTION: I have a smart-looking, man-tailored suit in dark Oxford gray twill. The jacket is the typical one-button type, but the skirt has two slit pleats at the side. Are slit skirts being worn this spring? If not, what kind of a skirt would you suggest to go with the jacket?

ANSWER: As a high style fashion, slit skirts have not been worn for several years. There is every indication they may return, however. The London designer, Charles Creed, has several side-slit skirts in his last collection. With the slim skirt continuing to be in vogue, it is possible that we may see more slit skirts in the future.

Even now conferences are being held with the Government in an attempt to decide whether or not a limit will be put on the number of yards of material in an outfit. If this ruling comes about, skirts are likely to take to slits and ingenious draping to facilitate movement. Many of the peg-top skirts, one of the newest spring silhouettes, have concealed side slits at the hem.

In the light of future trends, if your suit is well tailored and is of good material, wear it by all means.

How to Buy Slacks

QUESTION: Before I buy my first pair of slacks, I would like to know what type of trouser legs are most popular. Personally I have always admired the style that tapers in close at the bottom. Most of the ones I have seen have medium wide legs.

ANSWER: While slack legs are roomy at the cuff, they are much slimmer than those of a few years back—the kind that flapped in the breeze. The style generally depends on the purpose for which they are to be worn, however. For gardening, slacks that taper in from a peg top to slim legs, would be uncomfortable. Whereas, if the slacks are to be used for bicycling, they need to be narrow at the bottom to prevent catching in the wheel.

These narrow-bottom slacks are known as "frontier pants" and hail from the West. One store has them in corduroy. The slim flannel slacks with a narrow cuff are more popular than frontier pants, however, and are considered the best all-purpose buy.

Traveling Light

QUESTION: Since I have to be on the road two weeks at a time, I virtually live out of a suitcase. While I contact the "home town" type of people, I have to look presentable. Do you have any suggestions on short cuts for a man who must travel with a limited amount of clothes.

ANSWER: The suit buyer for a local haberdashery suggests that a suit made of worsted twist fabric be the first consideration. (Right now suits are available with two pairs of pants, but they may not be next year.) Such a suit holds its press and will meet the casual type of person.

Three short cuts are—detachable shirt collars, French cuffs and knitted or wrinkle-proof woolen ties. These all save time and often extra cleaning bills if facilities are limited in a small town.

Proper luggage is another time and money saver in the long run. Luggage called the "two-suiter" or the "fortnight" bag is suggested. Trousers may be taken out and hung up on the same hanger.

Polish Envoy Arrives For Conferences Here

By Carolyn Bell

Washington—the world's capital in name—is becoming that in fact. Visiting foreign ministers from Allied capitals, as well as those from refugee governments, are paying Our Town visits quite regularly these days.

Latest arrival is Count Edward Raczynski, Polish Foreign Minister, who came to Washington yesterday for conferences with the President and other high officials. Although he was expected here, the suddenness with which these visitors appear on the Washington scene is somewhat startling.

There will undoubtedly be a reception—as well as several informal gatherings—at the embassy on Sixteenth Street. The Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowska will be hosts early next week honoring the distinguished Count Raczynski, who technically speaking has the title of acting Minister of Foreign Affairs as well Minister to London. He has served as Minister to Great Britain for his country for about eight years. Earlier in his career, Count Raczynski headed the Polish delegation to the League of Nations in Geneva. Raczynski—one of the best known names in Poland—is also familiar in the field of diplomacy. His brother Roger Raczynski served as Ambassador to Rumania before relations between that country and his own became strained to the breaking point.

Mirta Batista To Be Honored

Traveling with Count Raczynski is Count Michael Potulicki, who is Counselor at the Embassy in Poland. He too has been in the diplomatic service for a number of years and formerly served at the foreign office in Warsaw. Incidentally he is a cousin of chic Countess Lasocka, wife of the Attache here. Completing the party is the Minister's secretary, Antony Balinski.

Just about all the social headlines these days are being made by visitors—from other lands. Having the whirl of her young life is Senorita Mirta Batista, young daughter of the President of Cuba, who is spending the weekend in Washington. She will be feted at a party this afternoon at the Embassy when the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Concheso will be hosts from 5 until 7 o'clock. Some 25 couples—mostly from the young set—have been invited to meet the engaging young senorita. Last night, chaperoned by Senora de Concheso, she was a guest at the Allied Victory Ball at the Mayflower Hotel and on Monday she will be in New York for a banquet at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Argentinian Guest of Garretts

Still another visitor making news is Senora de Santamarina, who according to someone who should know "is one of the great beauties of Argentina." Yesterday Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, entertained at a small luncheon honoring Senora de Santamarina, who is the house guest for several days of Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett.

The wife of one of Argentina's famous sportsmen, Senora de Santamarina has been in New York and is only briefly visiting the Capital. Owners of a large estate in Argentina, the Santamarinas divide their time between Buenos Aires, where they also have a large house, and their ranch, where they raise cattle. Mr. Santamarina, who is well known as a polo player, is brother of "Dickie" Santamarina, widely known on the East Coast, where he has often played polo with the visiting Argentine teams.

Comdr. E. H. Fritzsche Weds Mary Grogan

The marriage is announced of Miss Mary Louise Grogan to Commander Edward H. Fritzsche, United States Coast Guard, in New York City on February 10. Commander George E. McCabe, United States Coast Guard, was the best man and Mrs. McCabe was matron of honor.

Mrs. Fritzsche is the daughter of Harley H. Grogan, technical aide, United States Coast Guard, and Mrs. Louise M. Grogan, both of Washington, D. C. The bride's brother, Commander Harley E. Grogan, United States Coast Guard, is a classmate of Commander Fritzsche.

Commander Fritzsche is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Fritzsche, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Miss Slater, Peter Heydon Are Betrothed

Although it's been an open secret for the past month, the engagement of Peter Heydon, Second Secretary of the Australian Legation and Miss Naomi Slater is announced today by the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Leonard Slater of Ottawa, Canada.

The couple will be married at a quiet ceremony on March 7 in Christ Church Cathedral, in Ottawa. Following a brief honeymoon they will make their home in Bethesda where they have leased a house.

Miss Slater, who has been working at the Australian Legation for the past season, is well known as an amateur ice skating champion. She attended St. Hilda's College, a part of the University of Toronto. Mr. Heydon, who has been stationed in Washington since the Australian mission arrived nearly two years ago, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vigor Heydon, of Sydney. He was graduated from the University of Sydney.

Kelly-Coakley Engagement Is Of Interest Here

Of wide interest here is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Kennedy Kelly to Henry Beckman Coakley, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Coakley, of Ohio. Mrs. Cornelius F. Kelly, of Larchmont, N. Y., and Springfield, Vt., has announced the betrothal.

The bride-elect was graduated from Trinity Preparatory School and Trinity College. She received her M. S. degree from the school of journalism, Columbia University.

Mr. Coakley attended Canterbury and Georgetown Preparatory Schools and Georgetown University. He is now training at Randolph Field, Tex.

Party Honors Mrs. Haskell

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel was hostess at a luncheon in the Presidential dining room of the Mayflower yesterday in honor of Mrs. Clinton H. Haskell, of Chicago, who, with Mr. Haskell, is spending several days in Washington. Preceding the luncheon, cocktails were served upstairs in Mrs. Daniel's Mayflower apartment.

Among the guests were Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mrs. Walter F. George, Mrs. James Hughes, Mrs. Josiah Bailey, Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, Mrs. Wallace Dempsey, Mrs. Strickland Gilliland, Mrs. Percifor Spillsbury, Mrs. George Brainerd, Mrs. W. W. Sloan, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. James Souby, Mrs. Ralph Smith, Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, jr. and Mrs. Baldwin F. Cook.

In spite of which, though she travels by plane, Mrs. Fairey is not pilot-minded, but is pretty completely wrapped up in their two children, John, 7, and Jane, 4, who are here with them at Wardman Park Hotel . . . They have been here for a little over a year, and expect to stay "for the duration" . . . Their home, Woodlands Park, at Ivey Heath, Bucks, near London, was almost destroyed by bombs, and their country estate, "Bossington House," in Stockbridge, Hampshire, has been taken over by the WAAFS for the duration . . . Since she has been here Mrs. Fairey has been diverting her talented fingers from the fine tapestry and needlepoint that occupied her before the war, to knitting for those in the service . . . Mediumly tall, with golden-brown hair, blue eyes and a quiet voice, she prefers to keep her costumes simple, tailored things for daytime, conservative, well-cut lines for evening, with black and white high on her list of favorite colors . . . loves country life, and riding, but is too fond of animals to hunt, is fond of reading and now and then enjoys a good fishing trip.

Mme. Wessel, Mrs. Richberg Give Parties

Always a favored form of Capital entertaining, small luncheons took over a sizable share of the social spotlight yesterday. Mme. Karl Wessel, wife of the Swedish Military Attache, entertained seven guests in her home on Foxhall Road. At the same time Mrs. Donald Richberg was gathering in a small company in honor of Mrs. Bollons Nix, of San Antonio, Tex., and Mrs. William E. Levis, of Toledo, Ohio.

Mrs. Thurman Arnold, wife of the Assistant Attorney General, was ranking guest of Mme. Wessel's luncheon, which is one of a series of parties she has been giving since she moved into her new home. Spring blossoms centered the table. Matching the bright colors of the blossoms was the Swedish national costume worn by small Ann, daughter of the hostess, who put in a brief appearance as guests gathered.

Hostess to Speak In New Haven

Table talk turned on a variety of subjects. Mrs. Edward Stettinius asked Mme. Wessel when she would be off to New Haven, Conn., to make a speech before the League of Women Voters. Mme. Delos Emmons and Mme. A. Bredo Stabell, wife of the Norwegian Second Secretary, talked about the local housing situation, and Mrs. Emmons observed that she was planning to move soon to an apartment she has recently taken at the Wyoming. Mrs. Crosby Miller and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin talked about the defense effort, and Mrs. Miller said her chief contribution to it was the teaching of first-aid to a colored group in Warrenton.

Somebody else asked Mme. Wessel again about the speech she is scheduled to give in New Haven soon, and learned that it is to be on February 20; that she is going to talk about her native Sweden. ("But nothing political," she interpolated.) While in New Haven, she will be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Wesley A. Sturges, who formerly lived in Washington and then returned to Connecticut when he resumed his position on the faculty of Yale Law School.

Honors Shared at Richberg Party

Meanwhile, as Mme. Wessel's guests were enjoying her pleasant party, a company of exactly the same number was on hand to meet Mrs. Nix, who came to Washington recently to visit her son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Richard Tide Coiner, jr. She is here for an indefinite stay, perhaps a couple of months, and by her own admission is spending her time "just playing around. But," she added merrily, "I'm not a parasite . . . really."

Mrs. Levis, who insists that Toledo is her home, could almost be called a real Washingtonian. She and Mr. Levis took an apartment at the Carlton in March when her husband came to Washington at the call of OPM. He is a chairman of the board of the Ohio-Illinois Glass Co. "But home is still Toledo" to Mrs. Levis, who dashes between here and the Ohio city almost every other week.

Luncheon-time guests at La Salle du Bois noted that two George Howes were at one table. One was George Howe, the well-known Washington architect; the other was George Howe, of Philadelphia, who recently was made Government supervising architect in Washington. At a nearby table, a luncheon foursome included Mrs. Christopher Bramwell, Lady Rumbold, Mrs. Robert Pell, and Mrs. Bartle Bull.

Dance Planned By Wiedemanns

At a Valentine dance tonight Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Wiedemann will entertain a large group at their home on R Street.

Guests will include Mr. and Mrs. Claude Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Leef, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Maphis, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lupton, Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Miller, Mr. and Mrs B. L. Royal, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Sinclair, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Sparks, Mr. and Mrs. P. O. Wilkinson, Maj. and Mrs. G. Withers, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Terry and Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Woods.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mrs. Timothy Ansberry will entertain at a tea today in honor of her son's bride, Mrs. Peter Ansberry.

Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim have issued invitations for a cocktail party on Wednesday, from 5 to 7 o'clock. The fete will take place aboard the yacht Firenze, now anchored at Maine Avenue and Twelfth Street Southwest.

Mrs. Lawrence Westbrook was a luncheon hostess at the Army-Navy Country Club yesterday.

Dr. and Mrs. David Davis will entertain at dinner this evening at their home on Colorado Avenue.

Count, Countess Cassini Feted At Cocktails by Younger Set

Between 5 and 7 o'clock yesterday afternoon, members of the Capital "younger set" streamed in and out of the Woodland Drive home of Miss Betty Stewart-Richardson at the cocktail fete which she and Miss Muriel Maddox gave in honor of Count and Countess Oleg Cassini.

Standing in line to receive the guests, Miss Stewart-Richardson wore a corsage of white camellias on her black crepe dress suit and Miss Maddox wore a smilar corsage on the shoulder of her blue frock. Countess Cassini—better known as Gene Tierney of film fame—topped her simply-cut black crepe dress with an off-the-face black hat trimmed with a perky green feather. Her corsage was also of camellias.

Dropping in during the afternoon, just like any other guests, were the parents of one of the hostesses, Maj. and Mrs. R. M. Stewart-Richardson. Other guests included the Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Hugo Gouthier, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Moulton, Mr. and Mrs. James O'Grady, Mr. and Mrs. James Holman, Miss Sita Finkenstaedt, Miss Elaine Darlington, Miss Betty Lou Kaufman, Miss Ruth Dove, Judson Bowles, Harold Fangborner, William Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. David Robertson and John Amory.

Still others were Miss Kitty Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Randall Hagner, jr., Clifford Mallory, Mr. and Mrs. J. Conway Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson, Miss Eleanor Flood, Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn, Miss Eleanor Meem, Miss Ruth Hurley, Lieut. Charles Sullivan, the Misses Marion and Peter Norris, Miss Nora Kusek, Chris Boland, Miss Suzanne Slingluff, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz and a number of others.

Soldier to Wed Granddaughter Of Rep. Mansfield

Augusta, Ga., Feb. 13.—Miss Dorothy Mansfield, granddaughter of Representative Mansfield, of Texas, tomorrow will become the bride of Sergt. Chester Lee, who is stationed at Camp Gordon near here.

The ceremony will take place in the Camp Gordon Chapel at 4 p. m. with an Army chaplain officiating.

Miss Mansfield, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Bruce J. Mansfield, arrived here late today. She has spent most of her life in Washington, and is a graduate of the Immaculate Catholic seminary.

Sergt. Lee, became a member of the armed forces more than a year ago. In civilian life he was the proprietor of a gift shop in Wildwood, N. J., and also had business interests in Philadelphia. The couple met two years ago at Atlantic City.

Party Will Honor Engaged Couple

Miss Carolyn Holt and James Felton Head, whose marriage will take place Saturday, February 21, at the Sixth Presbyterian Church, will be honored today at a cocktail party given by Mr. Head's sister, Mrs. Edwin H. Lawton.

Miss Marjorie Harrington will be hostess at a cocktail party in their honor tomorrow afternoon and Mr. and Mrs. George Edward Muth, of Westgate, Md., entertained at a supper for them last evening.

Nancy Masten, Gardner Abbott Twice Honored at Parties

Winding up the prenuptial festivities before their marriage today in the St. Mary's Chapel of the Washington Cathedral, Miss Nancy Lee Masten and Lieut. Gardner Abbott, jr., were guests of honor twice yesterday. Following the afternoon wedding rehearsal, Miss Jane Davis entertained at a cocktail party in the Massachusetts Avenue home of her father, Senator James J. Davis, and last night Mr. and Mrs. Abbott, parents of the prospective bridegroom, were hosts at a dinner at the Shoreham.

Miss Davis received her guests at the 5 to 7 o'clock fete wearing a black crepe and lace dress which boasted a lace hood, and Miss Masten had also chosen a black lace frock. Assisting the hostess was Mrs. Thad Brown, jr., as well as a group of others whom Miss Davis informally pressed into service.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Abbott, Willard Abbott, Julian Abbott, Mrs. William S. Masten, mother of the bride-elect, the Misses Priscilla and Suzanne Masten, Miss Marion Naffziger, of San Francisco, who is a house guest of the Mastens; Miss Mary Laird, of Salem, N. J.; Lieut. John O'Brien, of Youngstown, Ohio; Lieut. Armand Giguere, Lieut. Norris Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Guy de Keller, Mrs. William MacCoy, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. George Carter, jr., of Baltimore, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hardy, of Pittsburgh.

Others included Mrs. Robert Goheen, of Wilmington, Del., who is the house guest of Mrs. Guy de Keller; Miss Pamela Goss, of Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hoeveler, of Pittsburgh; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Farrington, of Cleveland, and a number of "younger set" guests from Washington.

Mrs. Northwood Fetes Miss Coan, Wilfred Leclaire

"The more the merrier," Mrs. Joseph King Northwood reassured herself, and bravely invited about 30 guests to her apartment at the Park Central yesterday for a party before the wedding. The wedding is that of Mrs. Northwood's niece, Miss Margaret Genevieve Coan, and Wilfred Brassard Leclaire, which is slated for today at 4 o'clock at Holy Trinity Church.

Mrs. Northwood already has two house guests who arrived here in time for the party, and of course the wedding. They are her sisters, Miss Margaret Rose Coan and Mrs. Albert R. Shefpo, both of Chicago.

Yesterday's party followed the rehearsal, so members of the wedding party were there in full force. Jumping the gun by only a few hours were the decorations, which were red and white in St. Valentine's memory. Carnations in those two colors added their note to the scheme.

Just a few of "the 30" there were the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Emil Joseph Leclaire, whose home is in Oxford, Mass.; John Richmond Coan, brother of the bride, who came from Camp Lee to give her in marriage, and Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Leclaire, also of Oxford.

Couple Celebrates 25th Anniversary

On the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding, Mr. and Mrs. E. Griffith Waters entertained last night at an "after 8" party at their home in Silver Spring. More than 70 guests came in during the evening to tender their good wishes to the couple, who have spent 23 of their married years in Silver Spring. They were married in Frederick, Md.

White tapers in silver holders cast their soft light over the red and white roses which centered the table for the occasion. Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Helen Giblo and Mrs. Leo Beek, both of Silver Spring, and Mrs. Frank Wilson, of Layhill, Md.

Martin Calls Chicago G.O.P. Parley April 20

Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr., yesterday called a meeting of the Republican National Committee to be held in Chicago on April 20.

"The committee usually meets each year in Washington, but owing to the crowded conditions in that city it has been decided to hold the gathering in Chicago," Martin said.

Last fall Martin had called a meeting of the committee in Washington in January but postponed it after war broke out on December 7.

Plans for the fall Congressional campaign will be laid by the national committee, Martin revealed.

The Republican chief informed colleagues that every effort will be made to capture the House from the Democrats and as many Democratic Senate seats as possible. Since only a third of the Senate seats are to be filled in the November elections and the Democrats hold a majority of the total 96 seats, it will be impossible for the Republicans to capture the upper branch of Congress.

Martin, who also is Republican leader in the House, considers that the recent statements by President Roosevelt and Chairman Edward J. Flynn of the Democratic National Committee on the election, leave the Republicans free to seize as many seats in Congress as possible.

President Roosevelt only recently called for election of persons to Congress, regardless of party, who have supported and will support the war program. Flynn said in a radio speech that the election of a Congress hostile to the President's program would equal a major military defeat.

Martin insists that the Republicans are backing the war program of the President but he reserved the right of his party to criticize conduct of the war, which it considers subject to improvement.

As a part of Martin's plan for the campaign, he named Harvey Jewell, jr., National Committee member from South Dakota, as chairman of the subcommittee on young Republican activities. Jewett succeeds Samuel F. Pryor, jr., who resigned as National Committeeman from Connecticut. Kenneth Bradley, a former chiarman of the Young Republican National Federation, was named by the Connecticut State Committee to fill Pryor's place on the National Committee.

Barkley Dooms Congress' Pensions

sional Record from which he was reading the Virginian's statement.

"I will draw my own conclusion, and let the Senator draw his," O'Mahoney retorted.

"The Senator draws a false conclusion," Byrd asserted. "I will say that here or at any other place."

Byrd called for a copy of the Record. O'Mahoney resumed his reading.

"I will let the Senator look over my shoulder as I read," O'Mahoney offered.

"I do not care to look over the Senator's shoulder," Byrd said. "What I said about the bill is the truth. It may be that some Senators do not like it, but it is the truth.

"I say with all the frankness and candor of which I am capable, that I know nothing which has discredited the Congress of the United States in the public mind to a greater degree than did passage of pension legislation."

Byrd accused the Civil Service Commission of yielding to "political pressure" in issuing a statement denying his assertions, the truth of which it later admitted.

Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, declared he was informed that subscribers' reaction to the pension issue was responsible for a sharp drop in defense stamp sales by carriers for a large Middle Western newspaper. Sales of defense bonds and stamps slumped 31 million dollars in the first 11 days of February, Treasury officials disclosed. They blamed publicity given Congressional pensions and "frilly" activities of the Office of Civilian Defense.

Barkley informed the Senate that he would have voted against the bill had it been possible for him to have been in the Capital when the measure passed the chamber January 19. He called the action "untimely and unfortunate."

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, said he was kept from the floor by a heavy cold but would have voted against the bill.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, complained that newspapers failed to publish the list of Senators who voted against the bill, and that he is being "cussed" by his constituents although he voted "no."

Musolit Club Pays Tribute to Lincoln, Douglass

The figure of Lincoln is "a lighthouse that will continue to beam through the ages," Senator Alexander Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, declared at the Musolit Club's fortieth annual Abraham Lincoln-Frederick Douglass celebration last night.

Douglass, the noted Negro leader, was eulogized by Bishop A. P. Shaw, of the Baltimore conference of the Methdoist Church, as a slave who broke his bonds and a maker of history who solved many problems of his race by the excellence of his character.

Both Lincoln and Douglass, Wiley said, became great leaders by sheer merit.

Perry W. Howard, club president, was toastmaster. Other speakers were Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, A. E. Lichtman, Dr. Emmett J. Scott, James A. Cobb, Dr. William J. Thompson and George H. Murray.

U. S. Seaplane Rescues Nine Adrift 12 Days

Hamilton, Bermuda, Feb. 13 (AP).—A United States seaplane made a difficult landing in the sea 160 miles off Bermuda Wednesday and rescued nine British seamen who had been drifting 12 days in a lifeboat after the torpedoing of their tanker near New York January 31.

Four of the nine seamen were still being treated in a hospital for sunburn and exposure tonight. They said they had been separated from two other lifeboats and had drifted hundreds of miles when rescued.

To Save Tires

Henderson Backs Lower Speed Limits

Reduction of speed limits as a means of saving rubber tires was indorsed yesterday by Price Administrator Leon Henderson at a press conference.

All States have been asked to reduce their speed limits and autoists can expect to face further compulsory reductions even "more drastic" than those now being provided for by law.

"It is amazing how long tires will last if they are not driven fast, and are kept properly pumped up and taken care of," he said. "It can make a tremendous contribution in saving rubber and gasoline," he stated.

Henderson praised The Post for starting its newspaper campaign to persuade motorists to drive more slowly in the interest of saving rubber and saving lives. The fourth of a series of articles on the possibilities of the program appears in this issue.

"I am tremendously grateful for the campaign and I hope other media will consider it," he said.

He pointed out that a stockpile of 1,200,000 tons of rubber was now on automobiles in active use and should be conserved. Warning those who would underestimate the seriousness of the rubber situation, he stated that 631,000 tons of an annual rubber consumption of 1,700,000 tons formerly came from Malaya, which is now in Japanese hands.

He said he was "very encouraged" by reports received from the American Automobile Association and other agencies concerning efforts to conserve rubber.

A 'Daily Dozen' To Save Your Tires

Already Connecticut has reduced the limit from 50 to 40 miles an hour and asked cooperation of the courts in vigorous enforcement of the lower limit. Many Massachusetts cities have established 25-mile limits. In Arkansas it was cut from 60 to 50 recently.

New Rules Considered

New Mexico State officials are reported to be considering prosecution of those who speed on tires which are in unsafe condition. Maryland's State traffic safety committee is issuing a pamphlet on reconditioned tires and safe driving.

Legislatures of Virginia and Mississippi, in session this year, may revise speed limits downward. A bill before the Virginia Assembly would hold passenger cars and buses to 45 miles an hour and trucks to 40.

If this national sane driving campaign takes hold, lives are going to be saved, as well as rubber. And the tire pinch will have proved to be an inconvenience not unmixed with blessing.

Benjamin Schrider Funeral Services Will Be Held Today

Funeral services for Benjamin Frank Schrider, 76, life-long resident of Silver Spring and Takoma Park, who died Thursday at his home, 713 Sligo Avenue, Silver Spring, will be held at 9 a. m. today at Church of the Nativity, 6000 Georgia Avenue, with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Schrider was the owner of an automobile and tire business in Takoma Park until his retirement a few years ago. He was a member of the Holy Name Society of the Church of the Nativity.

He leaves eight children, John, of Wheaton, Md.; Frank, James E. and William E., of Washington; Mrs. Francis M. Sullivan, Joseph C. and Alfred, of Silver Spring, and Maj. Peter P. Schrider, of the Marine Corps at Quantico, Va.

Funeral Rites Are Held for Alois Holderith

Funeral services for Alois Holderith, 70, retired Department of Agriculture horticulturist, who died Monday at his Arlington, Va., residence, were conducted Thursday at Chambers Georgetown funeral home. Burial was in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mr. Holderith, who was born in Alsace-Lorraine, was assistant horticulturist of the royal gardens of Buckingham Palace, London, before coming to this country in 1900.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Agnes M. Holderith; two daughters, Mrs. Agnes M. Claxton and Mrs. Frances R. Hitt, of Washington, and a son, A. Burke Holderith, of Arlington.

Charles B. Smith, Veteran Newsman, Is Dead at 65

Charles Brooks Smith, 65, oldest member of the Congressional Press Galleries, died of a heart attack last night in his apartment at 1650 Harvard Street Northwest.

Since 1913 Mr. Smith had been Washington correspondent for the Wheeling (W. Va.) Intelligencer and 12 other West Virginia newspapers. Before coming to Washington he had been editor of the Parkersburg (W. Va.) News. His father, Charles Brooks Smith, was a member of the Fifty-first Congress. He belonged to the National Press Club and the Elks.

He leaves his wife, Mildred Mayhall Smith, and a stepson, Lieut. Comdr. F. Kent Loomis, U. S. N.

The body will rest today and part of tomorrow in the Birch funeral home, at 3034 M Street Northwest. Funeral services and burial will be Monday in Parkersburg.

Roosevelt Assails Critics of FSA in Poll Tax Controversy

President Roosevelt and organized farm leaders yesterday took the offensive against critics of the Farm Security Administration for its policy of allowing poll-tax payments as legitimate items in the budgets of FSA's destitute Southern farm clients.

The President told his press conference he had acted on a false premise in stating Tuesday that he believed FSA should not pay poll taxes. That premise, he said, was that these taxes were being paid directly by the agency, whereas FSA merely permits them to be included among necessary living expenses on which loans are based.

All kinds of taxes are a part of farm budgets and poll taxes properly are included, the President said. FSA Administrator C. B. Baldwin meanwhile repeated at a joint economy committee hearing at the Capitol his explanation that FSA loans are made to bolster meager farm incomes and that there is no way of determining whether poll taxes are paid from the farmers' own money or with Federal funds.

The President took direct issue with Southern Congressional critics of FSA by denouncing the levying of poll taxes as a means of denying voting rights to many impoverished persons in the South.

Baldwin, a Virginian, was questioned closely by Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, about his attitude toward poll taxes in that State. Balwin said he believed it be "highly improper" for FSA to pay Virginia poll taxes directly.

"I don't think it has been done and anyone who does it should go to jail," Glass declared. "I would warn you not to go into Virginia and pay anybody's poll tax or loan money for payment of poll tax."

Glass then read penalties of the Virginia constitution and statute for payment of poll tax by persons other than the voter. He said:

Presents Detailed Reply

"The trouble is you are giving them (FSA clients) freedom to vote when the constitution and statute say they haven't the right to vote."

Baldwin presented the committee with a detailed reply to charges made at a previous hearing by the American Farm Bureau Federation.

"We are charged with an attempt to build up pressure groups so as to maintain our appropriation and so as to develop community support for our program," Baldwin observed.

"This I flatly deny."

Baldwin scored the Farm Bureau's investigation of FSA as less than "preliminary." The "most prodigious effort" made by any of its investigators, he declared, was that made by W. C. Carr, a Chicago lawyer, "who spent three weeks or less, and, as a result, is now put forth as an authority on the program of FSA in the States of Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas."

Murray D. Lincoln, executive secretary of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, joined the defense of FSA with a statement which observed that FSA is "concerning itself with . . . tragic substandards of living." He told Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, he did not know whether the Farm Bureau authorized the charges against FSA made by its president, Edward A. O'Neal.

With James Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, and H. L. Mitchell, of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, he joined in opposition to poll taxes. Mitchell substantiated charges made at a previous hearing that Southern tenant farmers were made members of the Farm Bureau without their own knowledge and with dues paid from their AAA benefits.

Police Boys' Club Builds Youths Strong in American Ideals

Sportsmanship— Twenty-four basketball teams flourish among the five Police Boys Clubs. Gymnasiums are located in Precincts 2, 4, 10, 11 and 5. Here Freddy Caponiti, acting as referee, starts a game

Boxing— Sportsmanship and strict adherence to the rules of boxing are impressed upon two 45-pounders by Club Director Sergt. Forest L. Binswanger. Boxing is one of the most popular sports activities on the club program

Band— The Police Boys Club has its own brass band and it's one to be proud of. Billy Kilmer, 15, attired in a snappy uniform, plays the big sousaphone with gusty gusto

Club Asks $100,000 To Continue Its Work

Though admittedly an uphill fight, with war demands coming first, the 1942 campaign by the Metropolitan Police Boys Club for $100,000 forged ahead yesterday with total contributions of $31,981.

The volunteer campaigners met to report yesterday in the National Press Club auditorium, and were told by Ralph Goldsmith, the drive chairman, that any bad news of the war should be accepted as another reason why the drive to keep the five clubs functioning should succeed.

It is a reminder, he asserted, that all the totalitarian powers have trained their youth—and that America's youth should be cared for, trained in America's ideals. Mrs. Roosevelt, he announced, has sent a contribution with a letter supporting the work.

A total of $26,645 was reported at the previous meeting.

Salute the Flag At Camp Brown

Since 1934, when Maj. Ernest W. Brown, then Superintendent of Police, got the idea that policemen could work with boys sympathetically and so divert them from crime, the organization has expanded into five clubs with enrollments of more than 17,000 and a summer camp among its recreational facilities.

This camp, at Scotland, Md., accommodated 1410 boys last summer, a number covering not only boys sent to the camp from the police precincts here, but also 248 sent there by the Schoolboy Patrol. There were 131 Negro boys sent to Camp Lichtman, of the Y. M. C. A., by the Police Boys Club.

The activities emphasized by the organization encompass all the ranges of boys' inclinations, it was pointed out yesterday. In camp they learn to swim and play fair in rugged games, in the clubhouses here they're taught to box, to draw and paint, do work with their hands, and to play in the band, when they qualify. It keeps them off street corners, out of alleys.

Crime figures among them have tumbled, the police records show. The police want to keep up the good work.

Games— A marked improvement on juvenile delinquency has been made in the District by the clubs. Game rooms and libraries in several precincts keep boys occupied

Camp— "Aunt Eva" Wiggington, camp mother, was pictured last summer reading to members at Camp Ernest W. Brown, Scotlanland, Md., named for former police chief

Travel— To transport boys to and from games and parties, there is the trusty station wagon, shown loaded with members of Club No. 4. Let's give them a good send-off

"A MIGHTY FORTRESS IS OUR GOD"
- - MARTIN LUTHER - -

A mighty fortress is our God.
A bulwark never failing.
Our helper He, amid the flood
Of mortal ills prevailing
For still our ancient foe
Doth seek to work us woe;
His craft and power are great;
And armed with cruel hate,
On earth is not His equal

This immortal hymn was inspired by the 46th psalm. It played a most important part in the growth of the Christian church. for Luther's hymns, contrary to the doctrines of the Church, were written in the tongue of the common people. Each hymn was a Reformation sermon.

New Pastor To Be Greeted At Calvary

The Rev. Clarence W. Cranford tomorrow will be welcomed as new pastor of Calvary Baptist Church.

He will speak at 11 a. m. on "The Word and the World" and at 8 p. m. on "The Gospel's Answer to Loneliness." John B. Abraham, chairman of the pulpit committee, will present Mr. Cranford to the congregation at the morning service.

DR. CRANFORD

A reception will be tendered Mr. and Mrs. Cranford Thursday following the midweek prayer service. Members of the congregation, as well as the city's ministers, are invited to attend the function, which will begin at 9 p. m.

The Mary C. Carr Evening Circle will hold its annual February supper meeting Monday evening with Miss Mary E. Haynes as program leader and Mrs. J. C. Quarles, a missionary from Mendoza, Argentina, as guest speaker. Miss Helen C. Lee will be soloist.

Berean to Hold Memorial Rites For Rev. Rivers

The congregation of the Berean Baptist Church, Eleventh and V Streets Northwest, tomorrow at 11 a. m. will hold a memorial service for the Rev. David Foote Rivers, pastor from 1898 until his death in 1941.

DR. RIVERS

Dr. W. Stuart Nelson, dean of Howard University's School of Religion, will deliver the eulogy and remarks will be made by the Rev. Dr. Walter H. Brooks and the Rev. Dr. J. L. S. Holloman. Tributes also will come from Mrs. M. Otwiner DeMond, Sunday school superintendent; Jesse J. Madden, of the board of trustee; Dr. Albert Johnson, of the board of deacons, and Mrs. Alice N. Williams, representing the people of the congregation.

Mr. Rivers was born July 18, 1859, in Florence, Ala.; educated at Rogers Williams University, Nashville, where he later was a teacher. He served two terms in the Tennessee State Legislature. Before coming here he served pulpits in Clarksville, Tenn., and Kansas City.

Dr. Sheerin to Open Sermon Series

At the request of several members of his congregation, the Rev. Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, rector of Epiphany Episcopal Church, tomorrow at 8 p. m. will launch a series of six sermons on the theme of "What Does a Christian Believe?"

Issuing a statement about the series, Dr. Sheerin said, in part:

"So many people have written or spoken to me that in all of the confusion of the present world they have not known what the teaching of the Church of Christianity is. It is my hope that these addresses will try to answer some of the questions that are in people's minds. Each Sunday night, after the service, there will be a question box in which anyone can anonymously place a question that he wishes to have answered sometime during one of these addresses."

Rev. Eyler to Address Ash Wednesday Rites

The Rev. Armand T. Eyler, rector of St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, will address Ash Wednesday services at 8 p. m. at the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, Sixteenth and Newton Streets Northwest. Other Ash Wednesday services will be at 7:30 and 10 a. m.

Ash Wednesday Services To Usher In Lenten Period

Ash Wednesday services throughout the city during the coming week will usher in Christianity's most sacred period—Lent. Easter will be celebrated April 5—40 days later (Sundays not calculated).

Lenten season services have been arranged by the Washington Federation of Churches, the Southeast Interchurch Council and many individual Protestant and Catholic groups.

The federation will hold services each Wednesday during Lent at 5 p. m. at Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G Street Northwest, with the Ash Wednesday speaker as the Rev. Dr. Charles B. Foelsch, pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle. The Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church and chairman of the Federation's Public Meetings Committee, will preside at the services.

Preaching on subsequent Wednesdays will be the Rev. Dr. Carroll C. Roberts, pastor of Ninth Street Christian Church, February 25; the Rev. Dr. Clarence C. Cranford, new pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, March 4; the Rev. Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, March 11; the Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, March 18; the Rev. Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, rector of Epiphany Church, March 25, and the Rev. Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, of Mount Pleasant Church, April 1.

Interchurch Services

The Southeast Interchurch Council's Lenten services will be held daily, except Saturdays and Sundays, from 12 to 12:30 p. m. at the Penn Theater, Sixth and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast. The Ash Wednesday speaker will be Dr. Warren D. Bowman, pastor of the Washington City Church of the Brethren.

Epiphany Church will sponsor Lenten noonday services from 12 to 12:30 p. m., Mondays through Fridays, with the Rev. Dr. Hulbert A. Woolfall, rector of St. Peter's Church, St. Louis, preaching this Thursday and Friday.

Protestant prayer groups of the city will hold services every Thursday during Lent at 10:45 a. m. at Calvary Methodist Church, Columbia Road near Fifteenth Street Northwest.

Upper Sixteenth Street churches have arranged Lenten services for Wednesdays at 8 p. m., with the opening service on Ash Wednesday at 8 p. m. at Sixth Presbyterian Church, Sixteenth and Kennedy Streets Northwest. The Rev. William Pierpoint, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Church, will preach on "The Spirit of Intercession."

Brookland Methodist

Brookland Methodist Church, Fourteenth and Lawrence Streets Northeast, will sponsor a Lenten institute on February 19 and 26, and March 5, 12, 19, and 26. Respective leaders of the devotional services will be Dr. John R. Edwards, Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer, Dr. Paul F. Douglass, Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, Dr. Edward G. Latch and Dr. James Shera Montgomery. There will also be suppers and fellowship study groups.

Chevy Chase Protestant churches will hold Lenten services Thursdays at 8 p. m., with the opening program February 19 at Wesley Methodist Church. The speaker will be Dr. Harris E. Kirk, of Baltimore.

Welles Tells Of Amazon Valley Plans

By Carlos C. Nagel

Copyright, 1942, by the Chicago Sun

A project for the development of the vast Amazon Valley was confirmed by Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles yesterday.

Plans have been drawn in considerable details by Government experts here for the proposal which is officially known as the "Amazon Basin development project" and which affects an area of over 2,600,000 square miles of territory in the heart of Brazil.

This proposal was presented by Welles to the President of Brazil during the recent Rio conference. It has been followed up by the Brazilian financial mission headed by the minister of finances, Dr. Arthur de Souza Costa.

Rubber Growth Planned

Welles declared yesterday that conversations between the State Department, other governmental offices and the Brazilian mission have brought complete agreement on a series of negotiations related with the development of rubber production in the Amazon Valley basin; had secured for Brazil the necessary equipment for essential industries indispensable in war times and will tend to facilitate the procurement of strategic materials to aid the United States defense plans.

Plans made here contemplate the sending to Brazil of a large group of experts and technicians. Experts in the development of rubber production, some of them already under way to South America, have come from the East Indies and Sumatra.

The mission of these men, according to Brazilian official members of the mission here, would be to study the possibility for the exploitation of rubber, vegetable oil, fibers and plants of medicinal value.

Sanitary Measures Seen

Scientists, experts in tropical diseases, will undertake to minimize the dangers of malaria and other tropical illnesses for the benefit of the army of laborers to be recruited in the coastal regions of Brazil. Until now the basin of the Amazon has been avoided by imported labor, but sanitary measures, the government of Brazil believes, will guarantee a top production that may reach to 80,000 tons a year.

Outside of the waterways communications furnished by the Amazon and its numerous tributaries, the government of Brazil will receive cooperation from the United States in the development of land and air communications with the interior.

Third Cavalry, Of Fort Myer, Will Move to Georgia

The Third Cavalry, based at Fort Myer, Va., since the early 1920s, will be transferred this month to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., near Chattanooga, Tenn., the War Department announced yesterday.

Organized in 1846 as a regiment of mounted riflemen, the Third won the title "Brave Rifles" from Gen. Winfield Scott in the Mexican War. Since it was stationed at Fort Myer, it has taken part in practically every parade and ceremony in Washington and has furnished part of the guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Maj. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright and Maj. Thomas H. Trapnell, awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for gallantry in the Philippines in the present war, are former officers of the Third Cavalry.

Hepburn Disclaims Slurs at U. S. Fleet

Toronto, Feb. 15 (Canadian Press). Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario said today that what he told the Ontario agricultural council in an address yesterday was "it is admitted by naval authorities that Japan at present has naval supremacy" in the Pacific.

Hepburn said he did not say "the Japanese have a much better navy than the United States."

Hepburn said he also had told the council that "as long as the present situation holds, the United States Fleet would not venture to attack" the Japanese fleet, but did not say that "it would not dare to attack" the Japanese fleet.

U.S.W.V. to Honor Memory of Maine Victims Today

The United Spanish War Veterans will hold memorial services today for the 255 officers and men who died on the battleship Maine when it exploded in Havana Harbor on February 15, 1898. The services will be held in Memorial Continental Hall, Seventeenth and D streets Northwest, at 2:30 p. m.

Preceding the memorial service, wreaths will be placed at the base of the Maine mast in Arlington Cemetery. Wreaths have been presented by President Roosevelt, National Spanish War Veterans Commander Joe R. Hanley, of New York; Dr. Aurelia F. Concheso, Cuban Ambassador, and four U. S. W. V. organizations.

Dr. Concheso and Past Commander Halsey B. Leavitt, of North Carolina, will speak at the afternoon services.

Service Here To Honor Capt. M. S. Bennion

Memorial services will be held here tomorrow for Capt. Mervyn Sharp Bennion, the man to whom Secretary of the Navy Knox is believed to have referred to when he told of the battleship captain who "displayed the outstanding individual heroism of the day" at Pearl Harbor.

BENNION

The services for Capt. Bennion, formerly first counselor in the bishopric of the Chevy Chase congregation of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, will be at 7 p. m. in the Washington Chapel of the church at Sixteenth Street and Columbia Road Northwest.

J. Reuben Clark, first counselor in the presidency of the Mormon Church, will be here from Salt Lake City for the services and is expected to speak. Clark is Capt. Bennion's father-in-law.

The program will include remarks by Ezra T. Benson, president of the Washington Stake; Riley A. Gwynn, bishop of the Chevy Chase ward, and Elder J. Willard Marriott.

Capt. Bennion is believed to have been the battleship captain whose stomach was "laid completely open by a shrapnel burst" as he emerged from the conning tower to the bridge of his ship when the Japanese attacked December 7. Refusing to be carried to safety, the dying captain continued to direct action.

Because of the services, the regular 7 p. m. recital at the Washington Chapel will be canceled. The choir of the Chevy Chase Congregation will take part in the memorial program.

Mothers-to-Be Receive Advice On Use of Tobacco, Liquor

By the Associated Press

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 13.—A sudden halt in smoking may in some cases be more harmful to expectant mothers than the habit itself, a prominent obstetrician reported today.

Although heavy smoking during pregnancy is "always harmful," Dr. Howard F. Kane, of George Washington University, said in an address prepared for the Midsouth Post Graduate Medical Assembly, "it is debatable as to which is mor harmful, the use of tobacco or the nervous reaction incident to stopping its use."

Dr. Kane said smoking by women has become so prevalent during the past ten years that 80 of every 100 expectant mothers must be advised of its effects.

These effects are an increase in the fetal heart rate and excretion of nicotine in breast milk, he said.

But, he added, investigations have indicated six cigarettes a day are harmless, while 20 or more are "always harmful," and between the two figures "the likelihood of harm varies with the individual."

Theoretically, alcohol should be forbidden absolutely to expectant mothers, he said, but actually "no harm seems to follow an occasional cocktail or glass of wine." More than two drinks on any one occasion, however, should not be allowed, he said.

Advising women in early stages of pregnancy, Dr. Kane said they should eat something "every two hours by the clock." They should learn "the sick stomach is the empty stomach."

He recommended a cup of cocoa, malted milk or other warm drink with two or three soda crackers at bedtime. Two more crackers, he said, should be left by the bed to be eaten the next morning. Women away from home much of the day should carry in their handbags small sacks of salted peanuts, hard candy or packages of peanut butter and cracker sandwiches, he said.

The amount of food to be eaten every two hours need be no more than two or three bites, he added, and it matters little what it is.

The Hecht Co.'s MODERN MAN'S STORE—Second Floor

THAT'S A GOOD QUESTION. In fact, it's a $64 question. And if we were in your shoes we'd certainly ask it. Perhaps you've wondered about it yourself.

HERE'S OUR ANSWER in a down-to-earth, matter-of-fact statement.

It's a traditional Hecht Co. policy to reduce the prices of men's clothing at the end of a season to make space for new stocks.

We are firm believers in selling merchandise now that was bought for this year's selling. We don't believe in carrying over merchandise from one season to another. And in the long run we make more money by turning over our stocks rapidly than holding merchandise for speculation.

We like to clean house at the proper time. And this, as in every February for the past forty-five years, is the proper time. We still think it's good store-keeping to adhere to this sound policy of reducing prices now in spite of present conditions.

We do not suggest that you purchase clothing you don't need for your present requirements. But if your wardrobe is low, we suggest you take advantage of these greatly reduced prices today while there is still a fair selection.

Although pattern and fabric ranges are not complete there are sizes for regulars, shorts, longs, stouts, short stouts and long stouts.

President Acts to Curb Flow of New Residents

The President yesterday, in his memo to department heads, urged them "to avoid as far as possible" the bringing of "new employees into the city. To the extent that experienced personnel can thus be obtained," the President pointed out, "the housing situation in Washington will be helped and the demand for office space decreased." The President's order for a restudy of fiscal and personnel needs—as predicted here yesterday—was a step in the right direction. Yet 200 new employes each day, or about 6000 a month, are being brought here by the Government.

While all these employes are being brought to Washington—some at salaries which are difficult to exist on—thousands of people right here in Washington and nearby Virginia and Maryland are anxious and willing to take Government jobs. These people already have homes here, they wouldn't add to the housing shortage, and why aren't they hired?

Well, the answer is the quota system under which each State is supposed to get Civil Service jobs here based on its population. The quota system is a creature of Congress and members of Congress have been quick to defend it. Naturally enough, the District, Maryland and Virginia are all far over their job quotas and their residents, generally speaking, aren't appointed to Civil Service jobs if a resident from one of the 25 under-quota States is available.

It Isn't Compulsory

But the commission isn't compelled to follow this peacetime practice. Particularly for the low-paid jobs such as guards, messengers, file clerks, stenographers, elevator operators, typists and the like, it has full authority to give temporary appointments for the duration of the emergency. Under this authority the person appointed wouldn't get a permanent Civil Service status and he would be dropped at the end of the war. This practice was followed to a great extent during World War 1. However, the World War 1 appointees were blanketed into Civil Service afterward, which accounts for the large numbers of District, Maryland, and Virginia residents in the Federal service today. The blanketing process threw the quota system out of balance.

However, appointments could be made with the specific provision that the appointees should not receive Civil Service status. And if the appointments were temporary, it would be a simple matter to drop the employes at the end of the war when a sweeping readjustment of the Government will become necessary. For the Government and the employe, the post-war readjustment period wouldn't be as difficult if large numbers of District, Maryland and Virginia employes were given temporary jobs.

The commission has good reason to junk the quota system for the duration. Personnel directors say up to 80 and 90 per cent of the Civil Service eligibles in States outside those surrounding the District refuse low-paid jobs here. These people refuse the jobs because they can get jobs at home, or else they have heard and read too much about high prices and the housing shortage here. Job declinations have gone up within the past few weeks and some people attribute this to the proposal of Representative Wilson that a curfew be sounded for Government girls at 10 p. m. Declinations have reached a point where the commission has been forced to appoint many local persons recently to low-paid war jobs.

Wage and Hour will start its move to New York at noon today . . . Civil Service needs immediately 30 inspectors of steel vessels for the Maritime Commission. The jobs pay from $2600 to $3200 . . . The Washington Post-Government Employes Table Tennis Tournament starts this afternoon at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace . . . Vince Callahan, Treasury's publicity agent for defense bonds and stamps, is being honored by the National Association of Publicity Directors for his work.

GPO Workers' Plea for Wage Parley Denied

Asserting that there was "no use" negotiating with representatives of the C. I. O. United Federal Workers on wage questions, A. E. Giegengack, public printer, said last night that the C. I. O. group was "wasting the time of the Government and delaying the full prosecution of the war" by endeavoring to consume time in conferences.

Conferences now being held with elected representatives of craft groups in the Government Printing Office will take care of all wage problems affecting the nonskilled laboring groups the C. I. O. claims to represent, he said. He pointed out that although the Kless Act requires him to negotiate with craft groups within the G. P. O., he is not required to negotiate with representatives of the laborers or with outside groups.

"I will never confer with outside groups," he declared, thus replying to C. I. O. charges that he was discriminating against them in favor of other unions.

He said his time is filled trying to keep the G. P. O. operating on a 24-hour-a-day basis and that he has a personnel director available to handle grievance matters.

The C. I. O., he declared, has been antagonistic toward him and has made repeated requests for conferences coupled with threats of asking President Roosevelt to intervene. He said he doubts that they really represent many of the laborers at the G. P. O. because of the "terrific turnover" there.

Yesterday, Eleanor Nelson, national secretary-treasurer of the U. F. W. A., and Henry Rhine, president of the Washington C. I. O. Industrial Union Council, followed up Thursday's protest against Giegengack with a joint statement accusing him of "distortion and subterfuge."

Killeen Post Joins Blood Bank Backers

George E. Killeen Post and Auxiliary Unit No. 25 is the latest American Legion group to announce participation in the 1942 campaign for the Children's Hospital blood and serum bank.

Archer A. Ward, commander, and Miss Grace Stokes, unit president, yesterday announced plans for a benefit party Tuesday night at the clubrooms, 3204 M Street Northwest. The entire receipts, with no deductions for expenses, will go into the Children's Hospital fund.

The annual Killeen benefit is dedicated to the memory of the late post commander, James Morris, who was deeply interested in the hospital's transfusion service from its inception in 1939. In 1940 the post and unit raised $100, and $110 last year.

Mrs. Mary Killeen, a Gold Star Mother, is chairman of the arrangements committee, assisted by Mrs. Mae Hart. Tuesday's party, which will begin at 8 p. m., will be open to the public.

Numerous individuals, as well as organizations, are planning similar benefits this month. Bridge games predominate though a number of dances, banquets and game parties are scheduled, or already have been held.

Souvenir tally cards are obtainable for the asking at the main counter in the lobby of The Post Building. Checks should be made payable to the Children's Hospital Blood Bank Fund and transmitted to The Post which, with the American Legion and the Washington Bridge League, is sponsoring the campaign for the fourth consecutive year.

University Alumni Club Holds Dinner Today

The Columbia University Alumni Club of Washington will hold its annual dinner and dance today at Carlton Hotel, William Roy Vallance, club president, announced.

Col. William J. Donovan, coordinator of information, a graduate of Columbia University Law School, and Supreme Court Justices Stanley Reed, William O. Douglass and Robert Jackson are expected to attend.

Senate Gets House-Passed U. S. Employes Housing Bill

The Senate Education and Labor Committee next Tuesday will consider the House-passed bill authorizing appropriation of 50 million dollars for construction of Federal workers' homes and facilitating public works, Chairman Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, announced last night.

He declared that the committee will act expeditiously on the measure, which may be referred to a subcommittee under the chairmanship of Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana. It has not yet been decided whether the committee will hold hearings, as did the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee.

The bill, passed by the House Wednesday by a vote of 303 to 18, brings Federal war workers under terms of the 300-million-dollar Lanham Act, which originally was designed to provide homes only for industrial war workers.

While the measure carries no figures on how the 50 millions will be expended, it is expected that about 40 million dollars would go for the construction of some 10,000 homes in this area and the remainder for extension of such public works as schools, streets, hospitals, sewers and waterworks.

Husband Rides Hood of Auto —To Hospital

Riding on the hood of an automobile to win an argument with his wife over who should drive sent John F. Cumberland, 31, of Arlington, Va., to Emergency Hospital yesterday with a broken shoulder and foot.

That's how his wife, Mrs. Olivia Cumberland, 30, explained the situation to police when they arrested her after the automobile struck a loading platform at Eleventh Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, throwing Cumberland to the pavement.

She was released under $40 bond, on charges of failing to give full time and attention to her driving, allowing "an exterior rider" and failing to show her driver's permit.

Mrs. Cumberland said her husband mounted the hood when she started to operate the car after an argument over whether he or she should drive.

A coroner's jury today will investigate the death of Edward P. Shannon, 67, an inmate of St. Elizabeths Hospital who was struck by a bus at the institution February 7. He died at the hospital Thursday night but his death was not reported to police until yesterday. Atwood W. Harvey, 26, of 703 C Street Southwest, driver of the bus, will appear at the hearing.

Meanwhile Wesley Williams, 7, of 1715 V Street Southeast, suffered a fracture of the left leg when he was knocked down by an automobile at Fifteenth and U Streets Southeast. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Elizabeth Coleman, Negro, 18, of 1813 Rosedale Street Northeast, was treated at Casualty Hospital for a broken jaw after being struck by a street car at Nineteenth Street and Benning Road Northeast.

GeographicSociety Sees Movies of Key West Highway

Although soldiers now guard the Miami-Key West Overseas Highway, and although fishing from its bridges is forbidden, the remarkable road built on the old right-of-way of the Florida East Coast Railroad still is accessible to visitors, James B. Pond told members of the National Geographic Society last night.

Supplies for the United States Naval Station at Key West pass over the many bridges—one of them seven miles long—of the 125-mile highway from the Florida mainland, Pond, lecturer and editor of the magazine, Program, said in a talk at Constitution Hall.

Following destruction of the railroad to Key West in the hurricane of 1935, the new road was built on the sturdy old viaducts and bridges, the speaker explained. In the color films which illustrated the lectue Pond showed the life of the Seminole Indians of the southern tip of Florida. Only about 600 Seminoles remain, the lecturer said. Some groups of them still do not allow white visitors to their camps, and most of them object to being photographed.

D. C. Heads Seek Ruling On School

Commissioners Ready to Yield Kramer High If Priorities Are Denied

The Commissioners late yesterday agreed to relinquish the Kramer Junior High School in Anacostia to the Federal Government for office space if priority ratings for its completion as a school building are not granted.

Requests to the War Production Board to allow the partially constructed building to be finished for school purposes already have been made by the city heads.

Three moves are possible by the WPB: To grant priorities as a school, as a Government office building or to deny priorities altogether.

Fear It Will Remain Unfinished

Although the Commissioners and school officials are anxious to have the new structure used as a school to relieve community congestion, they also are fearful that the incomplete building will remain idle and unfinished for duration of the emergency.

It was to prevent the latter that they yesterday entered into an agreement with the Public Buildings Administration.

The agreement stated that the Government, if it took over the building—now 23 per cent finished—would stand the cost of maintenance and custodial service and would return it in its original condition to the city when the war is over.

Citizens' Groups Protest

Strong protests against use of the building for any but school purposes have come from citizen groups throughout the Anacostia section. The nearest school—the Anacostia Junior-Senior High School—now has an enrollment of about 622 above capacity.

An additional 500 prospective students are due in the area upon completion of defense housing projects now under construction.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, said the Kramer School was planned to accommodate some 1128 pupils.

Federal Bar Unit Honors Ex-Chief, Lieut. Col. Rice

Lieut. Col. Heber H. Rice, former president of the Federal Bar Association, was presented with an emblem-key in recognition of his past service last night over Radio Station WINX by William E. Reese, president of the group and senior attorney on the legal staff of the comptroller general.

Col. Rice served as president of the group during 1940 and 1941 while he was head attorney for the Home Owner's Loan Corporation. He is now serving in the judge advocate general's office of the Army on the staff of the Undersecretary of War.

Other past presidents of the legal group which is made up of lawyers in the Government service will be presented similar keys which show the Goddess of Justice holding an unsheathed sword in her right hand and the scales of justice in her left hand.

Realtors Hear Plea for Unity On War Effort

A plea for unity and intelligently directed concentration in the war effort was made last night by David B. Simpson, Portland, Oreg., president, National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Speaking to more than 100 members of the Washington Real Estate Board at its midwinter meeting at the Mayflower Hotel, Simpson outlined measures proposed and others under way for fullest use of the country's real estate resources and experience in adjustment to a complete war economy.

Approving the War Production Board's action in forming an industrial building utilization section under the Plant Site Board, he explained this plan to use existing plants wherever possible should not only hasten war production but check evils of great population shifts and place war work where workers, their housing, transportation, schools and other facilities already are.

He also asked for adjustments enabling private industry to meet its full production quota of housing for war workers, and encouragement of full use of existing housing. Another objective set forth by the realtors' executive was immediate study through a national tax commission of the whole relationship of national, State and local taxes in order that the tax structure be made adequate for increased burdens war is placing on it. He advocated wide public support for action to open the way for postwar rebuilding of blighted areas in American cities.

Discussing the need for new housing for incoming Federal employes, President Charles C. Koones of the local board said private builders had informed Defense Housing Coordinator Charles F. Palmer they would build 13,000 units when assurance could be made that material would be available. Pledges for 8000 of these units were made by members of the board. Koones commended board members for their efforts in the Washington Board of Trade's defense bond selling campaign, saying local realtors had invested more than $200,000 in bonds up to January 6.

CountessPalffy To Appear Against Tenant

Countess Eleanor Palffy, now a Washingtonian, who was driven from her Paris home by the Nazis in 1940, will appear as complainant today at first formal hearings under the District Rent Control Act.

In the role of landlady, Countess Palffy is scheduled to bring action against her tenant, Mrs. Ann Holman, wife of Flight Commander Holman of the R. A. F.

The countess, a divorcee whose last husband was a Hungarian count and whose first was Harrison Tweed, present husband of Michael Strange, controls the lease on a house at 1424 Thirty-fifth Street in Georgetown.

Sublet Her Home

On January 1, 1941, "freezing" date of local rents, Countess Palffy paid $115 a month rent to Terry Dunstan Thompson, owner of the property.

Subsequently, according to files at the office of Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell, the countess expended some $9500 on improvements and subleased the building and its elaborate gardens to Mrs. Holman for $225 a month.

But with advent of the Rent Control Act, the rental reverted to $115, the "ceiling" on January 1.

Countess Palffy, it was reported, is seeking to collect from Mrs. Holman the maximum on the basis that she spent large sums renovating, furnishing and decorating before the present tenant took over under a year's lease.

A Native American

Countess Palffy, a native of Rhode Island, is here as an instructor in nurses' aid for the American Red Cross. She carried on similar activities during the last war.

Today's first rent hearing is scheduled for 10 a. m. in the Force School, 1700 block of Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, and will be heard by Examiner J. Warren Wilson. The three examiners—Wilson, Ernest F. Williams and Leonard S. Hayes—will each hear four cases.

Baby Boy Born Friday the 13th Wins $25 Bond

Friday the Thirteenth was a lucky day for the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Worcester, 9145 Sligo Creek Parkway, Silver Spring, Md., to pick to be born on. Because he was the first child to be born in Washington hospitals after 11 a. m. yesterday, he received a $25 bond from Marlene Dietrich.

The baby was born at 11:29 a. m. in Doctors Hospital. A publicity announcement explained that Miss Dietrich made the gesture to help the Treasury sell defense bonds—and incidentally advertise her new picture, "The Lady Is Willing."

Miss Dietrich has sent a letter of congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Worcester.

Treasury Sells Big Bond Issue on Friday, 13th

By the Associated Press

Friday the Thirteenth was no jinx for the Treasury Department—its offering of $1,500,000,000 of bonds was taken up in one day.

The bonds were submitted for subscription yesterday morning and Secretary Morgenthau announced the subscription books were closed last night, except for amounts up to $5000, where subscribers specify delivery in registered bonds 90 days after the issue date. Subscriptions of that class will be closed tonight.

Announcement of allotments on the bids probably will be made on February 18.

Trade Board Asks Citizens For Ideas on City Betterment

The Washington Board of Trade is making investigation on how the Capital can gain relief from conditions arising out of the concentrated war effort here. It has asked citizens, particularly newcomers with a fresh point of view, to offer suggestions.

Subcommittees have been appointed by the board to consider staggered hours, traffic and transportation and the hours business houses should remain open.

Joseph C. McGarraghy, chairman of the investigating group, said yesterday that the suggestions received in the survey will materially aid the committee in discussions and subsequent recommendations. It was believed the newly arrived people here would be the quickest to see needed changes.

The suggestions and criticisms will be solicited in two ways.

They may be sent to the Board of Trade, Room 204 Star Building, by use of the appended questionnaire, or by letter covering the points any resident wishes to make.

McGarraghy said it is not necessary, nor desired, to dig too deeply to uncover some vague or isolated point which may require attention. Yet, matters which may seem trivial to one person, if apparent to others as well, will furnish the type of suggestion wanted, he stated.

The appended coupon is for your use.

U. S. Begins Action to Get Road Sites

Check Is Posted And Condemnation Proceedings Are Launched Here

The Government yesterday deposited a check for $522,040 and launched condemnation proceedings to take over nearly 10 acres of commercial property along Highway No. 1, in Arlington County. The land, to be turned over to the Public Roads Administration, will be used for access roads for the new War Department Building.

The petition of condemnation and a declaration of taking over nine tracts of land was filed by the Department of Justice in the United States District Court for the Eastern Virginia District in Virginia. The Treasury check, deposited at the same place, represents "the gross sum estimated to be just compensation for the condemned lands and buildings on them.

Most valuable of the properties, according to the Government estimate, is the 2.69-acre tract owned by the Southern Oxygen Co., for which $122,000 was deposited.

On West Side of Road

The other parcels, all of which lie along the west side of the highway between the approach to Highway Bridge and Columbia Pike (together with the number of acres and the estimated compensation) are:

George D. Horning, .32 acres, $108,300.

Paul F. Collins, John S. Wynne, Eugene L. Vidal and Samuel J. Solomon (all tenants in common), .26 acres, $14,800.

National Airport Corporation, .11 acres, $19,350.

Standard Oil of New Jersey, .21 acres, $24,650.

William H. Lipcomb and H. Rozier Dulaney, jr., tenants in common, 1.81 acres, $33,915.

American Oil Co., 2.02 acres, $96,725.

Mrs. Charles Baum, 1.57 acres, $30,000.

Norton & Co., .82 acres, $72,300.

The Government asked immediate possession within 30 days of all occupied property.

Meanwhile, Public Roads Commissioner Thomas H. MacDonald must acquire land occupied by about 150 families along Columbia Pike in Arlington County, Va., in order to make space available for more access roads to the new War Department Building.

Protests Before Committee

He appeared before a House Military Affairs subcommittee at the same time protests of families requested to move were laid before the subcommittee by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia.

The necessary land will cost the Government between $250,000 and $275,000, MacDonald said. The families have been informed they must move by March 1, Col. John J. O'Brien, of the War Department, told the subcommittee.

Construction of the access highway system "is a matter of split-second timing," said MacDonald. "Construction of these roads must be completed by the time the new War Department Building opens next November. Any delay would be very serious."

The Government has not offered an adequate price to allow the families, most of whom are Negroes, to purchase land elsewhere, Frank W. Adams, attorney for some of the property owners, told the subcommittee.

Officials said they are making every effort to see to it that the families are adequately provided for. The land in question is a triangular section of about 25 acres.

Junior Board's 'Bomber Booth' Closes Today

After more than a week of successful operation, the Junior Board of Commerce "Buy a Bomber for Uncle Sam" booth will close at 10 p. m. today, Samuel L. Samuel, chairman of the board's defense savings bonds and stamps sales committee, announced yesterday.

More than $20,000 worth of bonds and stamps have been sold at the booth since February 4, the day it opened, Samuel said. Original plan was to keep it open only a week, but so successful has it been that it was continued until today.

Boy Scouts will give a first-aid demonstration in front of the booth at noon today, it was announced.

Senate Group to Study District Subway Plan

'The Lady Is Willing,' But That's About All

New Comedy-Drama on the Earle Screen Has Everything, but Somehow Fails to Jell; Alan Carney Headlines Colorful Stage Revue

"THE LADY IS WILLING." Columbia picturization of a story by James Edward Grant, adapted to the screen by Mr. Grant and Albert McCleery, costarring Marlene Dietrich and Fred MacMurray, with Aline MacMahon, Stanley Ridges, Arline Judge, Roger Clark, Marietta Canty, Baby David James, Ruth Ford, Harvey Stephens, Harry Shannon, Elisabeth Risdon, Charles Lane and Kitty Kelly. Directed by Mitchell Leisen. At the Earle Theater.

"THE LADY IS WILLING," but that seems to be not quite enough.

We would not be saying that Marlene Dietrich is not ravishing as an exhibit of sartorial splendor, or that she is not a competent actress; nor that Fred MacMurray falls short of being a reasonably rational young baby specialist; nor that the supporting cast and elaborateness of production are not all that they should be. What we mean to say is merely that with every requisite of an A-No. 1 picture apparently present, the new screen feature at the Earle Theater still ambles along at a pedestrian pace in its futile effort to compound lively interest and ignite the bright sparks of comedy it evidently was supposed to possess—and ought to, but somehow doesn't. As if conscious of its failure, it changes its mood, but not its pace, near the end, to attack a near-tragic climax with similarly unsuccessful results. "The Lady Is Willing" seems to be one of those strange anomalies of the cinema, a good picture on paper that just hasn't got what it takes to come off in celluloid. It would require the seventh son of a seventh son to determine precisely why.

The principal figure in the fable is a glamorous actress, with the proverbial heart of gold, but no bank account to match, who appropriates an abandoned baby, persuades the young physician, summoned in a bogus emergency, to marry her, so that adoption can be made legal, and then encounters all of the distressing consequences of a total incapacity for motherhood—including an estrangement from her husband and the usual turmoil with the imposters claiming legitimate parentage in the hope of shaking down the impetuous star for a cool $25,000 to relinquish their claim.

The reconciliation and the "they lived happily ever after" business are accomplished through the convenient device of a vital operation that threatens the baby's life and is performed by Dr. McBain, who flies to the scene just in the nick of time to permit his wife to go to the theater and panic another audience with her famous song, "I Find Love."

There are, necessarily, a few sporadic laughs during the interval of the actress' bewilderment over the mysteries of motherhood and the gender of her newly acquired "offspring," and a few, too, when Dr. McBain is ensnared through the offer of all those millions of experimental rabbits his researchful soul has so long coveted. In the main, nevertheless, "The Lady Is Willing" is a regretfully dreary piece of diversion. Or perhaps a case-hardened bachelor is no one to be reviewing this sort of thing. However, the feminine stranger sitting next us didn't roll in the aisle, either.

Cannot Be Blamed on Cast

As already intimated, Miss Dietrich is a spectacle of unfailing loveliness throughout, and, in the bland bafflement engendered by the predicament in which she has plunged herself, demonstrates again that she is a capable comedienne, as well as an emotional actress of gentleness and feeling. Possibly it was the director who wasn't willing—or the author, who, by the way, also contrived "Plan M," now on view at the National. Fred MacMurray is his customary adaptable self and Aline MacMahon foremost among those to whom some of the brighter lines have been assigned. Stanley Ridges is Miss Dietrich's hard-pressed business manager and the admirable Elisabeth Risdon an understanding child welfare officer. The rest do not so much matter—except Baby David James, who matters a very great deal. Not since Baby Sandy has so disarmingly charming a mite been brought before the cameras.

The new stage revue at the Earle is another of Harry Anger's compact and colorful creations, headlined by Alan Carney, who yesterday repeated his recent initial success on the same rostrum with his character impressions of Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore and Edward G. Robinson, augmented by his unique gallery of soapbox orators. Park and Clifford present one of the more amazing gymnastic acts and Kay, Katya and Kay, two men and a girl, are startling in their adeptness at the adagio. The Roxyettes are in and out with their distinguished routines, reviving the walking globe number, disguised as a "Snowman" interlude. Reaping the rewards of the "talent contest" recently held in conjunction with the Neptune Room, The Arnolds, a male singing trio, are introduced in Jo Lombardi's overture and "Soldiers in White," a Warner Brothers Technicolor service shot, dedicated to the Army Medical Corps, completes the bill.

Pity the Poor Blonde!

Hollywood, Feb. 13 (INS).—Not since poor Thelma Todd was chased all over the Marx Brothers pictures will a blonde be so "pursued" as Virginia Bruce in "Pardon My Sarong," the next for Abbott and Costello. I hope Virginia is well and strong, for she will need to be after playing with these two, who stop at nothing to get a laugh. Virginia has just finished "Butch Minds the Baby," at Universal, her first since the arrival of the Ruben heir.

VIRGINIA BRUCE

Speaking of Abbott and Costello, there have been rumore the boys are privately feuding. I doubt very much if this is true. These two belong together like ham 'n' eggs. While Lou Costello gets most of the laughs, there's no better straight man in the business than Bud Abbott, and Lou knows it.

So many of John Halliday's friends have telephoned to ask if he and Eleanor are safe in Honolulu that I am glad to report John is not only safe but working hard to find entertainment for the boys stationed there, and especially for those who are hospitalized since the Pearl Harbor attack. There are no actors in Honolulu, so John has gathered a group of amateurs to give plays and radio shows in the day time (radio is not permitted at night).

John Farrow is recuperating so rapidly under Maureen O'Sullivan's devoted care that he feels well enough to accept Para's offer to direct "Wake Island"—and this is good news for all Johnny's friends. He was so thin and looked so ill when he returned from Canada, where he served with the Canadian navy for two years, but he's put on ten pounds—and what a difference in his appearance. The "Wake Island" picture, with Robert Preston and Richard Denning, should be right up the Farrow street. A native Australian, Johnny has been on Wake Island many times and knows the locale perfectly.

Brynie Foy is very excited over the story of "The Loves of Edgar Allan Poe," which Charlie Feldman sold Twentieth Century-Fox. Edgar Allan Poe, jr., a Baltimore attorney and direct descendant of the poet, coauthored it with Tom Reed and there are many documents and letters which have never been made public. Charlie Feldman hung on to the story for a long time, believing he would produce it himself one day, but he could never find the right actor to play Poe. Curiously enough, he tried to borrow John Shepperd, but Twentieth said no go, so he compromised by selling them his story for Shepperd.

A line or two: Alice Faye wants the world to know it isn't true she's retiring after the birth of the Harris heir—or heiress.

Metropolitan

Only yesterday Hedda Hopper very rightly was crediting Jesse Lasky in these pages for the importance of his role in "Sergeant York." With Gary Cooper in the title role and a likely contender for the Academy Award, this excellent film yesterday began its final week at the Metropolitan.

"Sergeant York" surprises most of its audiences by devoting most of its footage to York's background and the simplicity of the Tennessee upbringing that makes his story so compellingly the story of a human being. Supporting Cooper in the other leading roles are Walter Brennan, Margaret Wycherley, as his mother, and Joan Leslie, as the girl who was to become his wife.

Only Skin Deep, Eh?

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 13. About a year ago Hollywood and many critics were praising Hedy Lamarr's beauty, but grousing because she "couldn't act." There were many among them who said she'd never learn to act. All the time Hedy was begging to be deglamorized and be taken out of thoses linky siren roles and given a part with reality where she could be natural. In the meantime, Hedy kept right on studying with Phyllis Loughton. She finally got a part that wasn't a carbon copy of a nit-wit, but a real person. And what happens? Before she's finished "Tortille Flat," she's given the prize story of the last three years—one that every star in Hollywood wanted. (Two of them bought it so they could star in it. I'm speaking of Janet Gaynor and Norma Shearer.) The name of it is "Forever." But before Hedy can even do that, she'll play Bill Powell's wife. So before cutting a player into shreds, let's look at her side of the question. Because Shakespeare's still right—"the play's the thing."

HEDY LAMARR

Two of our best writers are Bill Morrow and Ed Beloin. They do the Jack Benny show. They wrote the W. C. Fields sequence for "Tales of Manhattan," and wrote themselves in, but when it came to acting, they were the little men without voices — 'cause they couldn't remember the lines they'd written. Which reminds me of the late Charles Klein. When asked to speak at a banquet, he got up, looked wildly about, and said, "Will somebody kindly hit me over the head with a bottle?" and sat down.

Ann Sothern and her mother took time out the other day to give a tea party for that grand old gentleman, Sidney Morse, who for 34 years has been teaching singing in the Minneapolis High School where Ann was a pupil.

Ran into Philip Reed, just back from his place in Nevada. He said a tiny community nearby uses this slogan: "City of live oaks for live folks."

. . . Margaret Lindsay thinks the ladies of the "side-saddle era" were the real heroines of history. One day of that style riding put her to bed, and it took plenty of liniment to get her going again.

Johnny Mack Brown left Alabama 15 years ago carrying a football. Now he'll show up totin' a gun on the first purely personal p. a. of his career. He'll take three men along to put on this western act. Johnny tells me it's getting so he can't tell a real cowboy unless he's got callouses on his tummy from holding his guitar!

I call this patriotism. Fay Holden, who had most of her garden planted in prize-winning chrysanthemums, has dug 'em up to put in vegetables . . . Adolph Menjou started selling his fifty-thousand-dollar stamp collection so he could start collecting Government stamps.

Jack Carson, in a patriotic mood, too, bought a motorcycle to ride to work. It was fun, but after three days his bosses got wind of it, decided it was too risky, and demotorcycled him.

For a whole day Ronnie Colman, Cary Grant and Jean Arthur kept walking or running in and out French windows until it drove Director Stevens nearly out of his mind, and he said, "The next time I have a scene like this, I'll put in a revolving door so I can see all three stars at the same time."

Pix

It's been several years since this capital has boasted two French language films running concurrently. It happens today and for one day only, with "The Baker's Wife" opening at the Pix and "The King" playing its final day at the Little. Raimu is the star of both these witty films from the prewar Gallic studios.

"The Baker's Wife" broke a downtown record on its first run here a season ago, telling the tender and hardly startling story of a simple baker who, when his wife ran off with a handsome shepherd, refused to bake a loaf of bread until she returned to his roof. Since his was the only bakery in the village, the entire town turned out to get the baker's wife back to him. It is one of the great films a peaceful Europe sent to a country that leads the world in film production.

Raimu, something of a restrained Wallace Beery, acts the baffled baker with sincerity and affection. Ginette Leclerc plays the title role

Hen-Coop Check-off

New York, Feb. 13.

'QUERY: Donald M. Nelson, head of the War Production Board, conferred recently with the President about a number of items involved in our war program. One of the items they discussed was (self-censored) billion eggs in powder form . . . The President's finger rested on the line containing that many-billion item. "Tell me, Don," he asked, "how many hen-hours is that?"

MAURICE EVANS

TALENT: Bronislaw Huberman, the noted violinist, tells this story: When he was a child, he played his first Brahms Concerto in Vienna. The aged Brahms was in the audience and later patted the youngster on the shoulder and said: "Work hard, my boy. You have talent and will go far." . . . When Huberman was 11, he attended the first concert of the 5-year-old pianist, Artur Rubinstein. Huberman patted him on the shoulder, just as Brahms once had done to him, and repeated: "Work hard, my boy. You have talent and will go far."

CHATTER: George S. Kaufman will succeed Clifton Fadiman as master of ceremonies of the "Keep 'Em Rolling" broadcast series . . . Felix Ferry, of Fefe's Monte Carlo, will produce "Beauty for Rent," the new musical play by Geza Herczeg, who wrote "Wonder Bar," and Pat C. Flick . . . A follow-up on the Dr. Allyn Foster mystery-death in Bellevue's psychopathic ward: George Kenley, 30 years old, who entered that same ward in good physical condition, died there yesterday . . . When Maurice Evans was told by his doctor that he's suffering from malnutrition, Boris Karloff sent Evans $1 and advised: "Go buy yourself a meal."

CHANCE: Sophie Tucker's dressing room is papered with gin-rummy scores, indicating triumphs over every member of the "High Kickers" cast—from Producer George Jessel to her accompanist, Ted Shapiro . . . Last night I received this wire: "Re your item about Tucker placing herself atop list of ten best gin-rummy players, would gladly play her for everything she has. But what would I do with Ted Shapiro, as I place myself atop list of ten best pianists—Chico Marx."

SUCCESS: Last summer Ludwig Bemelmans lived at Donald Ogden Stewart's Adirondack farm, while they collaborated in the dramatization of his "Hotel Splendide" series. After Rogers & Hart had been engaged to write the music for this show, the entire venture was called off. But Bemelmans' summer work was not completely in vain. On an old board he found in Stewart's ancient hen-house, Bemelmans painted the local railroad depot. And that painting is the front-page cover of the current issue of "Town & Country."

POLITICS: When Chautemps, the former Premier of France, arrived here last year, there were many reports that he was being subsidized by Petain. His frequent visits to the French Embassy in Washington, together with his private campaigning among high officials, gave credence to the story that he was running the embassy . . . A few months ago, however, Chautemps tried, without avail, to join the Free French movement here. His wife now says that their funds have been cut off. She's an accomplished pianist nad is arranging a concert tour to raise money.

ENTERPRISE: The new Leslie Howard-Laurence Olivier movie, "The Invader," soon will have its Broadway premiere. One of the scenes in that movie shows the destruction of a German submarine, the "U-37" . . . When the movie first was shown at the Columbia studios, the executives decided that the submarine-destruction scene should have been longer. They searched through their vaults and discovered an old movie, "Submarine." Some of this film then was clipped and inserted into the "Invader" reels—because in this old movie the sub also was numbered "U-37."

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

(While Shirley Povich is on vacation various members of The Post Sports Department will write his column.)

By Ben Dulaney

This department has spoken before of the vast legions of assorted queries which rasp over its telephones and roll over its desks. If we tried to answer all of them there just wouldn't be any sports pages at all.

DULANEY

Some are so simple as to be absurd: (Who won the American League pennant last year?). Some would take a trained staff of library research artists 12 months to answer: (Please give me the dimensions of all public and private swimming pools in America and how many persons used them in 1941. It will assist me in preparing a monograph. I am a subscriber.)

If others have anything to do with sports, then this department is a member of the Electoral College: (Who was Secretary of War under President Buchanan?). And still others are matters of opinion: (To settle a $10 bet who would win, Louis or Dempsey, if both were the same age?) Flip a coin to answer that one, brother. We want no parts of it.

Most inquiries, if they're too tough, go into the wastebasket. There just isn't the time.

But yesterday arrived a letter which intrigued us. We read it three times:

Sports Editor:

We have had two discussions in our office which I hope you can settle.

Do the majority of American crawl-stroke swimmers breathe every complete stroke when swimming distances of 100 yards or more?

Do the majority of experi right handed archers place the arrow on the left side of the bow? Yours truly,

GEORGE S. WHEELER.

Well, that sort of got this department. How did the argument get started in Mr. Wheeler's anonymous office? People who're interested in crawls usually don't care about bows 'n' arrows and vice versa.

But then the serious part began. The two questions turned into Hallowe'en haunts. We couldn't do our normal chores. The end came when a headline was returned from the composing room with a big red question mark on it. It read: AMERICAN CRAWL TURNS BACK ROOSEVELT HIGH ARCHERS.

The managing editor was somewhat surprised to see the whole sports staff crawling all over the room in make-believe water and whooshing mighty breaths at frequent intervals. Consensus was that when you crawled, you took in air when you felt like you needed air. That didn't settle anything.

Only two of the boys admitted to the vice of archery. Both said they'd aimed at targets on picnics. One held his nonexistent arrow against the left side of his nonexistent bow. The other did the opposite. They almost had a fight. Then they made a bet, too.

The thing began to be cumulative—like chain letters or Mark Twain's "Punch, Brothers, Punch with Care" ditty. We understood now what might have prompted Mr. Wheeler to write a letter. We called in expert assistance so we could ultimately get some sleep.

From Dudley Gordon, Shoreham Hotel swimming instructor:

"Generally speaking, persons swimming the crawl over longer distances breathe, or should breathe on every stroke. Some, in the belief that they are increasing their speed, take the last few strokes of the race without a breath. Swimmers in sprint races—say 50 yards—often go three-quarters of a 50-foot pool without taking air."

Miss Elizabeth Burtner, who teaches archery to George Washington University girls, told us to hold the phone a moment. She then explained that she was going through the same pantomime that the boys in the sports department had. Placing the arrow on the bow was to her such a routine procedure that she couldn't give lefts-and-rights offhand. Then she had the answer:

"The bow is loaded horizontal to the ground with the arrow on top of it. Therefore, the arrow is on the left-hand side of the bow if you shoot right-handed.

"Left or right-handed," Miss Burtner added as a clincher, "the arrow is always on the side of the bow closest to your nose."

Peace turned its sweet calm smile upon the sports department. The sports department had increased its vast store of useless knowledge.

Incidentally, although Mr. Wheeler enclosed postage for a reply, we hope he sees this item. This division has confiscated the stamp. We need it.

SO THE BALL PLAYERS GET OUT OF CHAIRS

New York, Feb. 13.—Before you start saying that the ball players not in kahki are a bunch of lucky stiffs, making good money for engaging in an enterprise that has directly cost only one life in the past 20 years, give a thought to the unquestionable anguish in store for the boys.

CONSIDINE

The Civilian Defense Office, the USO and a half dozen more alphabetical bureaus and projects have designs on the players. They mean to put them to work at nights, either speaking to groups of soldiers and civilians, or put them to work before daytime games, instructing in baseball.

This will amount to the greatest break that hotel lobby chairs and divans have had since the old Cincinnati Red Stockings started the whole business of big league baseball. Since 1869, four generations of ball players have spent major portions of their lives in chairs ranging from old-fashioned rockers to the most violently modernistic tubular concoction. For too many years to reckon, sitting has been the prime off-diamond activity of ball players. The vista of them busy on their feet, though in mufti, is hard to conjure. In our time we've seen more ball players sitting than playing—so many, in fact, that we have come to believe that the crouch at the plate was invented by some super sitter who was frozen into sitting position.

Rules of Expert Settin' Technique

Ball players sit differently than any other mortals. Their squat has an even more dogged permanence and patience than travelling salesmen waiting for the 3:03 a. m. out of Rocky Mount. There is a special kind of glaze in the ball player's eye. And a special mute immobility. This is true even of the young players with the open-shirted collars and the crazy quilt sports coats. They learn early how to sit through the long mornings and the sluggish hours that reach from dressert until bedtime. They soon achieve the scrubbed, but glossy look. They learn to stop talking. They learn how to focus their eyes on a plaster gargoyle on the lobby wall and how to keep looking at it without blinking for hours.

But that's all gone. This year they'll be on call, and, brother, it's going to be torture for most of them. Few of them are speakers. Few of them are at ease among fans. Few of them have poise enough to be anything but clods around adoring youths in khaki. Few have ever made articulate personal appearances. Few, surprisingly enough, have a shred of interest in meeting those who root for them.

It's going to be a tough season for a lot of players who for years have studiously avoided the public that pays their salaries. But a break, as we said, for some of the most abused furniture in America, and a marked decline for the last of the passive arts.

Hey! We actually saw a buck private in Washington the other day. Saw him walking right down the street. A crowd of curious Washingtonians, accustomed to seeing nothing lower than a lieutenant commander, was following him. There was a rumor afloat that he had not tried to get a commission. Probably unfounded.

The Pan Alley could not have had these meanings in mind when the muse struck. But at least Burton Hoffman, who may possibly be a Brooklyn baseball fan, had them in mind. He writes that the following songs were dedicated to the following causes:

I Wish I Had a Dime—lament of the Phils.
Below the Equator—where the Giants finished last year.
I Miss You—the Detroit Tigers grieve for Greenberg.
My Greatest Mistake—Terry's Fitzsimmons-for-Baker deal.
I'll Never Smile Again—Mickey Owen.
Time Was—when Joe Medwick could hit.
I Get Along Without Very Well—retorts MacPhail to Hamlin.
Danny Boy—the Dodgers seeking Litwhiler.
My Prayer—that Dixie Walker remains with the Dodgers.
Tear It own—a Brooklyn fan's feeling toward the Polo Grounds.
1-2-3, Kick!—what a Giant player does after taking a third strike.
I Guess I'll Have to Dream the Rest—Durocher, after getting the thumb.

Then, Burton adds, the reason why Fitzsimmons pivots before pitching is that he used to pitch for the Giants and had to keep turning around to ward off knives in the back.

Horace won't like that, Burton, old boy. Won't like it at all.

Craig McClelland Stars in Nets for Winners; Burrage Sinks Penalty Shot

By Jack Munhall

Beefy Craig McClelland turned in another air-tight net-minding job last night as the defending champion Washington Eagles, their playoff berth chances threatened, responded by spanking the Baltimore Orioles, 4-1, before a paid attendance of 2801 at Riverside Stadium.

Continuing in the same razor-sharp form that produced an 11-2 rout of the pacesetting Boston Olympics Tuesday, the Eagles rallied behind McClelland's staunch defense to put away the victory with single scores in the first and second periods and a pair in the finale.

The victory increased Washington's fourth-place margin over the Orioles to seven points, or three and one-half games. Therefore, with the Eagles having only 13 matches to play, their hopes of an automatic entry into the playoffs by possession of fourth place are now bright.

Weaver, Courteau Star

In avenging their 4-5 loss to the Orioles in a riot-featured battle here last Friday, the Eagles were led by those twin balls of fire, Freddy Weaver and Paul Courteau, and by the veteran Len Burrage, who is looking up these days.

Neither Courteau nor Weaver scored, but by their whirlwind harrassing tactics and daring sorties on the Baltimore goal they contributed immeasurably to the victory. Burrage, whose defense work has been somewhat spotty of late, was his old reliable self again when it came to breaking up enemy rushes. And in addition, he supplied the Eagles' last goal, converting a penalty shot off an interference penalty on Defense Man Mayer Flett, of the Orioles.

Another Washington player whose prominent part in the triumph should not go unnoticed is big Art Lessard. Continuing to improve pleasantly quick in all departments of the game and especially in scoring, Lessard fired the Eagles' second goal and several other times severely tested Baltimore Goalie Roy Roche.

McClelland Nears Shutout

McClelland, the blocky-shouldered, moon-faced Washington goalie, had the Orioles blanked as late as the sixteenth minute of the final period. Then, at 15:03, to be exact, lanky Aby McDougal, always a nemisis to the Eagles, tickled the nets on what was by comparison with some others an easy chance for McClelland.

Unlike the last two Eagles-Orioles matches here, this one was conspicuous by its cleanness of play, despite the ferocious pace. Ned Vitarelli, the hatchet-beaked little Baltimore

Van Horn, Sabin Win in Doubles

West Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 13 (AP). Welby Van Horn, of Los Angeles, and Wayne Sabin, of Reno, Nev., teamed up in the quarterfinals of the $1200 Gulf Stream professional tennis tournament today to defeat George Parks and Ray White, of Miami, 6—2, 6—0, 6—2.

Walter Senior, of West Palm Beach, and Jan Kozeluh, of Fort Lauderdale, won over Dick Skeen, Los Angeles, and Frank Hericha, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 3—6, 4—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—3.

Bruce Barnes, of Houston, and Bob Harmon, Oakland, Calif., won their way into the doubles semi-finals by defeating Bernie Coghlan, Oakland, and John Faunce, Hollywood, Fla., 6—3, 6—3, 6—3.

Sabin meets Barnes and Skeen plays Harmon in the sigles semi-finals tomorrow, when the doubles semifinals also will be run off.

Lenahan Wins Baseball Golf; Shea Second

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 13.—Ray Lenahan, a better golfer than ever he was a pitcher, outclassed the diamond stars today to win the Baseball Players Golf Championship by six strokes.

With the help of an eagle, he carded a one over-par 73 on the final round for a 54-hole total of 218.

Lenahan, 46-year-old Providence (R. I.) shirt salesman, served a brief hitch with the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1918. His short diamond career ended with Soringfield of the Eastern League in 1920.

A former Rhode Island State champion, he came down for the tournament because "I get a kick out of being around baseball players."

Second place went to the 1941 champion, Coach Merv Shea, of the Detroit Tigers, who fired the most brilliant round of the event today—a two-under-par 70.

Manush Ties for Third

He would have made the race interesting except for a lapse to an 81 yesterday, when his putter went sour. The former catcher turned in four birdies today.

Two pre-tournament favorites—Heinie Manush, Greensboro Piedmont League manager, and Wes Ferrell, quick-tempered former big league pitcher—wound up in a tie for third at 228. Ferrell had a sparkling 74 in the finale to catch Manush, who needed 75.

Fifth place went to Paul Derringer, Cincinnati Red pitcher, whose 74 gave him a 230 total.

The rest of the baseballers were far behind.

Although Lenahan is not now connected with baseball, he was eligible for the event which is open to all

Terps Score by 42-32, Break Losing Streak

Travis, James and Mont Share Point Honors With 10 Apiece

University of Maryland's basketball team did a right fine job of upsetting last night. It had little trouble in stopping William and Mary, 42-32, at Ritchie Coliseum.

The Terps, victims of four straight spankings, took the lead at once, led 11-7 after the first 10 minutes and 28-17 at the half.

Sparked by Ernie Travis, Bob James and Tommy Mont, each of whom scored 10 points in the evening, Maryland succeeded in whitewashing the Indians for the first seven minutes in the second half and running the score to 35-17.

But at that point Center Glen Knox, Southern Conference high scorer, and his mates began to click and the Old Liners had to use all their ingenuity to stop a couple of well-handled rallies.

Knox continued on his scoring spree with 15 points and led, as usual, the scoring. Maryland's Du-Val played an exceptional defensive game.

Coolly and convincingly throttling desperate Coolidge High effort, Western's cagemen last night used the final game of the regular interhigh basketball series as a stepping stone to the public school championship tournament next weekend, joining defending champion Roosevelt, Wilson and Central.

The Raiders topped Coolidge, 33-22, surprising few of the 1500 fans. Real surprises developed in the opener of the double-header at Tech gym, however, when Eastern took the measure of Wilson, 28-24.

Loser of four of its six previous stars, Eastern finally looked like the title contender it was rated at the start of the season. But it was too late. The outcome made no difference in the line-up for next week's tournament.

Eastern led from midway of the second period until the end and won handily, at least ending the interhigh careers of its five senior regulars in high style. Neil Craig and Jim Brady paced the winners with nine points each, the same total as registered by Capt. Freddy Vinson of the Tigers.

Coolidge, closing out its first year in interhigh play, clung to the Raiders' shirts for only one period and then dropped back. Western held leads of 5 to 3, 16 to 5 and 24 to 11 after the first period, and there was little contest thereafter.

With the Colts' Bill Penn doing all in his power to stop him, Jimmy Karas managed for 15 points and the best performance of the night. Running a close second was his teammate, Swanson Moore, who amassed 10.

Pirates' Johnny Gee Mails Signed Contract

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 13 (AP).—Six-foot 9-inch Johnny Gee, tallest man in baseball, mailed his signed contract to the Pittsburgh Pirates today and said he would join the National League club at San Bernadino, Calif., early next month.

The elongated southpaw moundsman, purchased three years ago from the Syracuse Chiefs in the International League for $75,000 after winning 20 games, played basketball in an industrial league here this winter.

American U. Defeats C. U. Five, 61 to 33

Charlie Kligman, who came to American University from Central High, went to town last night to pace the Eagles in a 61-33 triumph over Catholic University's five on the victors' court.

The game, a Chesapeake Conference affair, marked the first athletic clash in five years between the rivals and provided the fourth victory in eight starts for American. The teams played good, hard, exciting basketball and, despite the fact that three important players were forced to the bench on personal fouls, the entire proceedings were all in good, clean fun.

The Cardinals lost the services of Steve Limanek with 12 minutes to play and they were unable to click thereafter. The aforementioned Kligman, hot up to this point, became redhot and put the finishing touches on a big evening with nine field goals and two fouls for 20 points.

Cards Grab Lead

American University had to carry on without Capt. Carl Byham for eight minutes of the second half, but the Eagles kept right on their merry way, piling up points. Catholic University's Archie Panago used up his quota of fouls in the first half.

The Cardinals started in high, running up a 9-to-5 lead in the opening five minutes, but the Eagles finally got under way and made eight straight points to take a 13-to-9 advantage, which they stretched to 21 to 15 by intermission.

American held about the same margin of points early in the second half, but Catholic U. rallied and moved up to within two points of their rivals, 29 to 27. However, the Eagles, with Brother Kligman shifted into high again, drew away and in the final five minutes they were dropping everything in the basket except Referee Dallas Shirley.

The victory was the third in a row for American, and its fourth conference success in six tries. For Catholic, the defeat was No. 8 in 14 conference appearances.

15,033 Give Razzberry To Winner

Middle Champ Never Down in Garden Scrap; Colan Battles to Draw

By Bob Considine

Conn won just about as he pleased though he maintained a respect for Zale's punching power throughout the 12 rounds. The referee and judges all voted for Conn on the strength of his superior speed and the countless points he piled up with his superb boxing skill. The writers could give Zale only two rounds.

But the crowd of 15,033 expected more than a boxing exhibition from Conn, who outweighed Zale, 175½ to 164¼. It let loose a rude rasp at good-looking Billy, making his first New York appearance since his dramatic fight against Louis, leaving the ring with a cut lip and black eye. Zale was cheered to an echo for putting up the kind of fight unlooked for in a 7-to-1 shot.

Weight Advantage Works

The ten pounds difference in their weights, and Conn's greater reach, told the tale. Zale was on even terms with the ranking No. 1 heavyweight challenger through the first five rounds. But Conn warmed up to his task thereafter and won the last seven rounds with a demonstration of the blinding speed and a blizzard-like output of the slapping that confused Joe Louis so heartily last June. Private Barrow, incidentally, got a night's leave from nearby Camp Upton and was present at the fight. He received a tremendous ovation when he climbed into the ring in his spic and span private's uniform.

There were no knockdowns, though toward the end of the match Conn had Zale reeling around the ring with vigorous slaps on the glass jaw of the Gary, Ind., middleweight. There was little bloodletting, either, though both boys suffered slight openings at seams—Conn on the lip and left eye and Zale on top of the head—of all places—because a boil there came in unexpectedly.

The gross gate was $48,000.67. Conn, who was within reaching distance of a million dollars last June when he had Louis on the verge of a knockout in the thirteenth round of their fight, will get 40 per cent of the net, Zale 20 per cent. Conn's

Rice Cracks 2-Mile Mark In Penn Meet

By the United Press

Philadelphia, Feb. 13.—Gregory Rice, the stocky Notre Dame graduate now competing for the New York A. C., thundered to a meet record in the 2-mile run at the fifth annual Penn A. C. indoor track meet tonight when he breasted the tape in 8:59.5.

The small crowd of 4000 roared its approval as the curly-haired South Bend star ran away from the field on the final laps to finish far ahead in the fastest indoor 2 miles ever run in Philadelphia.

Fred Wilt, Indiana, who stayed with Rice throughout the early stages, faded badly when Rice uncorked a terrific last-lap sprint. Joe McCluskey, of the New York A. C., was third.

Charles (Chuck) Beetham, national A. A. U. 880 champion, came from behind on the last lap to win the half-mile feature in 1:53.1.

Villanova won the second mile relay event in a fast 3:25.3, easily defeating Temple and Catholic University, second and third, respectively.

Warren Broemel, Columbia, won the pole vault with a jump of 13 feet 3 inches. Joseph Bakura, Penn State, and Howard S. Jensen, unattached, tied for second at 12 feet.

Duke Alexander, University of Maryland sophomore, who soon will join the Marines, placed third in the high jump, behind a tie for first between John Glenn, Penn State, and Mathias Kashuba, Bloom-

K. Dorko Disqualified After Winning Feature at Hialeah

Sam Houston Is Awarded First Money

Stewards Rule Victor Bore In on Horses at Stretch Turn; Curious Roman Placed Second

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 13.—The Friday the thirteenth jinx was working against those who backed Mrs. A. B. Karkle's K. Dorko in the featured Melbourne Purse here this afternoon. After their selection had finished first by a length and a half under Apprentice Eddie Wielander, the stewards ordered him disqualified and placed fourth. While making his winning stretch charge on the outside, K. Dorko bore in and bothered the horses nearer the rail.

In the new placings, Mrs. J. B. Burnstein's Sam Houston, a $25.30 for $2 shot, was first. Circle M Ranch's Curious Roman, the choice, was second and Coldstream Stable's Albatross third. The latter and Sam Houston were victims of K. Dorko's interference while the trio was fighting for command. Sam Houston beat Curious Roman by two lengths, while Albatross trailed by another half length.

The event, for 3-year-olds in the $4000 selling plater division, was witnessed by a throng of 10,847. The time for the six furlongs of the headliner was 1:12 1-5.

Apprentice Wielander was exonerated of blame for the bearing-in antics of the disqualified colt.

Albatross, champion juvenile here a year ago but a failure since, again showed high early foot before faltering. He was joined by K. Dorko and Sam Houston a furlong from home and gave up without much of a battle while being bothered. Sam Houston showed improvement over recent form in coming from behind. Curious Roman began well but eased back and did not threaten seriously thereafter.

Chicago Hockey Players Train a Future Defense Star

What with women coming to the fore in every other field, thesee Blackhawk hockey stars have an eye to the future—the very far distant future, we hope. For here, Art Wiebe (left) and Earl Seibert, burly defensemen of the Chicago hockey club, take time between matches to teach Marilyn Wiebb, Art's 4-year-old daughter, the rudiments of skating

Southern Skiing Championship Set

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 13.—The second annual Southern Ski Championship Tournament will be held on the New Germany slope in Garrett County, February 21 and 22, according to Harry H. Muma and Henry C. Buckingham, district forester. The meet, sponsored by the Western Maryland Ski Club, is expected to draw as many entries as last year when there were over 100 contestants.

Although Penn State College has scheduled a ski meet for the same week-end, scores of enthusiasts of the sport from Baltimore and Washington are expected to attend the Garrett event.

One of the highlights of the meet will be the downhill race for experts, to be run Saturday on the precipitous Whisky Hollow Trail. This slope, 3300 feet long, has been described as one of the finest in the country.

Sunday's events will include a salom race for men novices, another for women and a 10-mile cross-country race will be open to all skiers. Last year's event won this area wide publicity with the Ski Annual carrying a lengthy report on the South's only ski meet.

Millsaps College Drops Football for Duration

Jackson, Miss., Feb. 13 (AP).—Dr. M. L. Smith, president of Millsaps College, announced last night that the board of trustees had voted to suspend the school's participation in intercollegiate football for the duration of the war.

All other intercollegiate athletic activities will be continued, Smith said. Millsaps plays in the Dixie Conference.

Selections at Hialeah

Dear Al:

The new road into the Bowie track from Defense Highway will be ready for opening day business and will do much to end a traffic bottle-neck that has been a sore spot with turf fans for years. The new parking space at Laurel did a fine job of giving motorists a break last fall. All we need now is another road into Marlboro. Narragansett Park is sending out publicity on the number of California horses it expects to draw. As far as I'm concerned I hope the West Coast horses don't come to Maryland. I want to see horses owned by nearby interests take down the majority of the Maryland purses. One thing is certain, men who have been racing their horses at Bowie, Laurel, Pimlico and Havre de Grace certainly deserve first consideration when it comes to stalls and from all I can gather that is what will happen. Alsab goes again at Hialeah today. The last time I saw the son of Good Goods he looked mighty thin. He didn't look like a horse that needed a race. There is a chance that he has been overworked. Alsab should win today, however, but I have my doubts about him going along at top shape all year unless he is allowed to put on some weight. The races out of the mile chute at Hialeah are jokes. In the first place, the start is behind the clubhouse and unseen by all but a handful of fans. Then again, the starting gate is slightly turned and this seems to favor the inside horses. Alsab, by the way, has the outside post, a fact that will not help his chances. But, as I said before, he should win today. Jockey Conn McCreary appears not to be in the best of shape. I saw one dispatch out of Hialeah that mentioned weakness. When McCreary is booting in top style, he is strong as a little bull. Perhaps he needs a rest. We will have to wait until April 1 to see action at Bowie but horse fans in the Washington area can see some excellent point-to-point racing at the Redland Hunt events scheduled for March 7. BILL.

First race—BIG TALK, one of several horses named after Art Brown, seems to have an edge on the good juveniles gathered for the day's opener. ALL GOOD and KOPLA to battle it out for the place position.

Second race—SENTINEL will like this 7-furlong route and promises to show a lot of speed. I'm going to string along. LAST CHANCE gets feather weight and is dangerous. INSCOLIAN for the minor money.

Third race—WAUGH POP finds conditions that suit in this distance affair and may take it all with a good price tag. BALLY BOY was a recent winner and is dangerous. TOPEE for the minor money.

Fourth race—ALSAB failed first out, but should make amends today. Unless the clockers are wrong, this good horse promises to jog with Eddie Arcaro in the saddle. INCOMING is tossed in this with a feather assignment and is a possible surprise. BRIGHT WILLIE for the show end.

Fifth race—SPEED TO SPARE has his speed as demonstrated in that recent victory. Should take the main money in this good field. DAILY DELIVERY is formidable, but could be overweighted. HAPPY LARK is a lightweight with a chance.

Sixth race—SWEET WILLOW meets her own sex in this 7-furlong sprint and figures to take it all. MOON MAIDEN is speedy, as shown here earlier in the week and deserves respect. The Woolford entry of PIG TAILS and SILVESTRA for a spot in the money circle.

Seventh race—BIG BEN has oodles of speed and the conditions suit his purposes. I believe he can down DE KALB. SHERIFF CULKIN probably will take part of the pay.

Eighth race—LAURANA LYONS likes the route and the turf course. I believe she can take it all. NAVARIN and HO DOWN to fill out the cash positions.

Best bet—BIG BEN.

Woodward Bows To Gaithersburg

Despite a 14-point scoring effort by Bill Noyes, Woodward Prep guard, the downtown five lost a 37-25 basketball judgment to Gaithersburg yesterday.

Gaithersburg presented a varied attack, featuring Bealle, Rice and Glover, the first of which led the winners' scoring with ten points.

Late Entries Accepted For Table Tennis Play

Post-Government Championship Meet Opens Today; Players Can Enter at Ice Palace

With last minute entries being received as late as 3 o'clock this afternoon for the first session and 7:30 tonight for the evening preliminaries, The Washington Post-Government Employes table tennis tournament at the Ice Palace is taking on record proportions.

With an entry list considerably above the hundred mark, Ice Palace court officials expect the last minute rush of late comers to cause it to jump above the total of last year when 172 squared off behind the green tables.

More and more fair paddlers are entering the event and the draw is expected to exceed the 24 of last year. Lou Fields, table tennis manager, again states that novices should not hold off due to their inexperience at tournament play as special draws will be held for those with no previous play in similar events. Being designed almost wholly for the novice, the experienced table tenniser has not been forgotten for a squad of seasoned players will fight it out among themselves for the handsome trophy delegated to that class.

By setting up the time of entering to 3 this afternoon and 7:30 tonight, Fields believes that scores of players will present the coupon—which is to be found elsewhere on this page—in person when signing up for the event. A number of assistants will aid in the registering of participants so as to preclude the necessity of waiting, as was experienced last year when the unlooked-for influx of entrants swamped the table tennis court officials.

The entry fee of 40 cents entitles players to sufficient practice time to put a keen edge on their game as well as continued play even though defeat is met in the opening rounds. Trophies will be given winners with medals for the runners-up.

It is important that players check the time most convenient for play when submitting the coupon on this page. The night shift apparently is the most popular one, but Fields states that the 3 o'clock shift is rapidly being filled. But regardless of total entries ample time and equipment is available even though the list passes the 200 mark.

Alsab Tries Again Today; Arcaro Is Up

By the United Press

Hialeah, Fla., Feb. 13.—Alsab tries again as a 3-year-old tomorrow with a new jockey and an impost two pounds lighter.

Albert Sabath's colt was an odds-on favorite tonight to redeem himself in the $1500 Biscayne Purse at Hialeah Park for the beating he took last Saturday when he ran sixth to American Wolf in the Bahamas Handicap—his 1942 debut.

Eddie Arcaro will ride the 2-year-old champion of 1941. Sabath said after last week's race that he felt Jockey Conn McCreary had not been strong enough to handle the colt which won 15 of his 22 starts last year. Alsab will carry top weight of 126 pounds.

Bright Willie, winner of the Hialeah Stakes this season, is the second favorite. His impost is 118 and he is quoted at 4 to 1. Other 3-year-olds in the field for the mile are Wood Robin, Sir War, Eternal Peace and Incoming. The race is another "prep" for the $25,000 Flamingo Stakes, Hialeah's Kentucky Derby preview, to be run February 28.

Brewer Five In Two Games With Sphas

The first of the home-and-home series between the Champion Philadelphia Sphas and the Washington Brewers in the American Professional Basketball League second half will take place tonight in the Quaker City.

Following tonight's game the Brewers and Sphas will clash tomorrow night at the Heurich gym, Twenty-sixth and D Streets Northwest.

There's plenty of rivalry smoked up between the District and Washington clubs, since the Sphas happened to be the team to knock Washington out of the running for the first half honors. And last week Wilmington, which meets the Trenton Tigers tonight, came along to remove the Brewers from the league lead in the scond half.

Of particular interest is the debut of Al Benson, former Jersey City Reds star, who will replace Herman Knuppel at center tonight.

There will be added interest in both Spha-Brewer games, inasmuch as Irving Rizzi, last season's Georgetown U. captain, and Bill Morganstine, star for two years at Temple, were college rivals. Morganstine signed up with the Sphas just the other day.

Fort Belvoir will play in a preliminary at 7:30 on the Sunday bill, with the main game going on at 9 o'clock.

Mary Fox Rolls 137 To Pace Pin League

A 137 game by Mary Fox, of Charles Grill, and a 362 set by Elizabeth Nash of Shah & Shah were the top scores in the Ladies' Independent League last night at Arcadia alley. The Fletcher's Cafe girls ran off with team highs after pinfalls of 555 and 1551. A 344 set by Catherine Lewis won a free ride in the Margaret Lynn tournament Sunday at Arcadia.

Miss Tainter Takes Title On 29th Hole

By the Associated Press

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 13.—Eighteen-year-old Georgia Tainter of Fargo, N. Dak., sank a spectacular 30-foot chip shot on the nineteenth hole today for a hard-earned one-up victory over Grace Amory of Palm Beach in the finals of the annual women's golf tournament here.

A gallery estimated at 2000, largest golf crowd in the history of this winter resort, saw the socially prominent Miss Amory come from behind to win the last two holes and square the match, only to lose on the first extra hole.

Miss Tainter's chip shot was the most sensational of a day of fine golf. It gave her a birdie 3 against a 4 for Miss Amory.

Each had 38-41—79 for the eighteen.

It was the third major winter tournament in two years in which Miss Amory's consistently accurate game was good enough to take her to the finals but not quite good enough to win.

She was runner-up here last year to Jean Bauer of Providence, R. I., and lost in the finals of the 1941 Biltmore to Mrs. Elizabeth Hicks Newell, who went on to win the National championship.

Montgomery Scores, 28-20, Over Friends

Richard Montgomery's basketball team closed fast yesterday to defeat Friends School, 28-20, on the winners' court. The Rockville five was behind until after the start of the fourth quarter, when Bobby Virtz and his mates began to roll.

Virtz, with ten points, topped Richard Montgomery's offense, while Bobby Duschmeyer with 11 points, was the game's leading scorer.

Friends led, 8-6, at the end of the first quarter, by 14-12 at the half. The score was tied, 18-18, going into the last period.

'Dark Horse' Takes Third League Game

Little Hoyas Clinch Catholic Prep Crown As Zone Defense Aids in Triumph

The longest shot in the Catholic Prep Basketball League reached the wire in front yesterday when Georgetown Prep, the dark horse of a circuit which includes Gonzaga and St. John's, whipped the Johnnies by 41-38 to clinch the 1942 flag.

Thus Orrel Mitchell, former Gonzaga coach, climaxed his first season with the Little Hoyas by sending them back to the cage heights they enjoyed a decade ago. Yesterday's was their third triumph in four league games, two of them over the Cadets.

Though the Johnnies were never ahead after the first period—once they trailed by 13 points—they were very much in the ball game at the end. After making up eight points of their nine-point deficit in the last three minutes, they missed a chance to tie when Chuck Dudley's foul shot rolled off the rim with 50 seconds left. John Showell later sewed up matters for the Little Hoyas with a snowbird.

Zone Defense Tough

St. John's owed its loss to a failure to sink the few setups it managed through Prep's zone defense. Dudley missed most of these, though he sank five of the seven charity tosses given him and finished with nine points. George Hughes had the same total for the losers and Sleepy Thompson one less.

Every Little Hoya starter helped in his team's point making, Joe McAndrews and John Showell accounting for ten each to lead. They were forced, however, to split honors for all-around play with their mates, Ray Schneider, Jim Kunkel and Jim O'Donnell.

Thief Grabs 500 Tickets; Goldie Happy

Promoter Goldie Ahearn was the victim of a sneak thief yesterday—but he hasn't called in the police, and won't.

While Goldie was telephoning from a downtown store some light fingered individual lifted 500 passes for his all star wrestling show at Uline's Arena Monday night.

"I am leffing," Goldie said last night. "It's like stealing your own watch, or apples from your grandmother's tree.

"I hope the t'ief shows up and brings all his friends. After he pays the servant's (service) charge and tax, 35 cents, ve make him velcome like a king already!"

Joe Heistand Takes Closing Shoot Honors

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla. Feb. 13.—Friday the 13th failed to dim the aim of Joe Heistand and the unerring accuracy of the "gentleman farmer," of Hillsboro, Ohio, enabled him to win the Sunshine City Handicap, feature of the final day's program of the Jungle Gun Club's fourteenth annual registered shoot.

Heistand, firing from 23 yards, as far away from the targets as they can get him, smashed 95 of the 100 targets.

At that, Heistand was only one target to the good when the scores were compiled. Four shooters broke 94 out of 100. They were Dr. J. D. McCullough, Aurora, Ill.; E. R. Pratte, Miami; E. J. Lisk, Matawan, N. J., and A. H. Fuller, Sturtevant, Wis.

Pratte and Lisk were the 21-yard leaders and Dr. McCullough and Fuller the 19-yard leaders. Mrs. Ike Andrews, Spartanburg, S. C., led from 17 yards with 90 out of 100.

In the three days of firing Heistand broke 480 out of 500 targets in both singles and doubles.

Hopewell Five 41-23 Victim Of G.W. High

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Feb. 13.—George Washington High School remained in the running for the central district title in the Virginia Class A Conference basketball race tonight by downing Hopewell High School's Blue Devils, 41-25.

Tomorrow night, the Alexandrians meet Thomas Jefferson, of Richmond, in another conference game.

Behind at the end of the first quarter, 7-3, the Presidents began to click mid-way the period and pulled into a 16-13 lead at half time. In the third period, the hosts boosted their margin to 28-17.

"Wrong Way" Basket

Hopewell got only four points in the third, and two of these were credited to Russell Hurick, of G. W., who became confused and dropped a neat goal into the Hopewell basket.

Capt. Thomas Bailey with 13 points featured for the Presidents.

Hank Greenberg Arrives at Tampa For 'Special Duty'

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 13.—Sergt. Hank Greenberg, erstwhile star of the Detroit American League baseball team, checked in at MacDill field here today for "special duties," the public relations office said tonight.

Greenberg, drafted last year, served in the infantry and was released because he was over 28. He reenlisted at Fort Dix, N. J., a short time ago for service in the Air Corps and came here from Bolling Field, Washington, D. C.

Greenberg's former teammates will soon be in spring training at nearby Lakeland.

Mount Rainier Boys, Girls Bow To Greenbelt

Greenbelt High School boy and girl basketball teams took the measure of Mount Rainier High yesterday at the latters' court, the boys taking a 28-19 triumph and the girls winning by 18-14.

Though it was doing quite well for itself at the time, Greenbelt's quintet enjoyed the aid of the opposition's Forward Schatz at the start of the third period. The latter got his goals mixed and sank a shot for the Green and White.

With Buck, Egli and Sommers working smoothly together, the invaders ran up a 13-6 margin at the half and were never seriously threatened.

Girls play was featured by the individual performance of Greenbelt's Helen Zoellner, who accounted for all but one of her team's points. The clever little shooter was the spark of an attack which overcome a 7-3 Mount Rainier lead at the half. Markwood tallied 12 of the losers' points.

Explorers, Cards Renew Ring Rivalry

The third renewal of the ring rivalry between Catholic and Columbus Universities will be staged tonight at the Brookland gym. From all indications the two teams are on a par and the bouts are likely to end in a 4-to-4 deadlock, but Columbus appears a shade better on performances this season.

The Explorers are fairly certain of winning three bouts. Team Capt. Charlie Cox, is expected to repeat his victory of last year in the 165-pound event, and Romeo Garza, an aggressive light heavyweight, has the edge on Francis Manning, the Catholic University standard bearer, a freshman who will be entering the squared circle for the Cardinals for the first time. Sam Tytelman, likewise, is favored over the other C. U. novice, Fred Randall, also a freshman.

On the other hand Catholic University can count on winning the heavyweight affair with "Sneeze" Ksycewski expected to defeat Al McAlear. However, the Columbus heavy has been coming along fast since he lost by decision to the formidable "Sneeze" last year, and may score an upset. And Ted Mandris will probably chalk up another point for the Cardinals in the 127-pound spot left vacant by Lou Taub, Explorer cocaptain who was inducted into the Army last week.

The other three bouts can go either way. In the bantamweight division, Jack Golumb of Columbus and Price Welch are evenly matched, as are Bernie Jackson of the Explorers and Catholic U.'s Capt. Huck Hughes in the 145-pound scrap. Bernie decisioned Hughes last year in a close bout.

In the junior middleweight go, the Cardinals' Buddy Lynagh is favored over Elmer Jacobsen. Frank Cuddy, who regularly fills this spot for Columbus will be out due to a head injury received earlier in the season.

Staunton Is Beaten By Richmond Frosh

Richmond, Va., Feb. 13 (AP).—Using every man on the squad, the University of Richmond freshman basketball team defeated the Staunton Military Academy quint, 48 to 28, on Millhiser Gymnasium today. It was the final game of the season for the Little Spiders.

Dale Whiteman paced Staunton with 12 points, while Lou Ciola and Tom Murphy topped the Spiders with 13 and 11 points, respectively.

Terp Cagers, Boxers In Twin Bill Tonight

The University of Maryland will present its last Saturday night winter sports double-header of the season tonight in Ritchie Coliseum with the basketball team host to West Virginia and the boxers meeting V. P. I.

The ball game will start promptly at 8 p. m. and the mitt match immediately after, about 9:30 p. m. The card was originally scheduled to be all-university night with a pageant between halves by members of the student body, but the program was curtailed when the war affected classes.

Four of the District college court teams will be active. George Washington University will go after Southern Conference victory No. 5 in Richmond, where Bill Reinhart's title contenders meet the lowly Richmond Spiders, losers four times in six league engagements. The Colonials, marked men now after the 69-18 conquest of the surprise Furman club, will be heavy favorites to climb a notch nearer a title playoff berth next month in Raleigh.

Columbus will take a one-day trip to New Jersey to meet a previous victim, Rider College. The Explorers won, 56-44, down here but expect considerable trouble on the Rider court.

Gallaudet will play at home against Shepherd State Teachers. The Blue will be out for revenge as the Shepherdstown lads handed them a 20-point shellacking last month on the latter's court.

West Virginia's Mountaineers will bring an eight-game winning streak into the Terp clash and it all started after they trimmed the Old Liners, 63-36, in a December clash in Cumberland. Wednesday's 57-40 rout of Army brought the winner's average to 54 points a game for the sason through a tough schdule.

The Virginia Poly sluggers bring an impressive dual match record against the Terps. They have not lost a conference bout in two years and this year only Virginia's unbeaten team holds a decision over the Blacksburgers.

Coach Bobby Goldstein will send Sophomore Alex Debenko into the 155-pound class bout in place of the injured Pat Quinn but otherwise the Terp lineup will be the same which defeated Catholic U. last week.

Here is the probable line-up:

Maryland.	Weight.	Va. Tech.
Joe Ciesla	120	Rbt. Copenhaver
Judson Lincoln	127	H. Wingfield or Louis Solomon
Tom Jones	135	Bobby Andrews
Hoisy Alperstein	145	Buddy Green

Jack Gilmore	165	Kent Belmore or Rolfe Robertson
Herb Gunther	175	Diller Harding

Greenskeepers End National Meeting, Elect New Officers

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 13.—The National Greenkeepers Superintendents Association wound up their convention today by reelecting Harold Stodola, Keller Park Golf Club, St. Paul, Minn., president. Stodola, a former University of Minnesota golf champion, is one of the best known golf maintenance experts.

Other officers include Marshall E. Farnham, Philadelphia Country Club, Philadelphia Pa., vice president. Directors of the association are James Haines, Denver Country Club, Denver, Colo.; Lawrence Huber, Wyandot Country Club, Columbus, Ohio, and Chester Mendenhall, Mission Hills Country Club, Kansas City, Mo.

The greenkeepers also chose A. L. Brandon, St. Charles, Ill. as permanent executive secretary on a full-time basis.

W.-L. High Beaten, 43-26

Howard Jones, center of Thomas Jefferson High's basketball team, stood under the basket and pivoted them in last night in Arlington as the Richmonders stopped Washington-Lee High, 43 to 26, in a Class A Virginia Conference game.

Jones scored 20 points, which kept the Richmond team on top and undefeated in the league.

John Grinnell, All-Metropolitan football player and center of the Washington suburban outfit, was high for the losers with eight counters.

Washington-Lee is still on top of the averages. The county outfit has won 11 and lost 7 this season.

Harrison Bags A 67 to Pace Texas Open

By the Associated Press

San Antonio, Feb. 13.—Drawlin' E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, the Arkansas slow-poke, mused on the first tee today that he was out to regain the Texas Open title he won in 1939 and promptly put wisdom in those words with a first round, four-under par 67 that led the field.

On bumpy greens that had most of the players nervous even from 18 inches, Harrison made them look like just another place to putt as he ran down six birdies on his round of 33-34.

The transplanted Arkansan, now of Chicago, was pursued by three obscure but solid young professionals—Chick Harbert, Errie Ball and Jack Grout, bunched at 68.

Cooper, Mangrum At 69

The old guard had a couple more representatives hanging on their heels, however, Light Horse Harry Cooper, of Minneapolis and Lloyd Mangrum, of Chicago pulling in with 69's.

Harbert, young Battle Creek, Mich., professional who has won only the Beaumont Open since turning pro little more than a year ago, played a mechanically perfect round of 15 pars and three birdies for his 68.

Ball, from Charlottesville, Va., who has been making the winter tour for several seasons without notable success, got 13 pars, 4 birdies and a bogie.

Grout, of West Pittson, Pa., had the chance of the day and couldn't hold on at the finish. He was ripping the place open through the fifteenth hole, having carded five birdies, but he picked up bogies at the sixteenth and eighteenth holes for a 34-34 round.

Ben Hogan Scores a 70

Two other youngsters were in the 70 bracket along with Ben Hogan. Tod Menefee, hometown favorite, had his 135 pounds meeting every shot correctly as he molded a 36, 34, 70, while Joe Brown, of Des Moines, was 35, 35, 70. Hogan sliced a stroke from par on the last nine to go with his opening 36.

Most of the par cracking went unnoticed for a terrific crowd of an estimated 8000 scrambled at the heels of a foresome that included Bob Hope and Bing Crosby who packed them in for the Red Cross.

Crooner Crosby was feeling his sticks today and treated the crowd to 41-36—77, but Hope wasn't happy with his 41-40—81. Playing with them were Smiling Jim Demaret and Lord Byron Nelson. Each carded a 74.

War Beats Standards Despite Barnwell's Effort

War Department Res. defeated Bureau of Standards, 36-29, War Department Fac. beat Maritime, 35-21, and A. G. O. whipped Wyoming, 36-22, last night in D. C. Recreation Department Basketball League games.

Highest scorer in the three games was Barnwell, Standards forward, who dumped in 17 points, or more than half his team's total, in a losing effort. Olstead, with 13, led War Department Res. Bogan's 16 points topped the attack of War Department Fac., while Schacherbauer's 14 points led A. G. O.

'Cookie' Lavagetto, a Departed Dodger, Speaks Up—Picks Cards to Win Pennant

Ducky Medwick Won't Kick When MacPhail Slices His Salary

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Feb. 13.—Even though Larry MacPhail expects to see Dolph Camilli, Dixie Walker, Joe Medwick and the other unsigned Brooklyn Dodgers personally next week to discuss salary terms, the club had to mail contracts today to their last known addresses . . . Under baseball law, if a major league club doesn't mail a contract to a player by February 15 the player automatically becomes a free agent . . . Medwick is expecting to take a cut from the $20,000 salary he has drawn in recent years . . . He offered to let MacPhail revise his contract downward last summer, but Larry refused with the comment that Medwick was trying $20,000 worth, even if he wasn't producing that high . . . Muscles had an off year, but even so batted .318 and did better in the field then he is accustomed.

Gene Desautels, the red-head who figures to be Cleveland's regular catcher now that Rollie Hemsley has been traded to Cincinnati, has rejected the first contract offered him by the Indians . . . says he isn't a holdout—just wants more money . . . which is like the story in the hometown paper of the rookie ball player early this week; it said the youth was cinch to be a regular if he learned to hit big league pitching . . . the Dodgers have decided to split their squad for a week in March and fill some exhibition dates with a combination Brooklyn-Montreal team . . . Mrs. John McGraw says next to Christie Mathewson, Mel Ott was her husband's favorite ball player . . . now that Cookie Lavagetto has forsaken the Dodgers for the Naval Air Service he says the St. Louis Cardinals look like the team that ought to win the National League pennant this year.

Vince DiMaggio gives Paul Waner credit for improving his (Vince's) hitting . . . The Washington Nationals' training camp roster arrived today with old Ossie Bluege still listed as a coach . . . Maybe Clark Griffith was just kidding about getting him into shape for playing . . . The Nationals list four coaches to lead the major leagues in this department . . . Connie Mack is offering attendance bonuses to some of his high salaried players to get them into line and already has signed Jack Knott on that basis . . . After Lefty Gomez signed his Yankee contract yesterday for the thirteenth season he said maybe he should have waited till today, Friday the 13th . . . "Maybe that would be an omen,' he cracked, "or ominous."

Fleming Made A Governor of N.Y. Exchange

Robert V. Fleming, president and chairman of the board of the Riggs National Bank, has been elected to the governing board of the New York Stock Exchange, it was announced last night.

MR. FLEMING

Mr. Fleming, a former president of the American Bankers Association, will serve as one of the "public governors," according to Emil Schram, Big Board president.

Also elected to the governing board was John Q. Adams, a director of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago.

Election of Fleming and Adams fills vacancies which have existed in the board of governors since the resignations of Curtis E. Calder and Roswell Magill.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Union Central Life Insurance

The Union Central Life Insurance Co. reported assets increased $22,323,259 in 1941 and now amount to $436,002,971.39.

Business in force increased $17,368,467 and now totals $1,343,776,364. Of this total $1,137,919,897 is life insurance (an increase of $7,891,204 for the year) and $205,856,467 is annuities (an increase of $9,477,263).

Cash Circulation Gains

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that cash money in circulation continued a sharp climb to new record levels last week.

The bank said coin and currency in circulation increased 88 million dollars in the week ended February 11. In the preceding week the increase was 134 million dollars.

On February 11 the amount of cash in circulation reached a new high of $11,319,000,000. Officials said the recent increases probably were due to "hoarding" by panicky individuals.

The amount of hoarding, however, did not appear important in view of the fact that the board estimated that the idle money in banks—excess reserves in addition to the large proportion of deposits which banks must keep on hand—totaled $3,360,000,000 on February 11 and was 30 million dollars higher than in the preceding week.

Confectionery Sales Gain 20% in Year

By the Associated Press

Manufacturers of confectionery and chocolate products report that 1941 sales were 20 per cent larger than in the previous year, the Commerce Department says.

December sales, based on figures from more than 100 manufacturers, amounted to $32,194,000 and were 26 per cent greater than in the same 1940 month.

Savings-Loan Assets At Seven-Year Peak

Chicago, Feb. 13 (AP).—The United States Savings and Loan League announced today that aggregate resources of the Nation's savings, building and loan associations was six billion dollars at the close of business last year, the highest in seven years.

This compares with $5,800,000,000 in 1940 and $6,400,000,000 in 1934. The all-time high was $8,800,000,000 at the close of business in 1930.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 13 (AP).—After an early price dip had absorbed a holiday accumulation of selling orders, mostly hedges, the grain market recovered balance today and pushed upward cautiously under the leadership of rye and soybeans.

Firmness of securities, improved shipping demand for corn and oats to move east and from Chicago, were strengthening factors. Much trade interest also centered in the growing controversy in Washington over the Government's policy of selling surplus wheat and corn at prices below parity.

Rye was up a cent, soybeans 2 cents and wheat, corn and oats fractions at best levels of the day. Late profit taking and hedging reduced these gains slightly, but wheat closed unchanged to ⅝-cent higher compared with Wednesday, May, 1.29¼; July, 1.30⅝@1.30¾; corn, ⅛ to ¾ up; May, 87@88⅜; July, 88⅜; oats, ⅛ to ½ up; soybeans, ⅜ to 1¾ higher; rye, ⅝ to ⅞ up. Suggestion: Reverse Installment Sales; Pay Now and Receive Autos After War

The franchise in business depends on a continuous influx of receipts with which to met expenditures. Accordingly, in 1942, with wartime priorities necessarily killing off some products, the businessman must reorient himself, and develop an emergency modus operandi.

He must, first of all, be clear in his own mind that he can't make a living by concentrating on the products which have disappeared from his shelves. Instead of staying in the customary groove, it behooves him to concentrate on the items and materials that are still available.

Abnormal conditions call for radical revision of sales and merchandising strategy.

From a national viewpoint, the need it to divert civilian purchasing power away from scarce and critical materials and into substitute products which are still abundantly available.

This entails a realistic capacity to look at the doughnut and to stop concentrating on the hole.

When a business is oversold, it takes genuine capacity to know how to function intelligently. The executive who unimaginatively decides to stop advertising because his plant is thoroughly occupied is taking a static view of the changing world in which he lives.

The automobile industry, which is now 100 per cent in khaki, has the management problem of salvaging its rich intangible assets of going concern value and product acceptance by the public.

In Great Britain, motor manufacturers have taken precautions to keep their name before the public even though for the duration they had nothing to sell to civilians.

Yankee ingenuity should be mobilized to meet the current subtle economic problem. The industry, which taught the public how to buy cars on the installment plan out of current earnings, should give consideration to reversing the technique.

It should create a system which will enable well-paid industrial workers and others to save during the armament boom enough for a new car to be delivered after victory has been attained.

The machinery of installment sales financing should be reversed during the war crisis to help civilians to save enough out of current earnings to have a claim on a post-war product which is now unattainable.

Experience shows that it is difficult for the average person to save without compulsion and without a systematic plan.

On the partial payment plan, workers and others can buy a certificate for post-war delivery of a motor car or other durable goods to be delivered at prevailing post-war cash prices.

The recipient companies can put the funds in escrow and can kill two birds with one stone by investing such earmarked funds in United States Government obligations, thus financing Uncle Sam's efforts to get the weapons needed to win the war.

Such consumer savings schemes can supplement payroll deduction plans whereby workers allocate part of their weekly pay for the purchase of defense savings bonds.

Such foresight will store up buying power for the post-war economic readjustment period, on the one hand, and will currently prevent consumers from competing with the Government for products.

And from the business standpoint it will enable companies to retain their valuable asset of customer loyalty even during the war period when the normal flow of many products has been interrupted.

Year's Profits Of 250 Firms Climb 21.8%

New York, Feb. 13 (AP)—Despite huge taxes, wage increases, higher raw material costs and price ceilings, American business appears to have rolled up greater profits in 1941 than in 1940.

An Associated Press compilation today disclosed that net income of the first 250 companies to report for 1941 was 21.8 percent greater than the preceding year. Profits of the group totaled $1,465,997,000 compared with $1,203,289,000 in 1940.

Much of the rise disclosed by the compilation, however, was attributable to the railroads, which report earlier than most other corporations and experienced big increases in income.

Gains in most other industries were more moderate, with higher costs and taxes skimming off by far the greater part of the profits normally expected from such a high level of industrial production.

Utilities' Nets Dip

Among public utilities and tobacco companies, reports so far received indicated that earnings of some actually tilted downward.

The railroads, relatively immune from excess profits taxes because of huge capital investments, were far and away the leaders of the profit parade. Thirty-nine carriers reported 1941 net income of 318,904,000, more than double the $154,863,000 earned by the same roads in 1940.

Drought, taxes, and higher coal prices, however, boosted public utility operating costs sharply, more than offsetting a big increase in consumption of electric power. Net profits of 28 utilities declined 7.6 per cent, totaling $172,929,000 compared with $187,085,000 in 1940.

Higher taxes and rising tobacco prices cut earnings of eight tobacco manufacturers to $28,015,000 from $31,679,000 in 1940.

Steel Profits Up 10 Percent

Twenty-two steel companies increased profits almost 10 percent, earning $264,200,000 compared with $240,926,000 a year earlier.

Net income of other industrial groups included in the compilation compared as follows:

Gas Firms Advised To Keep Advertising

Atlanta, Feb. 13 (AP).—The most serious mistake the gas industry could make would be to curtail or eliminate newspaper advertising, says President Albert S. Johnson of the Southern Union Gas System, Dallas, Tex.

Johnson, who spoke at the Southern Gas Association convention here recently, said he had two reasons for this belief, the first being that "people generally need to be constantly reminded of the economy, convenience and cleanliness of our fuel . . ."

The second, said Johnson, is that "newspapers more than ever need the support of our advertising program. Their advertising revenue is dropping off sharply, and I think we will be well advised to do whatever we can to keep the press from being seriously crippled . . ."

Export Rail Loadings Continue Increase

There were 63,073 cars of export freight other than grain or coal unloaded at Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific ports in January, the Association of American Railroads reported.

This compared with 61,783 cars in December and 45,943 in January, 1941.

Steel Shipments Set January High

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Shipments of finished steel products by subsidiaries of United States Steel Corporation in January amounted to 1,738,893 net tons, the highest for that month in the history of the corporation, it was announced.

These shipments compared with 1,846,036 net tons in December and 1,682,454 in January, 1941. Shipments in January, 1940, were 1,145,592 and in 1939 amounted to 870,866 net tons.

Public Works Swell Month's Building Total

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 13.—The F. W. Dodge Corporation reported today building and engineering contracts awarded in 27 Eastern States in January totaled $316,846,000, compared with $305,204,000 in January of 1941.

The gain in dollar volume was accounted for chiefly by a 21 per cent jump in public works and utilities construction, the statistical service's report showed.

Residential building was down 8 per cent from the 1941 month, while non-residential building rose 4 per cent.

The decrease in new residential building exclusive of hotel, barracks and dormitory projects was 17 per cent in dollar volume under the 1941 period, although the number of new family dwelling units contracted for was less than 2 per cent lower. This reflected a shift to low-cost housing units, the report said.

Thomas S. Holden, president of the company, said contract volume was considerably behind the $500,000,000 monthly average for 1941 and well under the December total.

"Apparently this is entirely due to the fact that this year's big war construction program has as yet been only partially scheduled by the War Production Board," Holden commented.

"It is generally anticipated that this year's total construction volume will approximate that of 1941, the post-depression record year."

Cleveland Survey Shows Few Plants Work at Capacity

Cleveland, Feb. 13 (AP).—Only 14 of 165 small industries surveyed here are working at capacity on war orders.

This was disclosed today by the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce on the basis of answers to questionnaires sent to 550 small plants. Of 261 replying, 165 reported production of parts and materials under war subcontracts. Only 27 said they were operating at capacity, but 13 of these are not engaged wholly in war work.

The 14 industries working at capacity on war orders only average 18 hours daily, 6.1 days a week. Three plants at 97 per cent of capacity in war production are working 11.3 hours a day, 5.3 days a week, the chamber reported.

Of the 165 firms surveyed, 114 reported more than 50 per cent of production for war.

Motorists Again To Get Bulk Oil

Cleveland, Feb. 13 (AP).—The motorist who has been buying his oil in individual cans soon is apt to be getting it from a pump.

At least two major concerns indicated today they would revert to the old-fashioned bulk handling of oil as a result of the War Production Board's order prohibiting use of tin for oil containers after March 1.

These companies have notified dealers that as soon as the present canned supply is exhausted, delivery will be made in drums from which oil will be pumped into measures. It was expected other concerns would follow the plan.

Citrus Production Climbs in Season

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department reported recently that the total production of oranges for the current 1941-42 marketing season is estimated at 84,414,000 boxes, compared with 84,726,000 boxes a month ago, 84,032,000 the previous season, 75,667,000 two years ago and 60,283,000, the average of the ten previous seasons.

Production of grapefruit is indicated as 41,440,000 boxes, compared with 41,440,000 a month ago, 43,033,000 the previous season, 35,192,000 two years ago, and 24,383,000 the average of the ten previous seasons.

Stock Leaders Score Moderate Advance In Face of Generally Bearish War News

New York, Feb. 13.—Generally bearish war news failed to disturb the stock market unduly today and many leaders managed to score modest advances.

The list was a bit ragged in the early proceedings but enough bidding came in later to lift selected steels, rails and assorted industrials fractions. A little more support was evident in the final hour and, while numerous issues were a shade behind at the close, favorites emerged with gains of fractions to around a point.

Although buying was exceptionally light, liquidation was equally negligible and transfers for the day amounted to only 319,320 shares, smallest turnover for a 5-hour stretch since last June 30. They compared with 415,440 in the preholiday session. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .1 of a point at 36.8, first upturn in this barometer since February 4. Of 688 issues traded, 253 were up, 206 down and 229 unchanged.

The fact real selling failed to develop on the Singapore disaster, break-through of the Nazi battle fleet in the English Channel and the more critical position of MacArthur in the Philippines apparently brought in bidders who theorized the pessimistic headlines had been pretty well discounted. Another batch of good earnings summaries also was helpful in allaying tax worries to some extent.

Steels improved in the face of bigger wage demands and rising costs. Rails ignored a more than seasonal decline in last week's freight loadings as a nearby freight rate boost was looked for. Reports gasoline rationing was in the offing kept oils in the background.

Better share performers included United States Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Santa Fe, Atlantic Coast Line, Great Northern, Southern Pacific, Boeing, Douglas Aircraft, Patino Mines, American Smelting, Union Carbide, Dupont and Owens-Illinois.

Allied Chemical dipped to a new 1941-42 low but ultimately came back. In arrears were American Telephone, Texas Co., Sears Roebuck, Caterpillar Tractor, Eastman Kodak, Kennecott and American Can.

Bonds steadied with stocks, although the move here was selective. Most commodities advanced after initial hesitancy. At Chicago wheat was unchanged to up ⅜ of a cent a bushel, corn ahead ⅛ to ⅝ and hogs 10 to 15 cents higher at a 4-year top. Cotton ended with gains of 60 to 95 cents a bale.

In the curb forward leanings were shown by American Cyanamid, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Electric Bond & Share, Singer Manufacturing, Republic Aviation and New Jersey Zinc. Food shipyards was off 3½ on negligible volume. Dealings here approximated 76,000 shares versus 55,000 Wednesday.

Your Federal Income Tax

No. 41—Auto Deductions

With the number of automobile owners registering in the millions, the question of deductions for the cost of operation and maintenance of a motorcar frequently arises. The purchase price of an automobile, whether it is to be used for business or pleasure, cannot be deducted from gross income. If used for business, it is a capital expenditure; if used for pleasure, it is a personal expenditure—both deductions being expressly prohibited by the income tax law.

Several deductions, however, are allowable in connection with the cost of operation of an automobile used either for business or pleasure. If used exclusively for business, deductions may be taken for the cost of gasoline, oil, repairs, garage rent, amounts paid for insurance, and other necessary operation and upkeep expenses, as well as damages paid for injury to another while the car was being used for business purposes and losses sustained by reason of damage to the car while being used for such purposes, provided such damages and losses are not covered by insurance or otherwise. Depreciation based on the cost of the car and its estimated useful life also is deductible.

Other deductible items, irrespective of whether the car is used for business or pleasure, are sums paid during the taxable year for personal property taxes and municipal taxes, interest on money borrowed for the purchase of a car, and losses by fire or storm or theft, to the extent not compensated for by insurance or otherwise.

A loss occasioned by damage to an automobile maintained for pleasure, where such damage results from the faulty driving of the taxpayer or other person operating the automobile, but is not due to the willful act or negligence of the taxpayer, is a deductible loss in the computation of net income. If damage to a taxpayer's automobile results from the faulty driving of the operator of an automobile with which the automobile of the taxpayer collides, the loss occasioned to the taxpayer by such damage is likewise deductible.

Fees paid for automobile inspection and automobile title registration of automobiles used for pleasure are not ordinarily allowable deductions.

Kanzler Names Two More Aides

Detroit, Feb. 13 (AP).—Earnest C. Kanzler, chief of the War Production Board's automotive branch, appointed William C. Klann, of Detroit, and E. C. Brandt, of Pittsburgh, to his staff.

Klann, who spent 32 years in the employ of various automotive manufacturers and has been with the Federal Security Administration since 1940, will supervise conversion to war production and will expedite procurement of contracts.

Brandt, for 37 years with Westinghouse Electric Manufacturing Co., has been technical consultant of the machine tool and equipment division of the WPB in Washington. He will serve Kanzler's organization in a similar capacity.

Roy White to Head B. & R. & P. Railway

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 13 (AP).—Roy B. White, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., was elected chairman of the board of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh Railway Co. at a directors meting.

White succeeds Daniel Willard, who declined reelection. White succeeded Willard as president of Baltimore & Ohio last June.

Retail Buying In Week Shows Slower Pace

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 13.—Buying in retail stores at key cities and trading centers this week averaged 15 to 20 per cent above last year for the country as a whole, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

The pace was not as fast as in the preceding week, but, the credit agency reminded, sales in January were the biggest for any January on record, largely as a result of "stock up" purchasing by consumers fearing shortages of certain types of goods later on.

Contributing to slower store sales were unfavorable weather conditions in many parts of the Nation, including floods on the West Coast, out-of-season tornadoes in the South, and abnormal warmth over most of the country.

Demand remained exceptionally strong in ready-to-wear lines. Yard goods sales, the agency said, "reached record volume as strong demand spread from silks and woolens into all types of fabrics." Home sewing essentials were "best sellers" in many stores. Stores featuring furniture sales reported such business "only fair."

"Stock up" purchasing was reported declining in hosiery, footwear, corsets, rubber goods and foods.

U. S. Food Stocks Heavier, Excepting Meats and Lard

By the Associated Press

Reflecting heavy demands of consumers and large Government purchases for Great Britain, cold storage stocks of meats and lard on February 1 were smaller than a year ago.

The Agriculture Department, reporting this yesterday, said that stocks of most other perishable commodities, however, were large.

Stocks of all meats totaled 871,897,000 pounds, compared with 951,531,000 a year ago. Beef supplies were larger, but pork stocks were considerably smaller. Lard stocks totaled 201,011,000 pounds compared with 299,644,000 a year ago.

Stocks of other commodities on February 1 this year and last, respectively, included:

Listen! with Glynn

This is the night that "This Is War!", the new radio series designed to awaken Americans to the significance of the war effort, makes its debut over C. B. S. and the three other major networks.

You'll be hearing it from now on every Saturday, night from 7 to 7:30 over WJSV and the other network stations in Washington.

Robert Montgomery, the actor who forwent the lucrative purlieus of Hollywood to take up duties as a lieutenant in the United States Naval Reserve, is to serve as narrator on the first program, which will boast, as those which follow, an imposing array of radio, stage and screen stars.

The script will be written and directed by Norman Corwin, the brilliant young C. B. S. author and director whose dramatic works you've been hearing in "Columbia Workshop" these past few years. On successive weeks, the scripts will be contributed by America's most famous authors, with Corwin remaining as the general director.

Lyn Murray, the C. B. S. musical director, will compose and conduct instrumental and choral parts. He will be one of several distinguished musicians who will take care of the musical end of the thing as the series continues.

Archibald MacLeish, the noted poet, who presently is head of the Office of Facts and Figures, information center for the United States Government to the people, is to be a guest on tonight's program, bringing a special message to the Nation from President Roosevelt.

The Post Radio Highlights

2 p. m., WMAL—"Tannhauser" from the Metropolitan Opera: Lauritz Melchoir, Astrid Varnay, Kerstin Thorborg, Herbert Janssen, Alexander Kipnis and John Carter. Erich Leinsdorf conducts. Intermission Quiz with Sir Ernest MacMillan, Olin Downes, Sigmund Speth and Quizzer Robert Lawrence. Music in Toronto with Morris Markey.

4:30, WRC—Private Flying Fields and their role in the war: Air Youth for Defense.

5, WJSV—"Valley Forge—Impressions of the Spot Today," a new work by Boris Koutzen, played by the Cleveland Orchestra under Dr. Artur Rodzinski. Hour opens with Chaikovski's Fifth Symphony.

7, ON ALL STATIONS—This Is War! The new four-network series on America at War commences with a message from President Roosevelt read by OFF's Archibald MacLeish. Lieut. Robert Montgomery is narrator. This first in the series is written by Norman Corwin, who supervises the entire group. The central theme depicts the passion of an aroused democracy and its citizens.

8:30, WOL—Victor Herbert's not-so-well-known "Algeria" is adapted for the Chicago operetta group, with Marion Claire and Jan Peerce in the leading roles. Miss Claire also sings AP Kent Cooper's new "Sunset."

9, WMAL—"Lincoln and the Republican Party:" Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., chairman of the Republican National Committee.

10:50, WOL—America Preferred: Contralto Karin Branzell of the Metropolitan sings "Dido's Lament" from Henry Purcell's "Dido and Aeneas;" "When I Bring You Colored Toys" by John Alden Carpenter, and three Swedish folk songs.

Contract Bridge

All bridge players are acquainted with bidding fiascos, such as the one reported by S. M., and even the champions run into trouble every now and then. On today's hand, played recently at the Cavendish Club and picked up by A. M. Sobel, tournament director, three pairs doubled a lay-down small-slam contract although the field was made up of some of the country's finest players.

It was a seven-table duplicate game and Robert McPherran and John R. Crawford were the only North-South players to reach the correct contract of six spades, which is lay down, and to play it undoubled. Their adversaries were George Tilton and B. Jay Becker.

Two other North-South pairs played the hand at six spades, redoubled, and one other at six spades, doubled. Two East-West teams were allowed to stop at six clubs, doubled, losing 800 points, and one North-South pair managed to bid as high as three spades for 170 points and a zero score.

John Crawford remarked at the end of the hand that it was the one and only time that he had doubled Becker, an ultraconservative bidder, and knew that he held more trumps.

Catholic Men Wait Annual Communion

More than 800 Catholic men are expected to attend the annual communion breakfast and mass of the Washington Laymen's Retreat League here tomorrow.

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, will celebrate the mass and deliver the sermon at 8 a. m. at St. Matthew's Cathedral. The breakfast will follow at the Mayflower Hotel.

Guard to Take Over at New Armory Today

The District of Columbia National Guard, without its own home for 80 years, will finish moving into its new $2,750,000 armory at 2101 East Capitol Street today, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Guard commander, said yesterday.

Symbolic of its final transfer to its spacious new quarters will be the tearing down of the sign marking the old National Hotel at Sixth and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest as National Guard Headquarters. This building, which has housed the Guard for 10 years, is now being used as a civilian defense registry.

The armory is virtually complete, Gen. Cox said, with quarters for the 260th Coast Artillery to be finished next month. "The structure will be dedicated in the near future, he said, but all furniture is already moved out of the old quarters.

Portions Now Occupied

About 1500 employes of the War Department are already working in parts of the building planned for actual guard units, now in the field with the Regular Army, General Cox said. A portion of the large drill hall is being used by a Navy camouflage school, with other portions of the drill hall and the basement used for storage purposes. Offices moved into the building include the judge advocate general's office and the National Guard Bureau of the War Department.

The sign will not be scrapped, but will be sent to the Guard's Camp Sims in Anacostia.

Cox said the armory is one of the finest in the country, possessing an unusually large drill hall, large quarters in the basement to store vehicles and what is probably the only indoor 100-yard rifle range in the country.

Pillar to Post

Recalling that the last permanent armory possessed by the Guard was built in 1859 and converted into a hospital after the Civil War started in 1861, he said, "The Guard has been homeless and kicked about from pillar to post for more than 80 years."

Cox is more optimistic about the outcome this time, feeling sure that the Guard will get the armory when it's all over.

53 Red Cross Class Members Graduated

Fifty-three persons were graduated in a Red Cross first-aid course at ceremonies of the Randle Highlands civilian defense area last night in St. Francis School, Twenty-seventh Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast.

The 53, all members of the area's civilian defense setup, have been taking the course for the past three weeks.

Civil Air Squadron To Take First Flight

The Congressional Squadron of the Civil Air Patrol will have its first actual flight in formation at the Congressional Airport today and tomorrow at 2 p.m. Formation flights consisting of three planes each are to be led by Flight Leader Chick Renn, a pilot for the Pennsylvania Central Airlines. The first flight, which has already been selected, consists of three 1941 Taloreraft owned by Dr. R. K. Thompson, squadron commander, 4843 Woodway Lane; Robert C. Blatt, squadron adjutant, Bradley Boulevard, Bethesda, Md., and Mary Trottman, 6621 Strathmore Street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Fliers in the patrol are being given military instruction by Capt. A. Barnes, who is on duty in the War Department. Forty-five of the 71 fliers enrolled already have either private pilots' licenses or better.

Women's Night Class In Red Cross Offered

Miss Eleanor Bosserman is giving Red Cross instruction at the night class of the Women's Defense Training School at 1229 Connecticut Avenue. Samuel Power, jr., has been appointed mechanics instructor. Morning classes are held at the Dorchester House, 2480 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Police Sergeant To Address Citizens

Sergt. B. F. McAllister, of the Fifth Police Precinct, will address a meeting of citizens of the Kingman Park area at 8 o'clock tonight in the Pilgrim African Methodist Episcopal Church at Seventeenth and Rosedale Streets Northeast.

Raid Precaution, Defense Data Now Available

A special collection of material relating to air-raid precautions and civilian defense is now available for public use at the Library of Congress, Archibald MacLeish, librarian, announced yesterday.

This new collection includes more than 500 volumes, pamphlets and photostats and will be added to and kept up to date, MacLeish said. It is located in the southwest alcove of the Thomas Jefferson room in the Annex Building.

Besides special handbooks and course outlines concerned with air-raid warnings and blackouts, the collection contains material dealing with the combat of fire and incendiary bombs and gases, emergency police and fire warden services, first aid, air-raid shelters and the protection and maintenance of buildings and utilities.

Camalier Will Speak At Defense Area Opening

Renah Camalier, counsel for the Senate District Committee, will speak at a meeting tonight marking the formal opening of headquarters of the Arkansas defense area.

All five of the organized units—air-raid wardens, first-aid, emergency housing, feeding and litter bearers—will take part in the program, scheduled for 8 o'clock in Roosevelt High School, Thirteenth and Upshur Streets Northwest. The Fort Stevens American Legion Post will also have part in the program.

Playgrounds Division At New Location

The Community Center and Playgrounds Division is now located at 3149 Sixteenth Street Northwest, new temporary headquarters since the fire at Russell School. Persons wishing to volunteer for recreational service are asked by the Civilian Defense Volunteer Office to apply at this office. The telephone is ADams 2050.

Predictions that all production of civilian radio sets will be halted by April 22 were heard yesterday after the War Production Board served an ultimatum giving the industry four months to convert to armament manufacture or have its equipment and labor commandeered by the Government.

One spokesman for the Radio Manufacturers Association promptly declared that the quick conversion could be achieved only if the Government expedited the granting of war orders to the industry.

Manufacturers' representatives received the ultimatum from R. R. Guthrie, assistant chief of the WPB bureau of industry operations, and were told at the same time that board orders finally halting civilian output were being drafted, with April 22 tentatively set as the shutdown deadline. Officials said there was some chance the date might be advanced, but little possibility that it would be postponed.

Employes 50,000 Workers

At present the 200 million dollar radio equipment industry is operating under orders curtailing its civilian output about 40 per cent below 1941 production. It employs more than 50,000 workers and faces the prospect of taking on an arms program of some two billion dollars.

Guthrie told the industry that its conversion must be accomplished as rapidly as is technically possible; if, he said, some companies find they cannot make military radio and detection devices or similar equipment, the Government will require that they produce some other items essential in the war econmy.

"If, three or four months from now, conversion to war products is still not accomplished," Guthrie declared, "it will be impossible to assume any longer that some kind of conversion of the type of organization of plant, equipment, labor and management which constitutes a radio factory is feasible.

Great Cost to Nation

"It would be a frightful loss, a great cost to the Nation, if this were to happen, because we should then have to take steps to break down the organization of the unconverted plants, and shift their labor and equipment to other parts of the economy where they could be mobilized for war production."

Under the conversion program, it was understood, the industry will be permitted to continue production of a certain amount of repair and replacement parts and tubes for existing sets.
